Vinson has already indicated that he intended to keep his top OWMR personnel. Eventually treasury officials look for a further consolidation of some of the independent fiscal agencies into the treasury.

PLENTY POINTS:
But Still In

Eighty-five points doesn't necessarily mean immediate release from the army, as all soldiers know. The trouble is, their families don't realize the catch. Thousands of men who have served long and valiantly are classed as "essential" and are being held indefinitely. In many cases they are having a hard time explaining to their wives just why they aren't coming home soon.

One captain stationed in Germany with an occupation unit has 127 points. His wife is so sure that he could return to the states if he wanted to that she is threatening divorce. She thinks that he wants to stay because he has fallen for some German woman. Chaplains report that dozens of such cases reach them every week. Morale is suffering seriously.

CHARTER:
Moves Along

The United Nations charter, meeting with almost no opposition before the senate foreign relations committee, went to the senate for what is said to be certain acceptance without modifications. The committee ended its sessions by a parade of supporters of the charter, after listening to a few individual outspoken opponents.

Final witnesses before the committee included Philip Murray, president of the CIO and William G. Carr, president of the National Education association as well as Norman Thomas, Socialist party leader.

The speed with which the charter has been handled indicates that the United States will become the first nation to officially approve the charter or to pass on it in any form.

NEW WAC CHIEF:
Hobby Resigns

Col. Westray Battle Boyce has been named director of the women's army corps, following resignation of Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, who was the first head and organizer of the service.

Colonel Boyce was employed for eight years in federal agencies in Washington before she joined the WACs. She served as a company officer and in public relations work. In North Africa she was WAC staff director. During the last few months she has been chief assistant to Colonel Hobby.

Colonel Hobby, wife of former Governor Hobby of Texas, and mother of two children, says she wants to return to civilian life to make a home for her family.

CHINESE GAINS:
On Mainland

Doggedly battling Chinese troops have recaptured two former U. S. air bases in Kiangsi province, it was announced by the Chinese high command. The important Jap base at Kanchow is being encircled, it was said, with fighting going on 12 miles outside the town. This communications center is about 250 miles north of Hong Kong. In another sector, the Chinese are approaching Wuchow, Japanese supply base 130 miles west of Canton on Sikiang river. Capture of this city is a major objective.

New advances are being made in Hunan province, where the Japs are pulling back toward Paoking. They are now only four miles outside the town, which guards the approaches to the Jap-held rail junction of Hengyang.

AUTOS:
Ration Free?

More autos will be available to the public by March 31 than originally planned—at least enough to bring announcement from Henry P. Nelson of the War Production board that they would be ration-free.

They will still be hard to get however due to a serious shortage of tin. The present quotas called for some 690,000 new cars by next March 31, which is not much more than 10 per cent of the market demands. Thus while cars may be placed on ration-free lists, little hope is held out that many will be able to secure the family car they have been saving for.

BEEF:
Grass Fed

Cattle fattened on grass in Oklahoma and Kansas are beginning to enter the markets in sizable numbers. About 380,000 head have been put to graze on the blue stem grass lands. It is expected that the steers will gain from 200 to 350 pounds on the green feed.

Ordinarily beef from the grass country rates as B grade or worse. Animals that would come up to A grade if finished on corn are being grass fed because of the scarcity of grain. Commission men think the grassy beef will sell for 13 to 14 cents a pound.

MALARIA CONTROL:

Daily "delousing" of Manila by low-flying aircraft with DDT, the wonder insecticide, has resulted in a sharp decline in the fly, mosquito and other pests among its unwanted population, with a material lowering of the number of malaria cases reported.

The planes, mostly transports, fly at rooftop level, spraying the city with a fine mist composed of DDT. The same method has been used effectively on the New York City beaches. The supply is still limited.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

IT'S the women who rule the box-office destiny of the movies, according to Hunt Stromberg, who's been making good movies for years, and now has his own producing company. Women form a large part of the audience, says he, and also determine to what movies their men shall take them. Not that he ignores the males in his appeal to the public! "Young Widow," costarring Jane Russell and Louis Hayward, is intended to entertain both sexes. But Stromberg likes feminine titles — "Dishonored Lady" is on his list, and "Strange Woman," and his first independent picture was "Lady of Burlesque." And credit him with giving Joan Crawford, Myrna Loy and Rosalind Russell a big push toward stardom.

Lovely Constance Moore, the screen star, has been given the leading-lady role of the sleuthing secretary to "Jim Lawton" in "Hollywood Mystery Time," Sundays over the American network. Dennis O'Keefe plays "Lawton," a mystery-solving movie producer.

Ethel Barrymore is definitely committed to making pictures now that she has signed a contract with David O. Selznick's Vanguard company. She'll make four pictures in four years. The first will be "Some Must Watch," a mystery by Ethel Lina White, in which she will be starred with Dorothy McGuire. Her most recent picture is "None But the Lonely Heart," made for RKO last season.

*

A honeymoon and the start of a new radio series make this an eventful summer for Carol Bruce. Carol met her bridegroom when she was filling a hotel engagement in Minneapolis, and it was love at first sight. As for the radio program, listeners have fallen in love with it. Carol and Curt Massey are replacing the Andrews Sisters for the summer, in "Sunday at the N-K Ranch," on the American network.

*

Vera-Ellen, Samuel Goldwyn's "find" who makes her screen debut in "Wonder Man," the hilarious Danny Kaye musical, was once a Rockette at New York's Radio City Music Hall. She went to New York as a delegate to the Dancing Masters of America convention, and just stayed.

*

Virginia Mayo might still be playing ringmistress for a horse of which her brother-in-law was playing the rear legs if Goldwyn hadn't caught the act at a night club and given her a contract. It was the "Pansy the Horse Act." Virginia's featured in "Wonder Man."

*

*

Many a girl and boy went to Hollywood in the days of silent films, planning to start as an extra and zoom to stardom. In all those years, only 15 top stars came from the extras' ranks: Gary Cooper, Janet Gaynor, Fay Wray, Charles Farrell, Richard Arlen, Norma Talmadge, Clark Gable, Carol Lombard, Ramon Navarro and Joan Crawford among them. Only Cooper, Gable, Arlen and Miss Crawford are still reigning.

*

"Others may be used to star billing," remarked Arthur Loft, the character actor, "but I'm becoming accustomed to wearing my star on my chest." He plays his third sheriff role in "Along Came Jones," starring Gary Cooper and Loretta Young.

*

ODDS AND ENDS—Monty Woolley sings "Miss Otis Regrets" in Warner Bros.' "Night and Day," the musical based on the life of Cole Porter. . . . Norm Berens of the air's "By Request" show has written a song in collaboration with Dorothy Lamour; she may sing it on the screen one of these days. . . . Following her hit as the fiery-tempered Latin in "Week-End at the Waldorf," Lina Romay has been rewarded with her second straight dramatic role, as the girl Gable loves and leaves in "The Strange Adventure." . . . Bill Gargan is one busy fellow these days. When he finishes at Republic, he races over to Paramount for "Hot Cargo" with Jean Rogers.

When Your Back Hurts -
And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Sightless Actresses Use Ingenious Tricks in Acts

The Lighthouse Players, a group of blind women who present a number of plays in New York each season, employ ingenious tricks to enable them to move about and do their bits of stage business as naturally as actors with sight, says Collier's. For example, they use strips of carpet, 18 inches wide, to guide them to doors, windows, chairs and other props.

They click the teaspoon when passing a cup of tea, so the recipient will know where to reach for the saucer without fumbling; and they fold down a corner of a newspaper or magazine that is to be picked up and glanced through, so they will not "read" it upside down.

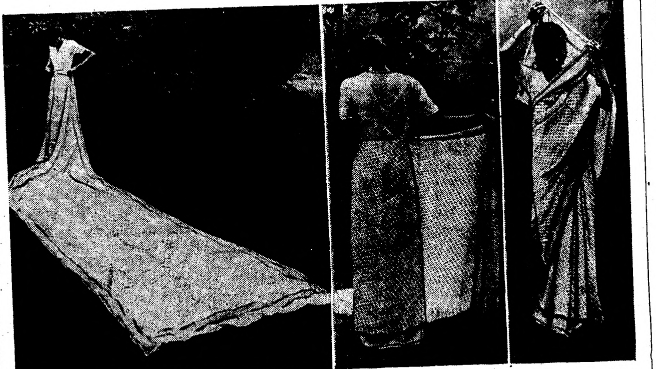
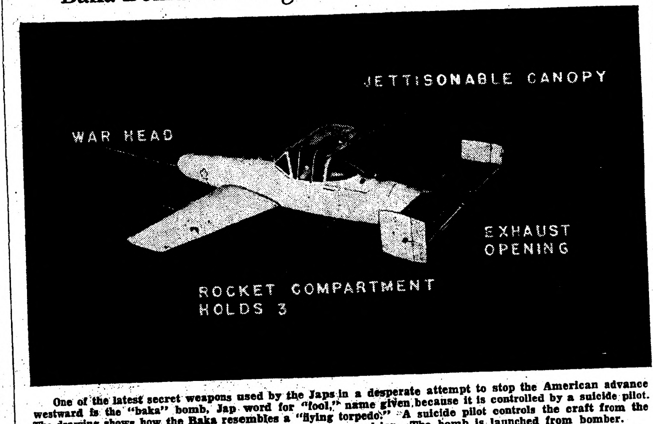
How to Don Traditional Sari Shown by Indian



The sari is the traditional costume for women in India. It is a one-piece garment, really just a long length of cloth, reaching from waist to ankles and fastened with a drawstring. It is six to nine yards in length and has neither hooks nor eyes, but may be elaborately embroidered. The wearer picks up the border of the sari with both hands and, with a quick twist of her body, wraps it about torso.

Baka Bomb No Longer Secret but Still Suicide



One of the latest secret weapons used by the Japs in a desperate attempt to stop the American advance westward is the "baka" bomb, Jap word for "fool," name given because it is controlled by a suicide pilot. The drawing shows how the Baka resembles a "flying torpedo." A suicide pilot controls the craft from the bubble canopy. Rockets in the tail section furnish propulsion. The bomb is launched from bomber.

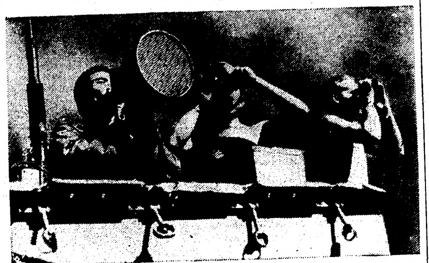
Blue Grass Quadruplet Calves

Little Eve is the proud mother of quadruplets born on the farm of C. D. Lucas near Dyer, Ky. Little Eve is only 5 and her husband, Adam, 2 years old. Both are pure bred Hereford stock. The event of quadruplets among cattle is as unusual as among humans, or about once in every 850,000 births. Photo shows mother and children are doing well.

Keeping Flies Dry

Fisherman Lee Studeny of Pittsburgh "dunks" his flies in silicone oil before starting for his favorite stream. The oil keeps dry flies dry. It is derived from sand and coal in combination with brine. The fly will remain dry for a long period.

Come on In, Captivity's Fine!



A Jap prisoner of war and an interpreter broadcast megaphone calls to Japs hiding out in Okinawa, telling them that surrender to the Americans is their best bet. The broadcast is made from a landing craft offshore. Instructions to the hidden Japs are to come out unarmed and swim to the craft. Many accepted the invitations.

Household Hints

Scrub carrots with a stiff brush. It is easier than scraping or paring and saves vitamins and minerals as well.

Resolve to go easy on the vacuum cleaner motor by emptying the dust bag after every use. Shake out the loose dirt, tie the bag inside out on the clothesline and let the breeze do the job thoroughly for you.

Clean wicker furniture by scrubbing it with a stiff brush and warm salt water. The salt keeps the wicker from turning yellow.

To save that last bit of shortening which clings to a jar container, fill the jar with just-under-boiling water. By the time the water is cold the shortening will have risen to the top and returned to its unmelted stage. Easily removed.

When washing windows, use an up and down stroke on the outside, and the side to side stroke on the inside. This way, you can easily determine which side needs more polishing.

When you are doing any painting in the house, be sure to tie a paper bag over each of the light fixtures and any others on which paint might drip. You will find that it is much easier than to do the necessary cleaning afterwards.

An electric refrigerator can be defrosted in a few minutes by this method. Turn power off in refrigerator, remove ice cube trays, fill them with boiling water, and return them to place. Leave refrigerator door open during defrosting.

Your little girl's dress can be given a professional touch, quickly and easily, if you use pretty handkerchiefs for trimming. Two, which are alike, will be needed for each dress. The handkerchiefs may be edged with lace, embroidery or have colored hems. Perhaps they have only embroidered corners. Cut and use for collars, cuffs and the little pocket tops. They make a dainty and practical finish.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Ordered to take a German position so close to the lines that shooting would have brought them under direct fire, members of Company A, 175th Infantry, stretched an inner tube between two trees and hurled grenades sling-shot fashion. It worked.

B. F. Goodrich has developed a new rubber cement which in some cases can replace rivets or screws.

French Industry has begun to produce U. S. Army pneumatic tires, using American raw materials. Production in one plant has increased five times in three months of operation.

SPIKE THE JAP... Get a railroad job NOW!

Slamming home the Victory punch in the Pacific is taking manpower—plenty of the best in the world.

Transporting fighting men and equipment with which they are defeating Japan takes manpower, too.

But there now isn't enough manpower for the railways laboring under the titanic responsibility of moving in the next few months 3½ million fighters and 5½ million tons of military gear—in addition to enormous quantities of materials for war plants and civilian goods.

America's railways, particularly Western lines, must have at least 65,000 additional workers if the military transportation schedules are to be met.

Realizing the gravity of the situation, the Army has furloughed a large number of soldiers for railway work. But, since these men cannot be detailed permanently for this service, the Army is spearheading a drive to recruit civilian "troops" for the Battle of Transportation.

The Army and other government manpower agencies urge those who are not presently employed in war industries or in the production of food and other necessities to help SPIKE THE JAP . . . GET A RAILROAD JOB NOW!

Apply in person or write to the nearest Great Northern Railway agent or office, or to the U. S. Railroad Retirement Board, or the U. S. Employment Service.

Railroad employment offers good wages, security under Railroad Retirement and Unemployment Insurance, in addition to transportation privileges.

Will Build New Power Line

Arnold Jenson of the Otter Tail Power Company has been here this week getting easements for the right-of-way for the new High Line into Holt. The line will now be built between Holt and Middle River along the Trunk Highway No. 32 with the line from Newfolden coming in from the west joining this line at the corner north of the Pioneer School. This will be done to improve the service both to Holt and Newfolden as the right-of-way along the old line to Middle River is through a wooded section and when it is windy too many trees bother the line. It will also be easier to patrol the new line along the main highway.

The new line will be built with higher poles so that a second line can be run on the same poles under the high power for farm use later on. Most of the farms between Holt and Middle River will soon have electricity at that rate. Work will start on this new line as soon as all easements are ready and will cost around $27,000.

Fort Snelling 126 Years Old

On August 24, 1819, one hundred and twenty-six years ago today, Lieutenant Colonel Henry Leavenworth with ninety-eight men of the Fifth Infantry arrived at the mouth of the Minnesota river, then known as the St. Peters, to begin work upon a new military post on Minnesota soil. The story of the expedition is told in the journal of Major Thomas Forsyth, the Indian agent who accompanied the forces published in the third volume of the "Collections" of the Minnesota Historical society.

The mouth of the Minnesota river had long been recognized as a strategic location by fur traders and military alike. In the late summer of 1805 Lieutenant Zebulon Pike, in pursuance of War Department orders, had purchased from the Sioux of the vicinity a tract of land nine miles square for a fort. He paid the Indians sixty gallons of whiskey and promised them two thousand dollars' worth of goods, but completion of the deal had been delayed because there was no immediate need for the land.

During the War of 1812 British traders led the Minnesota Sioux against the Americans, and thus emphasized the necessity for effective military control of the Northwest by the United States.

By order of Secretary of War Calhoun, part of the Fifth Infantry was concentrated at Detroit early in 1819, and then was moved under Colonel Leavenworth by schooner to Green Bay. The old Fox-Wisconsin river route brought the force to Prairie du Chien at the mouth of the Wisconsin River by the end of June.

Delays at Prairie du Chien and the slow voyage up the Mississippi by batteaux prevented the arrival of the expedition until late August. Rude cabins were hastily erected upon the present site of Mendota, and the force, somewhat strengthened by the arrival of one hundred and twenty recruits, spent its first winter in New Hope Cantonment,

Poorly equipped with supplies and provisions against the northern winter, Leavenworth's troops suffered severely. Approximatbely forty men died of scurvy before spring. As soon as the season permitted, the commander established a tent camp, Camp Cold Water, upon the north bank of the Minnesota just north of the present fort, and began to clear ground for their gardens. Leavenworth was superseded by Colonial Josiah Snelling in the early summer of 1820.

The present fort site was chosen, and on September 10th, 1820. the cornerstone of Fort St. Anthony was laid. Gradually stone buildings were erected, surrounded by a ten-foot stone wall, roughly diamond shaped. In 1824 the fort was renamed Fort Snelling.

The Round Tower and Bastion of the origional fort still remain today to tell of one hundred and twenty-six years of Military history in the Northwesth,

Your Duty to REPORT AUTO ACCIDENTS!

It is the duty of every citizen to lend authorities full assistance in enforcement of the new Minnesota Motor Vehicle Safety Responsibility Law by helping to report every accident. Highway accidents can then be reduced to a minimum.

Particularly the many accidents caused by reckless, careless and irresponsible drivers unable or unwilling to reimburse innocent victims, or their beneficiaries, for damages sustained.

Civic-minded citizens can assist authorities by:

(1) Making sure that all accidents seen, in which the driver does not stop, are reported at once to the police, or sheriff, or Commissioner of Highways, 1279 University Ave., St. Paul 4; and

(2) Including in each report positive identification of driver, or drivers, and vehicle, or vehicles, and a clear description of both place and time of accident.

The new law requires every driver involved in an accident in which anyone has been killed, or injured, or total property damage loss of $50 or more has been sustained, to report this accident to the Commissioner of Highways within 24 hours.

If no automobile liability insurance was in force at time of the accident, the driver, or owner, must within 60 days settle all claims arising out of the accident, or deposit security with the Commissioner in an amount determined by him, sufficient to pay all damages.

Otherwise, the driver's license must be suspended.

Also the driver's license of anyone who, within 30 days, fails to satisfy a civil judgment arising out of an auto accident must be suspended.

Nor can this license be reinstated until the judgment has been satisfied, and proof of future financial responsibility has been filed.

Further information about the law may be had in pamphlet form at your filling station, or by contacting

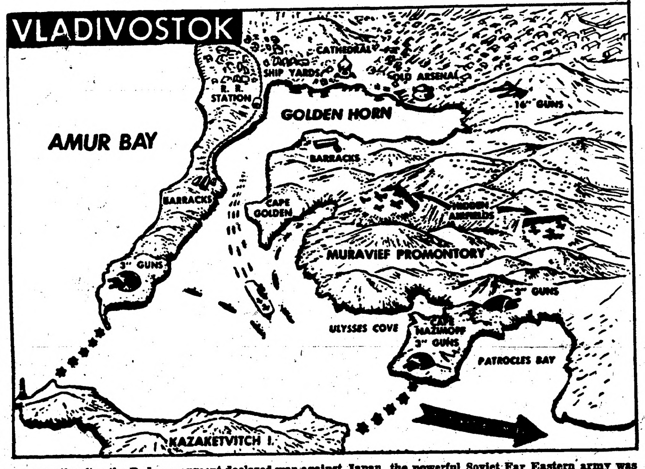
Russia's Entry Into War Against Japs Provides Bases



Shortly after the Red government declared war against Japan, the powerful Soviet Far Eastern army was already rolling across the Manchurian frontier with the Red air force blasting a path ahead of it. Air bases in Russia will now be available to the United States air forces. This will place Japan in easy striking distance for any type of plane, army or navy, and will cut down fuel load required on trips.

Even one's imagination cannot exaggerate the potentialities of the destruction that will be caused by the new atomic bombs now being dropped upon Japanese cities. The perfected bomb was the work of many leading scientists of the United States, Canada, England as well as those from other European countries. Initial work was started before the United States entered the war. More than two billion dollars was spent to perfect the destructive secret weapon.

Loveliness of Queen Beth Started Saluting Business

There has undoubtedly been more saluting in this war than ever before in history. And there has been a lot of argument as to how the salute with the hand originated. One story runs that it originated in England, when Sir Francis Drake invited Queen Elizabeth to come and review the ships after the defeat of the Armada.

The queen arrived in all her imperial glory, the officer in charge of the parade issued orders that "on account of the dazzling loveliness of her majesty, all seamen should shield their eyes with their right hand." This shielding of the eyes is claimed to be the original version of the naval salute.

What are the two most important words we have learned in this war?

NOT long ago, Russian armies were lined up on the Oder, facing desperate Nazi resistance before Berlin. On the 14th of February, nearly 4,000 bombers and fighters, part British, part American, flew to that vital sector and smashed at enemy strong points and concentrations. Some planes actually unloaded their bombs only 12 miles in front of the Russian spearhead!

That was Combined Operations.

In Burma, a British Admiral led tough U. S. Rangers, Tommies from all parts of the Empire, Indian Ghurkas and Sikhs, Chinese foot soldiers, carrying weapons made in Bridgeport. All wore different uniforms. But all shared in their hearts a single determination—to destroy the arch-destroyers, to conquer the common enemy.

That is Combined Operations—two words that affect the future of mankind.

We have learned the lesson that to win this war we had to fight side by side with our allies, regardless of race, religion or politics.

And now, with durable peace within our grasp, we cannot abandon that lesson. Unity, efficiency, fellowship, international cooperation must be continued.

Every American citizen, every man and woman in the nation, has a definite contribution to make toward seeing that a permanent international body to maintain peace be made a going concern.

We must add our strength to the surging movement toward unity among all men of good-will in every part of the globe. We must pledge our unswerving support to that movement, give our statesmen and legislators the support they need to make it effective. We must determine to make the necessary start, even though the first step is not as altogether perfect as we might wish.

Will you play your part in this greatest of all Combined Operations? Will you take your place in the ranks with your fellow men in the striving toward permanent peace?

First, get and keep yourself informed about the specific proposals for peace and international cooperation which are now before us. Read and listen to the discussions of them. Ask your Public Library for material on them.

Second, interest your friends in these questions. Get them discussed in any social, labor, business, religious or other groups to which you belong.

Third, say what you think—for or against—in writing, to your Congressman and Senators, to your newspaper. Declare yourself. Speak up.

Work today for peace, that your children may live tomorrow.

Fall Daytime Fashions Are Type American Women Love to Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT WOULD seem this year that American designers are breaking all previous records in creating the best looking clothes ever for smart all-around daytime wear. Made of sterling quality flannels, checks, gabardines, jerseys, homespun weaves and such, they have that thoroughbred look about them, yet styled as they are, with a sophisticated simplicity that bespeaks "class," they are just the type American women love to wear.

College and career girls needs must have clothes that are as good looking as the best of 'em together with a practicality that assures dependable wearableness. This fall you will be delighted with the smooth and distinctive styling given to even the simplest daytime suits and dresses.

The fashions from New York Dress Institute collections, here pictured, go to show what a treat is in store for you if you are looking for "style," quality and serviceability. To the right see a co-ed's dream, by the co-ed's favorite designer, Claire McCardell. This suit illustrates three of this top-flight designer's important trends in her current collections. They are the fitted "frontier" jacket with quaint leg-o'-mutton sleeves, the new curve-line wrap around skirt with definite fullness, and thirdly, the frontier hip pockets, giving a new widened line to the hips. This three-piece combines stunning gray flannel with zephyr knit in gray, black and white check. The buttons are silver, decorated with heraldic emblems. The suit is double stitched in black thread around the edges and the arm holes.

The smartly styled dress to the left tunes perfectly to the current fashion mood for classically simple clothes. It is outstanding because of the designer's novel and graceful manipulation of the self-fabric in way of the medieval-inspired "almoner" bag, ingeniously suspended from the waistline. Centuries ago bags of this type were carried by official dispensers of alms. In its modernized version this bag fits into the scheme of present-day fashion with high distinction. The deep armhole sleeves lend a definite note of chic. The new "rave" this season is to wear handsome gold or silver jewelry with dresses of sophisticated simplicity. Ideal is this gray crepe gown as a background for important jewelry pieces.

The diagonally closed bodice, the new rounded shoulderline and fluid sleeve treatment are styling points that combine to achieve the "new look" for the neat daytime dress centered in the picture. Black and white check wool in homespun weave is the material used. The selvedge edge of the fabric gives smart contrast. The extreme simplicity of this dress is typical of the fashions that best-dressed women are selecting for pracical daytime wear.

For smart day fashions, gay little dresses are being made of a multi-colored narrow stripe jersey, which also works up charmingly in attractive two-piece jacket-with-skirt costumes. Bold contrast achieved with using jersey in three or more colors is played up in striking ways also. Vivid scarlet wool jackets with brass buttons are worn with neutral tweed skirts, or with sleek classroom dresses made of the now-so-modish gray flanels.

With Sequin Accent

Suits for afternoon wear that take on beadwork and other glitter accent are in the news for this fall and winter. Black sequins, giving that gala look are used on the front of the jacket of the handsome black cocktail suit pictured. It is worthwhile keeping an eye on the suits that take on the glitter note. The idea is being carried out in unique ways for fall. Sometimes the glitter is applied in a beadwork design to one shoulder that looks as imposing as an official decoration. A favorite use of beads or sequin embroidery is seen on pockets, lapels and suit revers, on this otherwise simple suit.

Cotton Dresses Tune To Early Fall Theme

Women of smart fashion are setting a precedent by wearing their pretty cotton dresses and suits to the very last minute of summer and then on as long as warm weather lingers. At the current moment, best-dressed women are seen dining in fashionable hotels and restaurants looking their prettiest in their flower-fresh seersuckers that are as meticulously styled as if they were of crepe or sheer wool. Eye-catching are the pink suits of linen-like weave with their big pearlized plastic tied-on buttons. Black suits of washable weaves are proving most wearable in the between-season period. They are tuned into the early fall picture via stunning new neckwear items and dashing accessories such as a sequinned crepe dickey or a satin gilet in a striking color.

Corselets With Quaint Peasant Look Are Chic

Those little laced-up-the-front corselets that look so quaintly peasant have become an important styling theme in present-day dress. Designers are playing them up for fall in connection with the now-so-modish midriff treatments of which you will see more as the season advances. Dresses with elaborate jeweled girdles, and richly embroidered stomachers done in the renaissance way are part of the story.

Hand Painted Girdles

Hand painted girdles are a new "find" in the corset departments. The young girl that adores pretty things will hail this new fashion trend with delight. Pussywillows, daisies, rosebuds and violets are gaily hand painted on shell pink girdles. Thus the humble girdle becomes a "thing of beauty" as they turn prose into poetry.

JIMMY CARROLL, young tenor who headlines his own CBS show, "Jimmy Carroll Sings," proves that the place to find good voices is in radio's vocal groups. For five years Jimmy sang in the Ben Yost, Ray Block and Lyn Murray choirs; before that he'd been buying women's wear for a big chain of department stores, and singing for fun. Last fall, when James Melton was taken ill, Jimmy substituted, with only a half hour's rehearsal. That brought him to the attention of his present sponsors—and his radio program has led to his being pursued by the producers of two musical shows. His present program replaces the Lyn Murray show, whose vocal director he once worked for!

Movie companies are also after Tucker — he may be seen with Deanna Durbin, we hear. And he's been signed for 10 guest shots on the Chicago Theater of the Air, on NBC.

There's No Doubt of It—This Chap Got the Bird

A certain fellow had a bit too much to drink at a party one night, yet to the surprise of his housekeeper managed to get home safely.

"How did you find the house so easily?" asked the woman. "You're so nearsighted and it was unusually dark out last night."

"My host lent me a lantern so I could see without difficulty."

A little later in the day, the fellow received a note from his host of the previous evening.

"Dear Chum," it said, "will you please return my canary and birdcage which you carried away with you last night?"

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER
1,417,000 airplane tires were built in 1944—733% more than were produced in 1941.
Carbon black is a pigment which, when mixed with rubber, reinforces the molecules of rubber—similar to the way slag or pebbles are used in reinforcing concrete. It is the third most important material that goes into a tire.
Shortages of carbon black, textiles and wire are largely responsible for the present critical shortage of tires. Over 125 feet of steel wire are used in the construction of an average-size passenger car tire.

HAPPENS WHEN DAIRY FARMERS ARE SALESMEN?

When, as in the Land O'Lakes method of marketing dairy products, dairy farmers own and control their own marketing organization, they have complete control over movements of their products between farm and family.

And when dairy farmers have control over more movements of their products, they share in all the potential benefits. The difference between cost of production and distribution and the prices received belong to those who own the enterprise.

EMPEROR:
His Background

Their authority re-established with the overthrow of the military governors in 1868, the Japanese emperors, supposedly descended from the sun goddess, have exercised their mythical power for the unification of the country to facilitate its imperial development.

With the overthrow of the shogunate shortly after Admiral Perry opened the door of Japan to the outside world, the simple island people, previously owing strict allegiance to the military clan, easily transferred their blind obedience to the mikado.

The present mikado, Hirohito, is a puny, nearsighted man of 44. He is called the 124th emperor of Japan by the Japanese court authorities. When he ascended the throne in 1926, he chose the word "Showa," meaning "enlightenment and peace," to describe his reign.

Many political experts believe that personally Hirohito wanted peace, but as the puppet of the military clique had to go along with their designs. Actually he wields little real power. His actual "reign" began in 1921, then as prince regent he ruled in his father's stead. He was married in 1924 and is the father of one son and three daughters.

RECONVERSION:
Next Job

With World War II finished, and with the nation's great armament production due to be slashed, interest mounted in the government's program for switching industry back to a peacetime basis and providing continued high employment.

Shortly before the cessation of hostilities, President Truman called in War Production Board Chieftain Krug to go over plans for speeding up reconversion to prevent a large-scale rupture of the country's economy after V-J day.

At the meeting, it was determined that the WPB was to conduct a vigorous drive for the expansion of production of materials in short supply to meet all demands; limit manufacture of articles requiring scarce materials; establish effective control over material stockpiles to prevent speculative hoarding that would endanger the stabilization program; provide priority assistance to break bottlenecks that might impede the switch back to civilian goods, and allocate scarce materials for lower priced articles to keep costs down.

COMPLETE VICTORY!

Japs Agree to All Terms Of Potsdam Declaration; MacArthur Gets High Post

By AL JEDLICKA

Forty years after its armies marched into Korea to establish a foothold on the Asiatic mainland, Japan's course of imperial conquest come to a dramatic end on the evening of August 14, with the unqualified acceptance of the Potsdam declaration, subscribed to by the U. S., Britain, China and Russia. Announced to an anxious nation by President Harry S. Truman, the Jap surrender came three years, eight months and one week after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

With the Allied powers consenting to his retention on the throne to assure the surrender of Japanese armies scattered throughout Asia and the submission of the homeland to the stiff terms imposed, Emperor Hirohito ordered the nation to lay down its arms as the Tokyo radio reported thousands of downcast subjects bowed in grief before the gates of the imperial palace.

Having led American ground forces back over the vast tracts of the Pacific to the doorstep of Japan following the crippling blow at Pearl Harbor, General MacArthur was designated to accept the Nipponese surrender along with representatives of the other Allied nations.

Coming four days after Tokyo's first offer to give up the fight provided the emperor's sovereignty were respected, and three months after V-E day, Japan's surrender was greeted with wild enthusiasm throughout the U. S., which joyously celebrated the end of the most destructive and costly war in history without waiting for President Harry S. Truman's official V-J day proclamation.

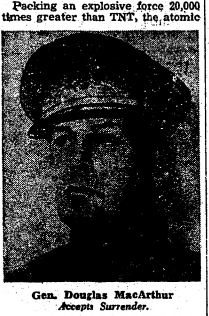
In accepting the Allied terms, Japan agreed to the total reduction of its once proud empire, with hope for the future based upon the organization of a free democracy within the home islands of Honshu, Kyushu, Hokkaido and Shikoku.

Under the Potsdam ultimatum, Japan must eliminate the influence of those elements which have encouraged conquest; give up Manchuria, Korea and other overseas acquisitions; disarm all armed forces; permit the revival of democracy and freedom of speech, religion and thought; and submit to Allied occupation of designated points in the homeland until post-war security has been established.

At the same time, Japan was promised an opportunity for orderly development once a peaceful government had been created, with retention of such industries as would maintain its internal economy and eventual access to raw materials and world trade.

The war ended just as the atomic bomb threatened the obliteration of Japan's sprawling industrial settlements, with Hiroshima and Nagasaki already badly mangled by the terrific blasts.

Packing an explosive force 20,000 times greater than TNT, the atomic bomb's destructive capacity so far exceeded that of ordinary missiles that it brought a quick reaction from a government that had planned continuation of the conflict from underground bastions despite increasing B-29 attacks.



Gen. Douglas MacArthur
Accepts Surrender.

Besides threatening to lay Japan waste, the atomic bomb also was credited with blowing Russia into the conflict, thus bringing the total Allied weight to bear against the Nipponese. In all, these two events served to climax the growing tempo of the Allied drive in the Pacific, which saw U. S. forces virtually sitting on Japan's doorstep at the cessation of hostilities.

With the navy and air force carrying the fight to the enemy, and with army and marine troops slashing forward in island to island fighting, the war in the Pacific rates as one of the bloodiest in history.

From the very beginning the U. S. encountered a bitter and fanatical foe, ardent and well disciplined, willing to fight to the last cartridge even when completely enveloped. All through the war, the toll of Jap killed far surpassed the number captured, indicating the nature of their defense.

Because of the close teamwork required in the over-all operations, it would be difficult to single out one outstanding hero, though General MacArthur's fiery stand against the enemy in the early stages of the conflict and his later redemption of lost territories made him the symbol of the American spirit.

Beside the name of MacArthur must be added those of Admiral Nimitz, who directed U. S. naval operations in the vast Pacific theater, and General Le May, whose B-29s seriously reduced Japan's industrial potential in repeated heavy raids.

Emperor Hirohito
Surrenders to Allies.

Recovering quickly from the black days immediately after Pearl Harbor, when the Nipponese overran much of the Pacific, the U. S. checked the enemy tide in the spring of 1942, when the American fleet stopped the Japs' southeastward drive in the battle of the Coral sea and then thwarted their eastward surge at Midway.

From then on, the U. S., building up tremendous military and material strength under a unified front at home, was on the march, with the Japanese seeking time to consolidate their newly won position as the overruling Asiatic power by bitter delaying action in their outposts.

With the navy severing vital Japanese supply lines to these outposts, and with the ground forces isolating enemy units into disorganized resistance pockets on invaded islands, the American advance in the Pacific far exceeded expectations, with the end of the European war finding U. S. sea, land and air forces perched right on Nippon's doorstep.

Though the main body of Japanese troops had not been touched by the steady U. S. advances westward, the American navy's mastery of the sea lanes as far as the Chinese coast interrupted the shipment of vital material to the home islands for industrial processing, and the B-29s' terrific bombardment of manufacturing centers greatly curtailed output. With deliveries of materials cut, and output dwindling, the effectiveness of an estimated 4,000,000 remaining enemy troops stood to be severely limited.

On top of it all, Russia's invasion of Manchuria and threat to Jap-held China promised to tap the only remaining important enemy industrial source outside the homeland.

Japan's Imperial Ambitions Led to War

Before the Twentieth century Japan's imperial ambitions were restricted to Korea, the coast of China and some neighboring islands in the Japanese sea. Japanese leaders suddenly realized the power of western armament. During the next half century Japan was modernized so successfully that the Japanese victories over China in 1894, and Russia in 1905 were swift and conclusive.

During the twenties Japan expanded her commercial influence deep into Chinese territory. By 1931 a formidable boycott developed. Japanese troops were used to crush this organized protest. This violation of treaty rights aroused the world. Japan defiantly resigned from the League of Nations in 1933, when trouble in the "truce area" of China was again the occasion for battling.

Report From Norway

By Walter T. Ridder

Oslo, Norwy—There's a regular Crookston socity here in Oslo. I ran ito another inhabitant of that northwestern Minnesota city when I was, of all things, playing baseball on an Oslovian sandlot. Guarding center field was Lt. Joseph H. Moline, 714 Woodland Ave., Crookston, Minn.

Lt. Moline is now with the Signal Corps of the American Task Force in Norway. He says his job up to now has been converting the German telephone system to American use. According to the Crookston lieutenant, the American system is more rapid and more efficient.

Lt. Moline saw action in Holland, Belgium and France before being shipped up in this direction.

Lt. Moline's mother was born in Norway and his father in Sweden. Right now, he says, he's "sweating out a leave to Sweden" to visit his father's birthplace. He is equally at home in Norwegian or Swedish, so in getting about here is no problem to the Crookston soldier.

About his long range future plans, Moline is uncertain. He says he is not staying in the Army and will not go back to teaching.

Editors Note—Lt. Moline is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Moline of Superior, Wisconsin, former Holt residents. He is married to Lorna Peterson, former Holt girl, and they have one son about a year old which he has never seen.

School Opens Here Next Week

School bells of Holt School Dist. 35 will again ring on Tuesday Sept. 4th., 1945 when the 1945-1946 school term will commence.

Having dropped its high school department, School District 35 will operate a three teacher grade school and the pupils of School Dist. 61, 20, 59 and 137, who will not operate their schools this year, will be transported to our local school.

The teachers, bus drivers and janitor are as follows:

Miss Lena Gullingsrud, Principal and 7th and 8th grades

Miss Gunda Engen, 4th, 5th and 6th grades. All of Thief River Falls.

Ludvig Sagstuen, Janitor.

The district owned bus will operate over the same route as during the 1944-45 school year and the bus operated by Clarence Ness will pick up pupils of school district 35, living southwest and north-west of the school Dist. 137 as during the past years As yet no time schedule has been set but will be set either before school starts or the first or second day after school starts.

With reference to high school transportation, School Dist. 35 Will Not transport high school students. School Dist. 49, Newfolden, Minn. will operate their high school bus along a certain route and all high school students who wish to ride are requested to contact the Superintendent of the Newfolden school. He will advise them as to transportation, costs method of payment and time schedule. Unless changed, their bus route will operate as follows:

Commence at Newfolden, thence west on Highway No. 59 to High way No. 32, thence north on highway 32 to the Holt Twp. Line thence east to the range line between the Twps. of East Valley and Holt, thence south to the A. C. Conklin corner, thence west to the J. P. Benitt corner, thence south to the Edgar Horien corner, thence west to highway No. 32, thence north thru the village of Holt and north to Newfolden. Pupils of School Dist. 35 who live in the village will meet the Newfolden bus in the village of Holt. Stops will be made along this route for any high-school students that wish to meet the bus. The Newfolden school will not start on Sept. 4th and pupils will no doubt be advised as to their opening date.

The trend is new "back to school". The Board of Education of School Dist. 35 hopes that all parents will insist that their children attend school as our State Aids depends on average daily attendance. We hope that all parents will cooperate so that the 1945-46 year may be a success.

Mrs. O. Moline and Donna of Superior visited relatives here last week.

Seeds Wanted

Our Government is asking for an increased production of all grass seeds to meet the demands of reconversion throughout the world. Alfalfa, Red Clover, and Sweet Clover fields look reasonably promising for a seed crop. Present seed prices will show a very substantial profit if a reasonable seed yield should be obtained.

We are sure that you would like to help in this reconversion program by harvesting your seeds and being that fields look promising, may we suggest holding off cutting these fields until a later date as there is a reasonable abundance of hay and if a seed crop can be taken off, we can have in mind that in addition to the market price, that the Government also is paying additional bonusus.

Poison grasshoppers that appear in the Alfalfa. They are the big menace to seed pods as they clip them off and chances are tnat one dose will do the job. This costing only the labor of putting it on.

LOOKING AHEAD
BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Uphold Wages

Everybody who is willing and able to work is working harder these days; moving faster during regular hours and putting in overtime. Pressure of war, shortage of workers and prevailing high wages are the cause. A larger personal income, beneficial to all classes, is one of the direct results. We would all like to carry this feature over into the post-war years.

Philip Murray of the CIO had the right idea when he went to President Truman a few weeks ago and asked for a 20% increase in basic wage rates. Average wages in the United States at that time were $1.04 an hour. This may seem high enough but it can't last. As soon as the war is over, labor's income will decline some, in spite of everything that can be done about it.

Losses to Labor.

Bonuses will disappear when the pressure of government contracts is removed. Working weeks will be shorter. Overtime will shrink to the vanishing point. Besides, high-wage munition factories will close down and their employees will take work where wages are lower, some on farms. If the basic wage scale is not higher when war ends, labor's income will suffer too much.

Farmers have hard times when factory workers do. The wage earner's dinner table is the farmer's market, so nobody is more interested in high wages in factories than the farmers themselves. Agriculture and labor, both big segments of Americans, are right behind Mr. Murray for good wages immediately after the war because prosperity for many years will depend on it.

Bug in the Lotion

The only disappointing detail in connection with the CIO's campaign for post-war prosperity is this: Mr. Murray's first move was an effort to make high wages legal rather than to make them possible. Lawgivers have been trying for centuries to make people pay what they didn't have. It can't be done. It makes no difference what the wage scale is if the employer can't meet it.

A high basic wage scale recorded upon the ponderous pages of federal statute books will not buy milk for any working man's baby. Folding money in the pay-envelope, however, will do the trick. Any employer will put cash in his workers hands in steadily increasing quantities, so long as he can still show a profit on the products that his organization ships out from his factory.

Congress Has Key

There is a happy solution to this wage problem. If plant owners can be enabled to install new, modern equipment as needed, factory output per man-hour will increase steadily. This justifies better wages without raising prices and this is the combination that makes quick markets and prosperity. Problem: Will Congress let industry buy new machinery?

Still in force in America are our war-time tax laws, taking over 90% of corporation earnings. They make profits in business thin and uninteresting to investors; increased production next to impossible. Congress holds the key. Plenty of good jobs at good pay can develop after the war if new tax laws are prepared now and announced now to take effect the day Japan surrenders.

Lines on Hand Determined By It's Shape, Structure

One reason for lines on the hand is this: When you close your hand the flesh of the palm crinkles along certain lines, and those lines are obviously determined by the shape and structure of the hand. The crinkling of the flesh gives you a better grasp of whatever it is you are holding.

This accounts for what one might call the major lines on the hand; but there are innumerable smaller ones, like the lines which show in a finger-print. The reason for these is to improve your sense of touch. Your skin, which is the organ of the sense of touch, is sensitive to pressures; this sensitiveness is greatly increased in your hands by means of these little valleys and ridges in the skin which we call "lines."

Japs Guard Against Uprising; Plan to Demobilize 7,000,000; Nation Shifts to Peace Economy

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Following the joyous news of Japan's capitulation, many persons the country over reverently made their way to church to offer prayers in gratitude for the cessation of hostilities. The crowd worshipping on the steps of St. Patrick's cathedral in New York City was typical, with a constant stream arriving to express their thanksgiving.

PEACE:
Tighten Imperial Grip

Even as General MacArthur arranged the complicated procedure for Japanese surrender and occupation, the U. S. prepared for the major readjustments looming ahead before the nation once again could tread the paths of peace.

With the Japanese government anxious to bring about a cessation of firing before the preliminary surrender parley in Manila, the conference was postponed to permit members of the imperial household to fly to the far-flung Asiatic battlefronts to enforce the emperor's orders to lay down arms.

Appointment of tough and able 57-year-old Prince Higashi-Kuni as Jap premier disclosed an effort to bring all of the weight of the imperial family behind the surrender acceptance to avert any outbreak of die-hards which might upset the internal situation. A second cousin of the emperor and an uncle of the empress, Higashi-Kuni has had a long career in the Jap army, serving as chief of the military aviation board, commander of defense headquarters and a member of the supreme war council.

While it was expected that some fanatical officers may try to fight on, or commit hara-kiri, the great mass of Japanese were expected to give up peaceably. "There will be no trouble when American soldiers go to Japan if it is the wish of the emperor," said one Jap naval officer. "The army, navy and Japanese people exist only by the will of the emperor."

U. S. Demobilizes

With the end of the war, the services' carefully prepared demobilization plans were scheduled to be put into effect, with the draft continuing for men under 25 years of age unless the President or congress ordained otherwise.

Approximately 261,000 enlisted men and 40,000 officers are eligible for release under the navy's newly announced discharge plan requiring 44 points for the enlisted men and 49 for the officers. Under the program, one-half point is allowed for each year of age up to the nearest birthday; one-half point for each full month of active duty since September 1, 1939, and 10 extra points for dependents regardless of number. Requirements for WAVES are about 14 points lower, with the same credit computations.

Designed to relieve men with the longest service, the navy program will permit release of about 2,000,000 men within the next 12 to 18 months, which, with the army's plan for discharging 5,000,000 G.I.s within a year, will result in a total demobilization of 7,000,000 by 1947.

Except for four categories of specialists, all army personnel with 85 points or more will be immediately released, along with men 38 years of age or over. Until such a time as the size of the occupation force needed in Japan can be determined, however, there will be no reduction in the present point system, it was indicated.

With G.I.s in the Pacific eligible for discharge due to be released, men with low-point scores in the U. S. or with only brief European service must prepare to accept overseas assignments, the army declared.

Ease Controls

Though five million people were expected to be discharged from war work following cessation of hostilities, industrial plans for a rapid reconversion to civilian manufacture promised early re-employment.

Fortunately, such basic industries as steel will be able to furnish civilian materials with little delay, and plans have been set up to continue government supervision over scarce items to permit more even distribution and prevent speculative hoarding and pressure for price increases.

With its financial position greatly bolstered by heavy wartime production, and with banking funds available before settlement of cancelled war contracts, industry generally is strongly heeled for reconversion. Meanwhile, civilians have record cash balances and bond holdings, and will be able to draw unemployment compensation to tide them over the early transition period.

While manpower controls were removed with Japan's defeat, wage checks were retained to prevent an inflationary spiral, and efforts made to minimize strike threats.

With another bumper crop on tap, farmers could look to continued heavy government purchases for the large military and naval establishments and foreign relief, and an uncertain domestic market dependent on the speed of the reconversion program. Under congressional legislation, however, farmers have been assured of federal price support for at least two years after the war.

Among the first effects of reduced military requirements was the removal of gas, fuel oil, canned fruits, vegetables and juices and other processed foods from the rationing lists. At the same time, price control was lifted from such items as jewelry, sports equipment, toys selling at 25 cents or less, cigarette lighters, pipes, luxury furs and garments, some photographic apparatus and notions.

Because of the shortage of supplies, and no possibility for immediate increases, rationing will be retained on meats, fats and oils, butter, sugar, shoes and tires.

In the case of tires, OPA announced, drivers of cars used for occupational purposes will continue to receive cords according to the importance of their work, and "A" card holders will be given consideration in cases of unusual hardship.

Though a check will be kept on shoes, men's and women's wear manufactured before March 1, 1944, and priced at $3.50 or less a pair, will be ration-free through to September 29.

CROPS:
Another Good Year

Owing to record yields of wheat, oats, peanuts, rice, peaches, pecans and commercial truck crops; near record prospects for hay, tobacco, soybeans, sugar cane, and large production for potatoes, sorghum grains and flaxseed, the department of agriculture predicted the 1945 harvest would be the third best in history.

With the wheat crop estimated at a record 1,146,283,000 bushels on the basis of conditions as of August 1, and with oats at 1,546,032,000 bushels, feed grain production was at a high level despite the estimated drop in the corn harvest to 2,844,478,000 bushels.

One of the bright spots in the crop picture was the estimated increase in sugar cane production to 6,976,000 tons, and rise in sugar beet output to 9,332,000 tons, promising to relieve the tight supply in the commodity.

Conservation Needed

After the most extensive study of farmland resources ever undertaken by any nation, the soil conservation service reported that more than 90 per cent of the country's farmland was in need of treatment to protect it from erosion and maintain fertility.

More than 3,600,000 man years of labor would be required for the huge task, the service said, along with 327,441 years of motor equipment; 1,089,978 years of horse-drawn facilities, and 2,544,106 tons of seed.

Of the 417,561,000 acres of farmland now under actual cultivation, the service said that 43,000,000 should be retired because of steepness, erosion, wetness and stone.

LABORITE BRITAIN

With Great Britain and all the rest of the world awaiting the pattern of postwar life in the United Kingdom, King George VI presented the victorious Labor party's legislative program, with nationalization of the Bank of England and the coal mines heading the agenda.

At the same time, the king revealed that the war's end would not bring about a release of wartime restrictions, with the Laborites seeking power during the reconversion period to maintain control over materials and services to assure proper distribution at fair prices.

Besides nationalizing the Bank of England to promote employment and development, and socializing the coal mines as part of a program to integrate the fuel and power industry, the Laborites propose to reorganize transport; provide social security and industrial insurance; buy land for housing, and set up machinery for planning investments in new business.

WORLD RELIEF:
Needs Boosted

With the termination of the war in the Pacific expected to multiply its problems, the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration Director Herbert Lehman declared that more than two billion dollars in additional funds would be needed to help stricken countries before their restoration of stable economies.

Speaking at the third international conference of UNRRA at London, Lehman revealed plans for coping with the Asiatic relief problem, disclosing that plans already have been formulated for the shipment of supplies to China over the Stilwell road and through coastal ports. Of the 100 million Chinese reported destitute, many are expected to succumb even if relief should be offered immediately.

The London meeting was enlivened by Australia's demand to broaden the UNRRA control council to nine members instead of the present Big Four to provide smaller nations with greater representation in the allocation of funds.

FRANCE:
Break Marshal

Leader of France's liberation movement, Gen. Charles de Gaulle spared the life of Marshal Henri Petain by commuting his death sentence for plotting against the internal safety of the country to life imprisonment.

Nevertheless, the jury's additional sentence of national indignity stood, imposed even after Petain's final assertion: "My thought, my only thought, was to remain with the people of France as I promised instead of abandoning them in their agony. . . . My honor belongs to your country. . . ."

Most controversial French case of the century, Petain's trial found the country sharply divided, with charges on the one hand that the old marshal had delivered the state up to the Germans, and countercharges on the other that prewar politicians were using the proceedings to whitewash themselves.

CONSUMER BACKLOG:
Big Order

The American people bought nearly 23 billion dollars less of automobiles and parts, and furniture and housefurnishings in the three years, 1942-44, than they would have if these goods had been available in prewar volume, the department of commerce estimates.

In automobiles and parts actual expenditures totaled 1.8 billions, with expected expenditures under normal conditions, 16.2 billions and the deficiency in purchases, 14.4 billions.

Army Teaches G.I.s Virtues of Thrift

How widely the members of the armed forces have been taught the virtues of thrift is indicated by figures supplied by the war department office of dependency benefits.

As of the end of June, there were 3,714,910 active monthly Class-E allotments-of-pay, which are voluntary assignments of pay to a soldier's dependents, a bank, an insurance company, etc., and are distinct from the family allowances to which the government contributes.

Over 40 million dollars have gone to insurance companies in the last three years to pay premiums on soldiers' civilian life insurance.

In June alone, $263,227 went to building and loan and savings and loan associations under the recently authorized plan permitting G.I. Joe to save for a home.

India's Army Force For Unifying Country

Common Language and Habits Tend to Break Down Former Prejudices; Troops Take Leadership in Communal Affairs.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street NW, Washington, D. C.

One heartening postwar picture arose out of the welter of hope, fear and expectation which held Washington in its grip through the news of the atomic bombs, the entrance of Russia into the war and then the exciting flash from Japan that kept us on tenter-hooks so long. When there seemed little to contemplate about but the lush growth of evil which had sprung from the planting of the dragon's teeth of war, I found, strangely enough, in the office of the representative of India in Washington the belief that the war would turn out to be, in one respect, a blessing to that perturbed country.

India has furnished an army of 2½ million men (the largest volunteer force in the world) in the prosecution of this war and that army has turned out to be "the greatest school of adult education" in the world. That's what the Indians proudly call it. True, soldiers in other armies have been "taught while they fought," but few have ever been able to add so much to the total knowledge of their nation.

I am told that after the last war, when an Indian village was found, especially in the Punjab, which was a little better run, with more progressive ideas and a more active social consciousness, it would also be discovered that its moving spirit was an ex-soldier—an Indian (Hindu or Moslem, Rajput or Sikh, no matter) who had brought home ideas on sanitation and hygiene, co-operation and understanding, absorbed during his period of service at home or abroad. But now the potentialities of this military missionaryship are immensely greater. Not merely because the Indian army is so much bigger, but because already it has served as a great melting pot, breaking down ancient prejudices and taboos which heretofore have made Indian unity impossible.

General's Spirit Hopeful Sign

If tall, lean and eager General Cariappa, with whom I talked at length when he was here on a mission connected with the founding of a new military academy in India, is typical, the army is indeed a force. His enthusiasm, his optimism and his energy are hopeful signs in themselves. I enjoyed that interview, seated in the office of the Agent General for India, where I heard this earnest man speak with an apparent sincerity and conviction which could not help but impress anyone who heard him.

General Cariappa was one of the first Indian cadets to be commissioned in the Indian army in 1920. As a young man he had not yet attained his majority. He has been in the army ever since and was the first Indian officer to command a battalion. He raised a machine-gun outfit himself and as lieutenant - colonel led his men through the bitter days of the Burma campaign. Now he is a general staff officer, one of India's four brigadiers, and also a member of the army reorganization committee. It was in the latter capacity that he has just completed a tour of inspection of the British military schools at Woolwich and Sandhurst, then the Canadian school at Kingston, and finally West Point and some of our specialist schools. He hopes to take acceptable features of all these schools and combine them in the new Indian Military academy, the site of which has not yet been determined but the plans for which are well under way. The committee on reorganization also hopes to revise Indian preliminary education so that it will develop leadership.

When I saw General Cariappa he was politely but none the less deeply pained over some of the reports in the American press which belittled India's participation in the war. He explained (which we in Washington knew) that there were two Indian soldiers to every one British soldier in the Burma fighting.

General Cariappa is working to prepare a completely independent Indian army. It is also, I dare to suggest, for an independent India. As a soldier, the general refused to discuss politics, but he said that naturally every loyal Indian looks forward to the independence of his country — "Something," he said, "which every one of our soldiers who has been fighting for the ideals of the United Nations expects." Like his fellow-countrymen and the British officers with whom I have talked, General Cariappa is proud of the seeds of unity which have been sown in the army.

In the first place, the army speaks and also reads and writes one language. Most of the soldiers when they enlist are of the peasant class and are illiterate. When their training commences they are immediately taught to read and write in Roman Urdu, which is a simplified Hindustani written with English (Roman) letters. Aside from the value of eradicating illiteracy, the knowledge and use of a common language removes one of the chief obstacles to harmony and understanding among the people. (There are 12 principal languages and 100 dialects spoken in India.) Many prejudices go when the language barrier is broken down. When the war is over at least 2½ million Indians will have the bond of a common tongue.

But more than that, they will have lived together, eaten together, in the field at least, lived in close companionship in barracks and developed teamwork and tolerance. There has been some suggestion that Basic English be made the official language of the army in India, and while, for the present, Hindustani appears more practical, the former has been taught on a large scale.

General Cariappa has a sense of humor and a perfect command of English (basic, colloquial and classic) in which to express it. (He went to school in England as a boy.) He told me the following story to illustrate the ramifications of the language problem in the Indian army:

A young British officer remarked to his native sergeant that it was really remarkable that in his comparatively small unit of only 300 men, six different languages were spoken.

"Oh, more than that, sir," the sergeant answered. "Nine different languages are spoken here. There are the six provincial languages. Then there is English, which you and I speak. Then there is Hindustani, which we all must speak. Then there is YOUR Hindustani."

Army With a Language Problem

It is true that most of the Indian army has remained within the continental limits of the country, but that is not really strange, General Cariappa explained, since it takes 18 men "in the tail" as he put it, to keep one fighting man going. Many foreigners, seeing so many uniforms in India, received the impression that the whole army was "sitting down." These men, of course, are not combat troops held back for political or other reasons, the general said, but are largely the work troops, the great service of supply required to keep the armies in the field going.

The general claims that Indian soldiers are second to none as fighting men. The greater proportion of them are Madrashi, not at all the traditional fighting tribes who in the past have constituted what was called the "martial race." That term, long outmoded, has long since been dropped. The excuse for its use disappeared much earlier.

In the past there may have been some basis for this concept. Fighting begets fighters. As the British conquest of India moved slowly northward it left peace behind it, but ignited war ahead of it. So the northerners were the last whose vocation, or at least avocation, was mortal combat. The southerners returned to the gentler arts. But to return to the general. He quoted that truism which all military men know is sound: "There are no bad soldiers. There are only bad officers."

Let me end this column as I began it. If General Cariappa is typical of India's officers, there is hope, not only for a powerful Indian army, which I, with the rest of you, pray India will never need, but hope that here among these 2½ million men who have found a common tongue and a common purpose has been planted the leven of tolerance that may bring about the unity of a free India.

DAIRYMAN'S NEWS from LAND O LAKES

When HAS A DAIRY FARMER FINISHED HIS JOB?

Has a dairy farmer finished his job when he puts his milk and cream down at a creamery? It depends on how much of the job he wants to control!

Many dairy farmers want to see the whole job of marketing done by themselves and thus be in a position to receive the potential benefits of "follow-through." To do this, they market their products through a Land O'Lakes member creamery and thereby own and control their own marketing organization.

Yes, there are advantages in marketing through Land O'Lakes—advantages both in selling to and buying from this organization owned by and operated for farmers. Investigate now.

Gov't Loans On Oats Crop

Marshall County farmers can get Government loans on their oats crops this year for the first time. The county loan rate is 42 cents per bushel. Loans will be made through the county AAA office.

Pointing out the need for the oats program, County AAA Chairman Charles N. Kranz said that it is "just common sense" to store the crop under loan until the railroads can handle it. The oats crop is estimated at the largest in 25 years, and the wheat crop is expected to break all records. Unchecked movement of these two crops to market comes at a time when the country trans portation system is already overburdened by military load.

Under the loan program, producers are encouraged to store their oats either in local warehouses or on the farm, thus holding the crop back from terminals and spreading the marketings over a longer period. A deduction of 7 cents per bushel will be made on warehoused oats under loan unless the producer pays the storage charges thru April 30, 1946.

Loans will be made only on oats grading No. 3 or better. Oats grading weevily, smutty, ergotty, garlicky or those containing more than 14½ percent moisture will not be eligible,

Loans will be made until December 31, 1945, and will mature on April 30, 1946 or earlier on demand.

The following were present at a birthday party for Caroline Aspelin Thursday evening at her home: Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fricker and children, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson and Dorothy, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Gusa, Mrs. Backlund, Mrs. Paul Olson, Mrs. Frank Smith and Mrs. E. Henning.

The following visited at the G. O. Ericksen home last Friday evening: Mrs. A. Rodahl Mrs. Hilmer Lunke and Pfc. and Mrs. Paul Schenke and daughters of Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lunke and family Mr. and Mrs. Bertil Ness and girls, Mrs. Ole Lunke and Arthur and Verna Peterson visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Engen Sunday evening, it being the latters birthday.

School Opened Here Tuesday

Seeds Wanted

Our Government is asking for an increased production of all grass seeds to meet the demands of reconversion throughout the world. Alfalfa, Red Clover, and Sweet Clover fields look reasonably promising for a seed crop. Present seed prices will show a vesy substantial profit if a reasonable seed yield should be obtained.

We are sure that you would like to help in this reconversion program by harvesting your seeds and being that fields look promising, may we suggest holding off cutting these fields until a later date as there is a reasonable abundance of hay and if a seed crop can be taken off, we can have in mind that in addition to the market price, that the Government also is paying additional bonusus.

Poison grasshoppers that appear in the Alfalfa. They are the big menace to seed pods as they clip them off and chances are that one dose will do the job. This costing only the labor of putting it on.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College Searcy, Arkansas

Dead Wood

In my early 20's I had frequent dealings with a small but old and reputable manufacturing corporation. One day I lunched with a gray-haired employee, the superintendent, who was quite unhappy. They had lost their biggest contract. The lost customer was a young and thrifty retail firm whose needs had finally grown too large for the old manufacturer to supply.

Price had been a consideration, of course. My companion admitted that several competitors could quote a lower price and make a profit when his plant could not. It was on account of the modern, high-speed equipment which the competitors used. Naturally I asked why ~~the old house couldn't install~~ better machinery. The superintendent simply wagged his head and said, "dead wood."

Unused Hands

"Our big boss is the chairman," he explained. "His brother is president of the company. Each of them has a son who is a vice-president. The secretary and the treasurer are both sons-in-law. I don't see any of them twice a year but they draw salaries as big as mine. We can't buy new equipment. Sometimes we are hard put to pay for current materials promptly."

This was 25 years ago when a lot of ranting (not altogether unjustified) was heard about the "idle rich." But the tables have turned. America's threat now is "idle poor." This is more dangerous because the poor are more numerous. Idle hands can ride any business to the ground because they retard production. Indifferent workers are no less guilty than pampered payrollers.

Public Enemies

I was much impressed by an article in the Houston Press a few weeks ago, written by a returned service man. He had started to work in an office soon after he was discharged and, six weeks later, penned his contempt for civilian workers, men and women. They systematically fritter away 50% of their working time, he charged. They can do it because of the scarcity of workers.

There is an imported, alien doctrine that capitalists will make too much profit for the good of the public unless workers retard production some way. It is venomous. National enemies at whom American soldiers are thrusting bayonets today are relatively harmless. They are much less liable to do humanity permanent harm than the slick saboteurs who plant a philosophy of idleness in the minds of honest workers.

Work and Live

America's unique place among world powers, the singularly high standard of living among American workers and farmers, our national income and our national safety, depend on work. Ability and willingness to make things well and make them fast have put the United States on top of the world. It is the secret of American prosperity, but in a startling degree our people are being led away from the idea.

The world soon will be a market for manufactured goods, a market of millions of people in poverty. If America fails to supply their needs, quickly and at a price (possible with efficient production) then cheap-labor countries will take the business. Dead wood can cheat Uncle Sam out of world trade and leave us to stew again in our own over-supply, with low wages and poor living conditions which we don't want and which aren't necessary.

4-H Club Achievement Days

Two local achievement days were held last week in preparation for the county achievement days being held at Middle River on Friday and at Warren on Saturday. The Viking and Gatzke clubs both newly organized clubs, held local achievement days Friday. These clubs like the others in Marshall County and including Carlson, Holt and Steiner Clubs will be represented on Friday and Saturday.

All exhibits are to be in place by 11 a. m. on Friday at Middle River and by 11 on Saturday at Warren.

Mr. H. A. Pflughhoefr, District Club Agent, has been secured to assist with judging.

Eight trips to the Junior Livestock Show will be determined on Saturday. The premiums are provided by the Marshall County Agricultural Society.

Returned From Michigan

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Engstrom and boys arrived here last week from Detroit, Michigan where Mr. Engstrom had been employed during the war. He states that the shops there closed down in a hurry when this war was over and that it may take some time for reconversion to peace time production of civilian products.

The following families were present from here at the Ben Lardy home at St. Hilaire on Sunday at a large family reunion Mrs. Henry Swanson of Spokane, Wash., Mrs. O. B. Johnson and Murnet, Orris Johnson Geo. Johnson, Tony Peterson, Ray Sagstuen, O. T. Ness, Orlin Ness.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Rose and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Swan of Thief River Falls were Sunday visitors at the Herb Johnson home.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

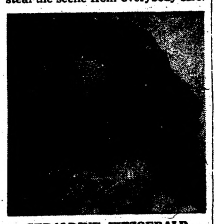
By VIRGINIA VALE

UNIVERSAL has given us another of those top-notch psychological mysteries, one as good as "The Suspect." This time it's "Uncle Harry," with a star-studded cast — George Sanders, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Ella Raines and Sara Allgood, who has only to walk across a room to steal the scene from everybody else.



GERALDINE FITZGERALD

You'll see superb acting all through the picture, especially in some of Geraldine Fitzgerald's scenes. It's a picture that causes rather violent reactions — people are going to like it tremendously or argue about it for weeks because they wanted a different ending. And that's a sure sign that a picture is exceptional; if it isn't nobody cares how it turns out.

—*—

Dennis Morgan, star of "Christmas in Connecticut," is the only Hollywood star who has worked in pictures under three different names, so far as we know. At Metro he used his own name, Stanley Morner. At Paramount, Richard Stanley. Warners' gave him his present name.

—*—

If you've just stubbed your toe on a disappointment, here's encouragement for you. Clark Gable lost his first film job because "his ears are too big." George Brent and Humphrey Bogart were dropped by contract holders because they "weren't convincing in western drama." And Bette Davis' name must still embarrass certain executives who let her go "because she has no sex appeal."

—*—

It looks as if the movie stars can't resist the restaurant business. During filming of "Young Widow," Louis Hayward had an architect make plans for a cafe to be opened when the war ended, and Alan Ladd's going into partnership in a hamburger stand.

—*—

Frank Sinatra seems to be set for the next five years in radio. He's signed a contract for 39 weeks with a cigarette company, with options covering that time. He'll replace "Which is Which," for which "Detect and Collect" substituted this summer. He'll be heard Wednesday nights, on CBS. He says one of the best things about the program is the fact that Mann Holiner will be the producer — thinks Holiner's the best producer in the business.

—*—

The only motion picture footage of the atom smasher, which played an important part in experiments leading to the development of the atomic bomb, will be seen in "Miracle Makers," a Warner's short subject now ready for immediate release. Dr. O. E. Lawrence, who developed the cyclotron, as it's called, was technical adviser on the sequence and appears in the film.

—*—

Jack Smith, who now has his own show on CBS, joins Bing Crosby, Ginny Simms and all the others who've started on the air singing with a trio and graduated to stardom. Jack was in high school when he and two friends landed the job vacated by Bing Crosby's Rhythm Boys at the Cocoanut Grove. He spends his free time teaching returned soldiers at the New York School of Artcraft Instruments.

—*—

Twentieth Century - Fox's "The House on 92nd Street," dealing with the development of the atomic bomb, is based entirely on records of the FBI, showing their work in counteracting enemy agents' attempts to obtain the secret. It was made secretly in New York, Washington and other locales, and sequences dealing directly with the bomb were omitted till after it had been used in Japan.

Advance Fall Millinery Shows Reveal Exciting Style Trends

(Pictures from Chicago Fashion Industries.)

HEIGHT, bulk, rounded lines, thick edges completely transform hat silhouettes for fall. The new bulky brims and tall crowns, some draped or shirred to look imposing, give an entirely different and more important look than last year's flat tops. Berets look rounded and sort of inflated, pillboxes have grown so tall and boxy that only seeing is believing, visor brims take on high balloon-like crowns, the entire bespeaking a "more hat" vogue.

While the new-type hats are flattering with every hair style, most of them will be found particularly adaptable to the popular "up" hair-do. In fact, they have been especially tuned to accommodate upswept hair with topknot curl and other soft arrangements.

One of the favorites for immediate wear is the new off-face roller after the manner of the hat pictured below to the right. This most likable and shapely little felt requires little trimming to "show it off." In this instance a pert ribbon cocarde is held in place with two button-like ornaments.

The cossack style centered in the group is one of the best sellers in the initial fall showings. It is the sort that will declare the "new look" at a glance. The band of ribbon ending in a decorative arrangement of loops and ends is most attractive. It will look stunning with your fall suit or your smart belted-in shortie coat.

Another highlight of the season is the hat with a tiny roll brim surmounted with an imposing balloon draped crown as shown below to the left in the group. This is one of the new-style shapes that is so self-glamorous it requires little or no trimming. Many of the new hats are just like that, so shapely that interest centers about contour more than anything else. The word "success" is written all over this sensationally new-looking felt.

However, the prospects are for most elaborately trimmed millinery for late fall and winter wear. Hats will be gorgeously be-feathered and lavishly garnitured with ribbons, embroidery and glitter-glamour decor. Fur will be played up in trimming accents, and for the entire hat in every possible way. Even now hats are being shown with a flash of fur trim that tunes most effectively into the autumn scene. As a forerunner of the big vogue for fur that is on its way, you will find fetching little models as the hat shown above to the left. Its swish of silver fox pompons not only gives it style distinction, but it will be found the answer to what type hat to wear with the handsome silver fox scarf to complete a patrician ensemble.

A very effective use of ostrich is seen in the lovely off-face hat pictured above to the right. This charming use of ostrich as a halo about the upturned face-framing brim is but a forerunner of that which is to be this fall in way of extravagantly beautiful ostrich.

One of the new trends that makes for charming millinery is seen in the cunning bonnet types that are showing up in the new fall collections. These include endless versions, from girlish little flat scoops to wide face-framing brims with high crowns. Rumor has it that before the season is over we will be wearing quaint little bonnets that tie under the chin with pretty bows of ribbon or lace.

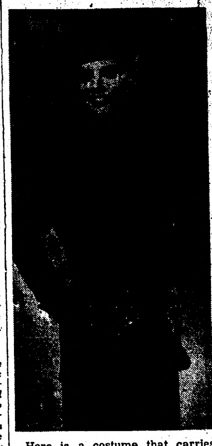
New Fall Costume



Here is a costume that carries that new fall look. For dramatic gesture, it takes on stunning red lizard trapunto detail in a manner that bespeaks high style distinction. The one-piece dress underneath has a black satin top.

Velvet in Comeback Combined With Wool

We haven't been seeing so much of velvet in the past several seasons, but this season it is staging a real comeback. Velvet in combination with wool is featured smartly in the new collections. The coat with velvet sleeves has high fashion rank. Dresses with velvet yokes are very smart also suits the jackets of which half velvet and half wool. Velvet tunic suits for restaurant wear present a most intriguing theme. They have deep armhole sleeves and a softly belted waistline. Some velvet hats are seen in the new collections with soft plumage or jewelled ornament.

Poncho Blouses Are Chic, And Easy to Launder, Too

Write "poncho blouse" on your shopping list. The poncho blouse is a real "must have" for the girl that wants a simple easy-to-launder blouse to wear with her suit or to complete her chic blouse-and-skirt costume. The poncho blouse is a one-piece affair that has a pretty neckline and that takes a minimum of material to make and best of all it opens out flat for easy ironing. You slip it over the head (it has no under-arm seams) but the trick is that the front part fastens at the back and the back section is brought to the front by way of short sash ends which tie at the front waistline. Excellent patterns are easily available for the poncho blouse, or you can get charming styles all made up ready to wear.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

"Hard Sponge," a new synthetic rubber product developed by B. F. Goodrich, combines great strength with extreme lightness. Experiments point to its possible use in airplane wings.

A type of vine recently discovered in China, which attaches itself to trees and other objects, has been found to yield latex (natural rubber). Stems grow to 50 feet in length and yield about a pound of latex.

Inner tubes made with a special type of synthetic rubber hold air much longer than tubes made of natural rubber.

Put FRAM Oil Filters on All Three!

HERE'S how to save a lot of long, costly repairs . . . lengthen the life of your car, truck, tractor or stationary engine. Just install Fram oil filters!

WHY EVERY ENGINE NEEDS FRAM
During normal operation, dirt, dust, grit and other abrasives are sucked into engines. At the same time carbon and sludge are formed within the engines. Unless filtered out, the dirt and carbon grind away moving parts, while the sticky sludge clogs oil channels to hamper lubrication and increase wear. But with a Fram, these impurities are filtered out, to keep motor oil visually clean! That's why millions of Fram filters and cartridges are used by our armed forces—why Fram is standard equipment on more than 75 famous car, truck, tractor, bus, marine and stationary engines. Experts agree on Fram!

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE
Remember, a Fram oil filter must satisfy you, or you get your money back. If your equipment is already filter-equipped, Fram replacement cartridges can be put in present filters to step up performance. Remember, Fram oil filters are easy to install and cartridges may be changed in a jiffy. So see your dealer today! Find out "How's Your Oil Filter?" The Dipstick tells the story!

"Do's and Don'ts" for Your Success in Canning Tomatoes

The huge number of new home canners who sail through with flying colors, while those who boast of years of experience flounder, is amazing. Or is it? Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, manufacturers of glass fruit jars, sees nothing unusual in the situation because she finds it easier to teach a person who has never canned than to "unteach" one backed by years of haphazard experience.

To prove her point, Miss Kimbrough calls attention to the fact that tomatoes rate top place in both ease of canning and spoilage after canning. What's the answer? Sheer carelessness plus old-fashioned open-kettle canning. Anybody can rig up a water-bath canner for processing fruits and tomatoes. A lard can or a wash boiler, fitted with some sort of platform to hold the jar half an inch or so from the bottom of the utensil is all that is needed for a water-bath.

Carelessness Causes Spoilage

Spoilage of water-bath processed tomatoes is usually traceable to carelessness in selection and preparation or failure to follow the manufacturer's latest instructions. Pre-war instructions should in most instances be forgotten. Remembering them gets a lot of old-timers into trouble.

Tomatoes should ripen on the vine and be used as soon as they are firm ripe. They should be canned the day they are gathered, but if kept cool they may stand as much as 24 hours before processing. This is mentioned because some persons must depend upon a market for their supply. Any tomato containing a decayed spot, no matter how small, should be discarded. Canning those from which such spots have been removed leads to spoilage. Sound over-ripe ones and those from which small spots have been cut may be made into chili sauce or ketchup—never, never into juice. Juice requires sound tomatoes.

The jars, caps, rubbers, and canner should be ready before one prepares the tomatoes. Every tomato should be carefully washed before it is scalded for skinning. If you have no wire basket, a square of cheese cloth will serve the purpose of holding tomatoes for scalding. Simply put enough tomatoes for filling one or two jars on the cloth, catch up the four ends of the square, and hold the "bag" in boiling water from one-half to one minute. Then, if you like, dip the bag in cold water, making it a little easier to remove the skins. Next use a sharp pointed knife to remove every bit of the core, slip the skins, cut away any green or white spots and drop the tomato into a clean hot jar. Cut tomatoes if they won't go in whole. After two or three tomatoes are in the jar, press them with a clean wooden spoon (one which has been boiled) until they crack and the juice runs out to fill the spaces between the fruit. Yes, "fruit" is right. We call them vegetables because they grow in gardens. When the jar has been filled to within about one inch of the top, add salt to suit your taste, and adjust the cap according to the manufacturer's instructions. After two or three jars have been filled, ease them down in the canner.

Have the water in the canner steaming but not boiling. When all the jars are in, the water in the canner should cover them an inch or more and should be brought to boiling as quickly as possible. Keep it boiling steadily but gently. When processing time (from 30 to 45 minutes) is up, remove the jars, stand them out of a draft and several inches apart to cool. If most of the pulp goes to the top of the jar and the juice stays at the bottom, it is because the tomatoes were poor quality, picked green, packed too loose, or the water in the canner boiled too hard.

The cold pack, water-bath processed method is probably preferred by the majority of authorities on the subject but for the last few years there has been a trend toward hot packing.

Selection and preparation for hot packing is the same as for cold packing. After the cores and skins are removed, the tomatoes are quartered and cooked until they have boiled gently for 5 minutes. Then they are put into hot jars and processed 20 minutes in a hot-water bath canner.

Boil Tomatoes Slowly

Open kettle? That's what causes most of the spoilage! Those who are not willing to adopt the more modern methods should remember that the prepared tomatoes should be boiled slowly for 20 minutes, then poured into hot jars. The kettle of tomatoes and the pans of water holding jars, caps, and rubbers, should stay over the heat so that a jar may be lifted out of boiling water, placed on a cloth folded in a pan, then filled with boiling tomatoes, and sealed lightning quick.

Mason jars which are to be sealed with zinc caps and Ideal jars may be filled to the top but should not be overflowed. About one-half inch head space should be left when glass top or two-piece metal Vacu-Seal caps are used.

Yes, open kettle canning is hot work and results are uncertain, so why not now, since food is so priceless, change to better methods? Of course, the newest is not always the best. For example, oven canning, new in comparison to some of the others, has been given a fair trial and condemned because it is unreliable and dangerous.

A great many persons like to process tomatoes ten minutes at five pounds in a steam pressure cooker. This is safe enough but tends to over-cook the tomatoes, so our best home canners use a water bath for processing all acid foods.

LOOKING AHEAD

President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Frozen Hopes

Saying what a man earns, expressing it in cents per hour or dollars per year, does not tell much about the measure of prosperity he enjoys. Good living depends on so many things that change from time to time and differ from place to place. Prosperity depends, in very large part, on what people must pay for the things they need and want.

Putting the conveniences and luxuries of life in reach of a large number of people helps to build a nation's prosperity. Franklin's discovery of electricity became a great discovery when electric lights began costing less than oil lamps. The automobile became a great invention when cars were priced down where only rich people could afford to own carriage horses.

Paying for Service

Plain people pay richly for favors; plain people are so many. Names like Edison, McCormick and Ford stand for huge estates because these men did a real service for a lot of plain people. It is because they hoisted a wholesome standard of living in a free country. Thousands of men have done the same thing on a smaller scale and profited handsomely.

Actually, the thing that inspires mechanical inventors to invent, the thing that fires scientific explorers to explore, is the chance to earn from a free people the rich reward for a valuable service. Once upon a time in the United States of America men who had ideas could afford to develop them. They can't do it now. How I hope those days soon return.

Big Ideas on Sale

Edison, McCormick and Ford didn't need to hawk their ideas, neither did Bissell, Denton, Parker and O'Sullivan, but Foster Gunnison had to sell his. Gunnison's inventions came later. Do you ask, "Who is this Gunnison man?" Well, he is a great inventor, not yet famous. But, unless I miss my guess, he is America's post-war Henry Ford.

Gunnison invented a prefabricated house and worked out a plan to build it in mass production. His units were scientifically constructed, insulation built in, thoroughly modern in every detail. Individually, his house models are so different that a tourist might drive past 100 of them in a row and never guess that they were drawn by the same architect.

Alike and Different

I could talk for hours about Gunnison houses. They come in eight sizes with great variety in looks. They are far better than any house possible to build of old-line materials in any community for the same money. They have everything from bathtub to garbage grinder, economy and convenience; a poor man's palace, amortized to $1 a day. But the inventor sold to the U. S. Steel Corporation.—Why?

He lacked capital and, under today's tax laws, never could make much profit. The giant corporation can run the project in the red and deduct early losses from war profits, most of which the government will take anyway. Unless our war-time tax laws are changed, every fertile idea in this inventive nation will have to hatch under the wing of some huge corporation that exists already.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Lies the one we loved so dearly,
In his silent lonely grave,
Peaceful be your sleep dear son and brother.
It is sweet to breathe your name,
In life we loved you dearly
In death we do the same,
Just one year ago you left us,
Now we miss you son and brother dear,
As we drop a silent tear
You shall never be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade
Loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.

HOME CANNERS ASKED TO "CARRY ON" BY F.D.R.

The food outlook is so dark throughout the world that, in January, our habitually optimistic President asked Victory Gardeners and Home Canners to "carry on until the war is won." Since then we have been told over and over that the only sure way to have enough vegetables for our own use is to grow and can them.

"But please," advises Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, makers of glass fruit jars, "before you put your shoulder to the home canning wheel, take time to learn how jars and caps should be used. It is also smart to plan ahead, to buy ahead, so that canning time will not find you scurrying around trying to find equipment needed for the job. You may not find your favorite jar and cap unless you shop early in the season or it may be that merchants don't keep them because other styles sell better. If your home is on the West Coast, you may not see any all-glass lightning type jars because most of your neighbors prefer a Mason jar with two-piece metal cap. The opposite is true of New England; the lightning type is a best seller there. The majority of home canners in Southern, Central and Northern states have always demanded Masons with one-piece zinc caps.

Zinc Caps Supply Uncertain

"No zinc caps could be made at the beginning of the war. Now the backlog of zinc has grown large enough to permit the manufacture of a large quantity of caps. Will there be enough to supply the demand? That's a Seventy-Four Dollar question—nobody knows what the demand will be. But, we do know labor is scarce and shipping facilities are not what we would like them to be.

"A great many jars will have Glass Top Seal (glass lid, rubber ring, metal screw band) caps. There will also be Mason jars with two-piece metal vacu-seal caps—these are the ones with sealing compound flowed around the edge of the lid to take the place of a regular jar rubber. The nicest of the two-piece metal caps have dome shaped lids which pull down when a good vacuum seal takes place.

"Half pints are being made and so are wide mouth jars but neither is as plentiful as before the war.

"No matter what size home canning jar and style cap you decide to use, no matter whether it is your first or fiftieth year of canning, it will pay to choose a nationally known brand and to use it by the step-by-step instructions printed on the circular packed with the jars and on the cap carton. It cost the manufacturer money to supply those up-to-date instructions and it is likely to cost home canners time, money, and precious food if instructions are not followed."

Gov't Loans On Oats Crop

Marshall County farmers can get Government loans on their oats crops this year for the first time. The county loan rate is 42 cents per bushel. Loans will be made through the county AAA office.

Pointing out the need for the oats program, County AAA Chairman Charles N. Kranz said that it is "just common sense" to store the crop under loan until the railroads can handle it. The oats crop is estimated at the largest in 25 years, and the wheat crop is expected to break all records. Unchecked movement of these two crops to market comes at a time when the country trans portation system is already overburdened by military load.

Under the loan program, producers are encouraged to store their oats either in local warehouses or on the farm, thus holding the crop back from terminals and spreading the marketings over a longer period. A deduction of 7 cents per bushel will be made on warehoused oats under loan unless the producer pays the storage charges thru April 30, 1946.

Loans will be made only on oats grading No. 3 or better. Oats grading weevily, smutty, ergotty, garlicky or those containing more than 14½ percent moisture will not be eligible.

Loans will be made until December 31, 1945, and will mature on April 30, 1946 or earlier on demand.

Independence

Arkansas and Mississippi both can have splendid public schools without accepting financial aid from anywhere. I am prepared to prove this statement with figures I presented early in May to the Education Committee of the House of Representatives in Washington. Moreover, if these states can do well without help, any of the other states can do likewise. Federal aid is not needed anywhere.

I have singled out Arkansas and Mississippi for good reason. It has bearing on the subject in hand. Measured by a money standard, these two states are lowest on the educational roster. Only one state has less income per person than Arkansas, provides less school money per student and pays its teachers less; that's Mississippi. These are our two low states in the respects named.

There is a Reason

Poor as these two states are on a basis of income per capita, each of them has more net worth than the federal government. Our national debt probably will reach 300 billion dollars before the war is over. Mississippi had a cash surplus of 11 million dollars last year and Arkansas accumulated 45 million during recent years. Arkansas schools are inadequate, due to politics, not poverty.

What the school system in my home state needs is re-organizing, not subsidizing. For example: About a year ago there were 106 school districts with assessed valuations below $10,000. Some districts could not raise $100 a year from local taxes. School districts varied in size from one square mile to 100 square miles.

Why Squander Money?

There is one community in Arkansas which, although it has only 35 students all-told, is made up of six school districts and thus uses six busses to take the 35 students to school and back each day. Transportation costs $600 a month when one bus might easily do the whole job at a cost of $150 a month. The saving of $450 would pay three teachers at the prevailing Arkansas scale.

The problem is local and political. More money for such an inefficient operation probably would tend to aggravate a bad situation and make it even harder to remedy. The federal government spent $80,000 for a WPA survey of Arkansas schools in 1937 and the analysis showed that the state could have a good school system for an outlay of 17 million dollars a year. The outlay was made promptly.

Taxpayers Respond

Arkansas' income per person has more than doubled since 1939, due to new industries and new discoveries of oil and bauxite. More than 20 million dollars were spent for education in Arkansas last year, and a recent legislature raised that figure considerably for the next biennium. Already about 25% more money is being spent on Arkansas schools than the government-supported survey called adequate in 1937.

This however is not enough. Arkansas should have better schools; better financed. Arkansas teachers should be better paid, probably the salary scale ought to be doubled. I'm for it when the system is re-organized and made efficient, but I oppose federal aid. Easy money would sacrifice state sovereignty on the altar of politics when we are able, really, to increase our school revenue as soon and as fast as conditions justify.

They Made a Mess of Recipient's Self-Esteem

Girls who broke off their engagements to servicemen in a certain outfit in the Southwest Pacific received a severe shock.

When a man out there received a letter from his girl friend, saying she was tired of waiting, he didn't, as a rule, retire to nurse his broken heart in solitude. He would pin the letter on the camp notice board.

The other men in the unit would then read the letter and scribble on it what they thought of the girl. Then after three or four days it was taken down and mailed back to her.

These candid symposiums were known as "mess pots."

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

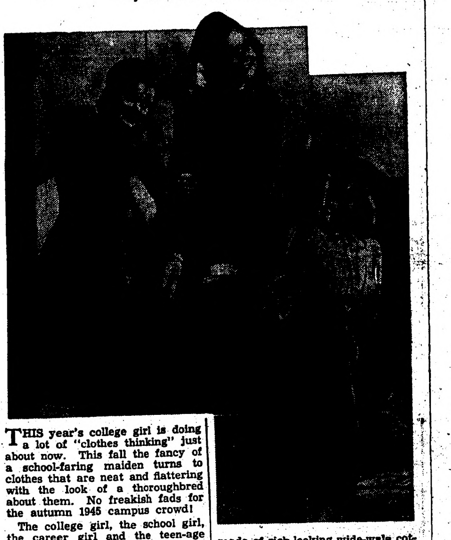
DOAN'S PILLS

Cottons, in Velveteen and Plush To Rule Campus Fashion Picture

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



THIS year's college girl is doing a lot of "clothes thinking" just about now. This fall the fancy of a school-faring maiden turns to clothes that are neat and flattering with the look of a thoroughbred about them. No freakish fads for the autumn 1945 campus crowd!

The college girl, the school girl, the career girl and the teen-age group who know their fashions have become definitely cotton-conscious these days. The new "rave" is the elegant looking velveteens in black and adorable colors, also the very handsome corduroys that are being made up into coats and suits. There's a new wide-wale cotton plush, too, that is setting a new high in sophisticated cottons.

No doubt the girl going away to school will start her first semester with a few cotton casuals, for it's smart to wear cotton washables. She will be glad she took a chic gingham frock and perhaps a flattering fresh chambray, the sort that looks just right during early warm autumn days under a color-lovely cardigan. There will be dark cotton dirndls in her trunk too, some banded in gay Latin colors; also a very special one with inset border of white eyelet to be worn with her dainty batiste drop-shoulder blouse.

A raft of sturdy campus cottons should be taken along. In the news were pedal-pushers of pin-wale corduroy that's tough and washable. The girls say they are less cumbersome than slacks because of their mid-calf length. Choosing mix-and-match jackets, skirts, pajamas and pedal pushers is great fun. The short boxy flare-back jacket with Chinese collar is a winner, as is also the new lumberjacket that ties with drawstring waist.

When it comes to "date" duds here's where luxury cottons are making a great splurge. A brilliant future is predicted for suits and coats made of rich-looking wide-wale cotton plush. An intriguing style story is told for the 1945 college girl or the younger seminary daughter by Emily Wilkens in the brown wide-wale cotton plush suit as shown centered in the illustration. High neck, broad shoulders, and the tiny waist give a high-style slant on present-day trends. The shoulderline, extending in a wing-like effect, adds width and accents the small waistline by way of contrast. The tiny visor cap matches. This suit will certainly "go places" this fall.

Because the much-beloved velveteen can be had only in dibs and dabs this year (which is why one should buy early) designers are ingeniously working it into dresses using bright wools for contrast. In the junior "date" dress, shown to the left, cotton plays duet with wool in most charming fashion. The shoulder yoke and wide hem are of black velveteen. The rest of the bodice and skirt are violet wool. Red wool binds sleeves and waistline, also outlines the velveteen all around. Here's a type dress that will make "a picture" at college teas and informal dances.

Pale gold and bottle green prove a flattering color combination in wool and cotton for the dress shown to the right below. Green corduroy forms a corselet waist front and full skirt, while gold wool is used for sleeves and bodice top. Rectangular shaped silver nailheads trim the shoulder yoke and sleeve cuffs. Note the clever touch of wool ties.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Slim Silhouette

It's dresses of the lovely lady type that bespeak patrician style in every detail that best-dressed women want. To achieve a slim and svelte silhouette for this good-looking purple wool fall costume, the designer, Joe Copeland, extends the high-necked bodice for the dress into a deep point into the skirt and puckers the skirt on each side in a subtle form-fitting way. Here you see also a charming interpretation of a very new and very important trimming trend, which has to do with necklace and bracelet embroidered right on the material itself in a realistic jewelry effect. East Indian embroidery in pearls and gold makes the "necklace" on the cap-sleeved dress and the single "bracelet" for the bolero.

'Curved Contours' New Fashion Dictate

A new element has entered into the field of costume design. It's "curves." This styling technique is seen in the soft rounded shoulders that give a very different silhouette from last year. The command of fashion to "curve your contours" is also reflected in the way side fastenings and drapes take on a curved sweep rather than a straight or angular movement. Yokes are rounded too, instead of being square-cornered. Hips have an out-curve, while waists have an in-curve. Compare your last year's suit with your this year's suit, or place your last season's felt hat alongside the fall hat you've just bought, with its rounded, bulky, yet flattering new brim, and you will see how designers are obeying fashion's edict to "curve your contours."

Jewelled Belts Set Off Sophisticated Gowns

Much ado is being made about belts and corselet effects this season. This season belts have been glamorized into real show pieces. In some instances the jewel work and metal embroidery arrives at almost barbaric splendor. The new fad is to wear an eye-thrilling belt with a black gown of sophisticated simplicity and not another ornament except, perhaps, a bracelet. The new corselet midriff treatments on dressy gowns are also beautifully worked out in rich jewelry embroidery.

Striped Jersey Suit

Jersey is becoming increasingly important either in wool or rayon weave. Gaily colorful striped jersey delights the teen-ager and it is also smart for career-girl cardigan blouses. Just the thing for the school girl is a jacket and skirt dress of striped jersey in red and white or multi-color stripe.

Ship's Paying-Off Pennant Extends Length of Vessel

One of the oddest signals flown by a ship is the white paying-off pennant which is hoisted on a British naval vessel to show that it is homeward bound to be put out of commission, says Collier's.

Although this pennant is only two inches wide, its length is equivalent to that of the ship, which may be hundreds of feet. Therefore, a small balloon has to be attached to the end of the ribbonlike streamer to keep it in the air.

Household Hints

It is not practical to unravel a machine-knit sweater with side seams. Best you can do is treat it like regular fabric and cut into small pieces for remaking. If this is done, seams must be carefully overcast.

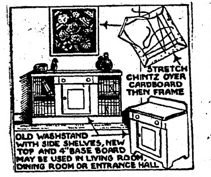
New Dignity Added To Old Wash Stand

IF YOU have a wash stand of the bowl and pitcher era, here is a way to give it new dignity. Add open shelves at the ends with a new base and top for the whole piece, and you have smart, long lines for a chest to fill an important wall space. The shelves are added to the ends of the stand first with small angle irons. The end boards come next, then the top of plywood with a plain finishing piece around it. The new baseboard is then added and the piece is finished to match the woodwork of the room.



STRETCH CHINTZ OVER CARDBOARD THEN FRAME
OLD WASHSTAND WITH SIDE SHELVES, NEW TOP AND 4" BASE BOARD MAY BE USED IN LIVING ROOM, DINING ROOM OR ENTRANCE HALL

The sketch also shows a framed panel which helps to give the ensemble quite an air. It is an old picture frame without a glass with a handsome remnant of flowered chintz stretched over cardboard and then varnished to look like an old oil painting.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

B. F. Goodrich has produced an airplane tire that figuratively sprouts wings. When wheels are lowered for landing, special vanes or flaps on tire cause it to rotate, which overcomes severe scuffing and drag when wheels hit runway.

American scientists and engineers have achieved in five years with synthetic rubber what it took nearly 70 years to accomplish with natural rubber.

Bees upset many plans for cross pollination of fruit trees until B. F. Goodrich developed a "spider web" rubber spray as a blossom protector.

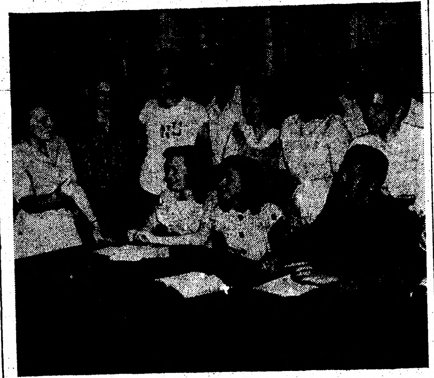
There was nothing but ruin for the Japs to take over and there is nothing left of the strong prewar fortification now that the island is back in the hands of America.

Youth to Spur Drive on Crime



Fearful of a possible increase in juvenile delinquency, civil, religious and business leaders asked the youth of Chicago to redouble efforts for the welfare of youngsters. Plane Speedily Strings Wires Over Mountains

As the stringing of military telephone lines through swamps and jungles and over mountains is slow and dangerous work, a method of laying such wire from a plane has been perfected, and was demonstrated a short time ago in the Great Smoky mountains of Tennessee by an army plane, says Collier's. Flying at 150 miles an hour, it parachuted the lead end to one group of engineers, paid out 16 miles of wire and dropped the far end to another group, in less than seven minutes.

Connecting the lead end to a field set, one member of the first group talked for four minutes with a man in the air, and thereby established for the first time communication over wire between the ground and a plane in flight.

Uncle Phil Says:

SOME men always put off until tomorrow that which becomes due today!

Credit is like a looking glass—once it is broken, it is gone.

There would be fewer day dreamers if there was a way of taxing a man's yearning.

All thieves die poor. It must be the excitement they work for.

All men are born equal; it's what they do afterwards that makes the difference.

Don't tell fish stories to a man who doesn't care a whoop about fishing. There are some such men.

When a man falls in love with himself, it is the beginning of a lifelong romance.

Many a man who considers himself high caliber is just a big bore.

Jobs Open In Pulp Woods

All of us believe in the future of America. We believe that the present uncertainty is only a temporary period between war prosperity and an era of peacetime plenty.

But believing is not enough. That, alone, is not the answer to unemployment and the other hazards of reconversion through which we are passing. The only solution for unemployment is—JOBS.

We, in this community, are fortunate. Of course, the national situation is bound to have some influence on each State and County of the nation, but by and large we have no reconversion problems here. Our farms and forests are producing commodities as necessary to the well-being of the country and as urgently needed now as during the war. A job is waiting for most anyone who wishes to work.

Of course, working on a farm or cutting pulpwood in the forests does not pay the swollen wages abtainable from some of the big city war industries before V-J Day. But living and working here does not cut wide gaps into a paycheck either, with everything from rent to recreation at inflated prices. In fact, taking all things into consideration, it is possible to live better and save more at current wages here than could be done with considerable higher city wages.

Nor are current wages low. Current farm prices enable farmers to earn and pay good wages, while pay for pulpwood cutters and haulers and other workers in forest industries are higher than they have ever been.

If anybody wants good living, doing healthy and invigorating work at good wages, he can find it on one of neighboring farms or in cutting urgently needed spruce and balsam for one of our neighboring pulp mills.

There is no reconversion problem here.

J. P. Augustine returned here Tuesday from Goodhue, Minn., where he had spent a few days visiting relatives. He reported that the corn down there was no further advanced then up here and, that it was getting too dry for plowing.

World To End This Friday

PASADENA, CALIFORNIA—"In a manner similar to the explosion of an atomic bomb," says Rev. Chas. G. Long, retired missionary, "the world is coming to an end this Friday.

Long and 50 followers ended 24 hours of wakeful fasting at sunset Monday but will continue preparatory praying "until the end of the world."

Basing his prophecy on a vision seven years ago, Long admits some possibility of error in his calculations. "The end could be any day from the 21st through the 30th of September."

Long says that in his vision a luminous arm wrote the figures "610" on a blackboard three times, then added beneath them the figures "1160" "1290" and "1335." "A small voice explained," he says, "the 1870 marked the end of a papal supremacy, the 1900 total the beginning of the 20th century and the 1945 total the last year of this sincrushed world."

WHAT WILL $3.00 BUY TODAY?

A good steak dinner for two (if you can get it—)
A box of cigars (if you can get it—)
Or... a month's electric service for the average family—and you can get it, at the snap of a switch.

What else gives you so much for the money as electric service? Almost countless times in the course of a month, you snap switches and plug into outlets. Yet, all this service at your fingertips day and night costs less than an evening's entertainment. And there's no waiting in line—no coupons, no rationing—there's ample electricity for all essential purposes, the cost is lower than ever before—and it's all good, prewar quality

Rail Quiz

What is the meaning of "C. O. D." and how did the term originate?

The familiar initials "C. O. D." meaning "collect on delivery," originated in 1841 when a shipper asked the express company to collect payment for the goods from the consignee at the time of delivery. Today, some 6,000,000 shipments by Railway Express Agency and large numbers of L. C. L. freight shipments are forwarded annually C. O. D., i.e., each with an accompanying invoice to be paid to the express agency or railroad at the time of delivery. The amount collected is forwarded promptly to the shipper.

LOOKING AHEAD

President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Economic Security

Back in 1865 senators and representatives in the Congress of the United States began drawing $5,000 a year; $100 a week. That was good pay 80 years ago but a first-class welder can do better now. Congressmen have had two raises in salary since then. The last one was 20 years ago when they started earning $10,000 a year which was, at the time, a comfortable living for them.

A great many executives in private enterprise earn more money than senators although they do not claim superior ability. Why do our legislators not earn more? Because their salaries are fixed by law and they themselves are the gentlemen who make the laws. They could vote themselves a raise in pay but there is always reluctance to introduce such a bill.

Throughout Government

There are politics in it, of course. Revenue measures never are popular. Congressmen who vote for a dip out of Mr. Taxpayer's pocket come to regret it on election day sometimes, even when the expenditure was a wise one. That's exactly why employees in the Post Office Department haven't had a boost in pay since the congressmen did, a matter of 20 years ago.

Wage rates in private industry have advanced from 42 cents to $1 an hour in the last 20 years. They have more than doubled. Informed authorities say that living costs have gone up 30% or more during that time. Doubled pay for workers in private industry offsets the living costs that are about one-third higher, but what about government people from mail clerks to senators?

Ask for Consideration

One of the biggest newspapers in my state published an advertisement recently, calling the attention of the people of Arkansas to the unhappy plight of the postal employees who serve them. The display advertisement was bought and paid for by the postal workers themselves. In a diplomatic way they are asking their neighbors to help them ask Congress for better wages.

I want to see the postal people earning more money. I favor the passage of currently proposed legislation to boost the pay of senators and representatives 25% or better. I hope to see the day when a self-respecting poor man can afford to represent his state in costly and wealthy Washington. These are details however. It is wrong in principle that government employees wait 20 years for a raise.

Dangerous Bureaucracy

The important thing is that every workman who quits a job in private industry to enter government employ gets his wage scale frozen. The change of work may bring more pay but that's temporary. Whoever works at that job a generation from now will probably be earning the same amount and spending a lot more to live. Remember that the laborer of today is earning senatorial pay for 1865.

These facts are understood well by men of industry and leaders in labor movements. It is encouraging to observe how the Labor-Management Charter, signed in Washington last March by labor union executives and prominent men of business, deals with the subject. In brief it states: Private enterprise is the necessary foundation for the welfare of labor as well as management.

Creating Illusion of High Ceiling in Room

HERE is a fascinating illusion of a high ceiling for a room with slanting walls. The trick is in the way the bed and window curtains are cut and hung, and it is one of dozens which are clearly illustrated in a 32-page booklet called "Make Your Own Curtains." Every detail of making and selecting is explained in this little book; and the types of curtains and draperies can save you many a costly mistake.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Rubber production from native plants in Southern Florida is not promising at present, and commercial planting of tropical rubber plants there is not justified, in the opinion of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

A special railroad coach equipped to demonstrate tyre (British spelling) conservation has traveled throughout England.

More than 40,000,000 heavy-duty truck tires have been produced since Pearl Harbor, even though 90% of the sources of supply of natural rubber were lost at that time.

Tomboy Coats and 'Dorm' Jackets Are Practical for College Girls

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TODAY'S college girl certainly knows her fashions. What's more she is not carried away with flippant ideas, but exercises keen judgment in making her selections. It's part of the college spirit to be intrigued with the idea of plenty pretty-pretty dresses with glamour accessories galore, but when it comes to laying the foundation of her wardrobe, the modern college-faring girl wants snappy utilitarian clothes that tune to campus sports and coal-shortage temperature.

One item that college girls have come to regard as a wardrobe "must" is a sturdy coat that will defy wind, rain and weather, yet look sophisticated to the nth degree. Well, wrapped up in a smart Tomboy coat as shown to the left in the illustration, the smart college girl knows she will be kept warm on a blustery wintry day as well as present a fashion-wise appearance, wherever she goes. A deep brown cotton-backed pile lines this red water-repellant poplin coat, also forming the notched revers. It is the popular three-quarter length, double-breasted with a detachable self belt.

When it comes to indoor comfort, the darling of the "dorm" settles down to study in a jacket of wide wale cotton plush which has a very swank look at the same time that it is ever so "comfy" when thermometers get tempermental on a chill wintry night. Easy, boxy lines and a tiny Chinese collar spell chic for this indoor jacket. A double dose of comfort is achieved with the gray cotton corduroy pedal pushers beneath. These have a red felt trim and are warm and cheery.

A classic cotton corduroy dress that goes everywhere on the campus and is good style for classroom wear too is shown to the right, worn by a bicycle enthusiast who apparently is pedaling her way to health and happiness. The outstanding feature of this dress is a button side-closing from underarm to hem permitting active girls to bowl, skate or bicycle in comfort. The button sleeves and deep front pleat are extra ease features. Clam digger pants made of neon pink corduroy, a featured color this fall, worn with a black jersey shirt provides another type bicycle suit. Designers are making much use of corduroy in pastel colors in the sportswear realm.

Sweaters, as college girls wear them, have a story of many chapters to tell. There is a big demand for cashmeres to be tucked neatly inside the skirt and finished off with a belt. The boxy cardigan is still the top seller. The sleeveless sweater is also finding ready acceptance, either in the pullover type or back-buttoned.

Raincoats, which look like dressy coats, are going over in a big way with the campus group. They have inset belts or drawstring waist ties with the drawstring and bow treatment repeated about the sleeves at the wrist. These come in adorable colors.

Campus dresses reflect an easy-to-wear comfortable look together with an unerring smartness about them. Done in fine wools, either neutral in tone or vividly colorful, they flaunt all the new style points of soft shoulder lines, wide armholes. The new thing this year is to add a glamorous wide belt. The three-piece suit with contrasting clan plaid coat is almost an entire wardrobe within itself. It's one of the season's most popular buys. And don't forget scarfs! You'll be wanting a long wool plaid scarf to wear, one end thrown over one shoulder. Of definite campus appeal also, is the red cotton square which resembles a farmer's handkerchief. It can be worn as a novel belt simply placed under the loops of the favorite jeans as well as around the neck or as a bandanna around the head.

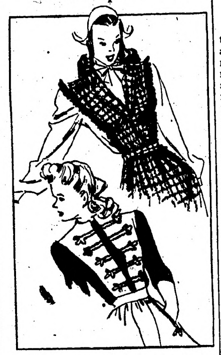
New Jumper Ideas



The present jumper vogue is an incentive to home sewers to get busy and make several so as to add variety to one's wardrobe. The gay plaid jumper shown at the top takes the spotlight because of the intriguing self-fringe edging that outlines the jumper top, continuing down in unbroken line to accent the slot pockets. Below, a simple jumper is transformed with a braid trimming that accents the front opening. This stunning jumper tunes to afternoon occasions.

Elegance Is Keynote Of New Fall Millinery

The very fact that hats have gone to such an extreme height gives an air of new dignity to the millinery scene. Then too, it's been many a season since velvet held such an important place as it bids fair to do this fall and winter in the millinery realm. Before the fall season is far spent you will be seeing richly feathered and be-ribboned velvet hats coming into their own in a blaze of new glory. When it comes to new elegance, the ultimate is being reached in the stunning fur hats that are scheduled to play a stellar role in the months to come. Some of them are quite ponderous looking, especially the Russian-inspired turbans. They are wonderfully becoming but you do have to develop an acquired taste for some of the more extreme types. Then there's the new satin hat fashions that are so smart looking, made up as they are in all the new high-hat types. They are perfect companions for the new black satin frocks for dress-up wear and restaurant and cocktail dates.

Striped Surah and Satin New on Fall Fabric List

While striped surah and striped satin are new on the current fabric list they are really staging a revival, for in the distant yesteryears gay surah and satin stripes flourished in the mode. These silken stripes are being used for choicest of afternoon gowns this season and they are smart made up in suits to wear under the winter coat.

General Eisenhower is authority for the statement that "The Story of GI Joe," the much-acclaimed Ernie Pyle film, is the "most impressive war film ever made."

• • •

Former movie stars now in the service may have been left behind. Hollywood never did produce enough features to star all of them. New stars have been developed. Some of the older ones have been almost forgotten. There is no doubt that many of these movie people, heroes of this war, will have to take a back seat when they return. Some will produce, some will retire and some will enter business.

The new stars include Van Johnson, Eddie Bracken, Cornel Wilde, Robert Walker and dozens more.

• • •

Tough-guy Edward G. Robinson will play the part of a warm-hearted farmer in M.-G.-M.'s "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes." Robinson plays the part of the typical farmer as if he was born to the part, even better than some of the tough-guy movie roles he has had.

• • •

• • •

"Back to Bataan," R.-K.-O. drama of warfare in the Philippines, has met with the approval of heroes of Bataan. The cast includes John Wayne, Anthony Quinn, Beulah Bondi, Fely Franquelli and Leonard Strong. Edward Dmytryk outdid himself as director.

• • •

After a six-year absence, Leonore Ulrich is returning to the screen to portray a character role in the Lucille Ball-John Hodiak picture, "Time for Two."

• • •

Carole Landis has been named by Twentieth Century-Fox to be starred in the musical, "Girl in the Moon." The film, in Technicolor, will be produced by George Jessel; with a Hollywood background and deal with search for new movie talent.

• • •

One-picture-a-year program has been adopted by Olivia De Havilland, at least for the next three years. She has just signed a contract with Paramount calling for one feature role a year for three years.

• • •

Paramount will produce Elmer Rice's new play, "Dream Girl," in New York City, with Betty Field in the starring role . . . Stephen Laird, magazine correspondent, will try his luck as a Columbia producer.

• • •

If London has its way, it will become the Hollywood of Europe, or, if the truth were known, they plan to become the Hollywood of the world. Tempting offers have been made from the English capital to have Ronald Colman go there to play opposite Anna Neagle in "Piccadilly, 1945."

• • •

Dick Powell is running true to type. That means that he has variety in the type of films in which he appears. In his latest he will be a bank clerk by day and a killer by night.

• • •

Bob Cummings' first will be Chaplain John Grant's "Answer Us From Heaven," the story of an army chaplain who returns from the front minus both legs.

• • •

Major Allen "Dry" Martini, whose plane was credited with 38 enemy planes, has turned down acting offers and returned to R.-K.-O. as assistant in production management department.

• • •

John Carroll was picked for the singing lead in "The Kissing Bandit." Carroll's voice has developed and shown considerable improvement and he is slated for big things in singing roles.

• • •

Records are being smashed by Van Johnson and Esther Williams on the screen. Their pictures are always in demand and held over in most cities.

• • •

MISCELLANY—Will Bing Crosby return to the air? That is the $64 question. He is still up in the air about the answer. "Song to Remember," in Technicolor, still packing them in. Chopin's music the feature, shared with Paul Muni. Billy Rose believes he can repeat success of his "Diamond Horseshoe" in London, with entertainers of yesterday, after which he will eye the screen for a similar feature. Angeline Orr, radio actress, has been signed by Columbia Pictures. Elizabeth Drown won her divorce and $28,000 annually

Household Hints

Custards mixed in a wide-mouthed pitcher can easily be poured into custard cups without spilling.

The egg slicer is good for much besides slicing eggs. Thin, even slices of cooked potatoes or beets may be made with it, and some fruits slice nicely that way.

When clothing is spotted with rain, place a clean, damp cloth on the material and press it with a moderately warm iron.

To make dainty sandwiches, use bread that is at least 24 hours old and slice thin with a sharp knife.

When grease or milk is spilled on a hot stove, sprinkle with salt to remove the unpleasant odor.

Yellowed napkins and linen towels will become a good white if soaked a day in a solution of borax and water. Wash first, then give them their borax soaking. Rinse well and hang in the sunshine to dry.

When Your Back Hurts -

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

Japs Surrender on USS Missouri in Tokyo Bay

Photograph shows General MacArthur and his Allied staff looking on as Gen. Hsu Yungchang signs the surrender document aboard the USS Missouri, laying off Tokyo bay. The signatures of all Allied countries were added to those of the Japanese. MacArthur signed for the United States. The terms of the surrender are already being put into effect, although it is admitted by military authorities that it will take months before a working government is set up in Japan.

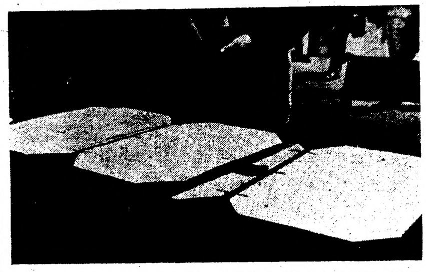
While Japan will be whittled down from a prewar empire of 260,770 square miles to 146,690 square miles, the administration of the islands by the Allies will be a major task. The control of the 72,000,000 Japs on the home islands will not be easy for the Allies. Map shows industrial Japan. Many of these industries will be displaced.

Choose Up for Boys All-American

Babe Ruth, pilot of the Eastern nine, and Ty Cobb, manager of the Western nine of the Esquire All-America boys, "choose up" just before the start of the Boys East-West championship. They took time out to demand ball parks for every 1,000 boys in the United States. Ruth and Cobb still remain heroes to thousands of sand lot players.

Papers of Historical Importance



Spread on the table are the complete Japanese surrender papers, including terms of surrender. In the background can be seen one of the Japanese delegates as he gazes at the papers. At least his hat got in the photograph. Copies of the surrender will be preserved for future generations, and as a guide for newer generations of Japs.

Bolivia's City of 'Peace' Is Highest in the World

The name of the capital of Bolivia is La Paz, which means "peace." Built on a lofty mountain, nearly 2½ miles above sea level, La Paz is the highest city anywhere in the world.

The country is often referred to as "the Switzerland of South America," not only because of its high mountain cities, but because it is the only nation on the continent that is landlocked.

Hand Power Preferred By This Colored Warrior

The uses to which our soldiers on the battle fronts put the gifts we sent them were sometimes more important than we suspected. Witness the letter a Negro lad serving in the South Pacific jungles wrote to his sweetheart down in Alabama.

After thanking the young lady for the electric razor she had sent him, the soldier pleaded:

"Mandy, honey, please, when you send me another razor, send me the old-fashioned kind, you know—big and plain and sharp. I ain't got no time nohow to hunt up no electric socket when them old Japs come at me!"

Come Back Home Jobs Are Waiting

A LOT of our patriotic neighbors left home to serve their country, either in the armed services or in war industries.

If you are one of them, we want you to know there is a warm welcome and a job waiting for you here.

We hope you will come back to make your home here among your old friends and neighbors. This is a good town with a lot of fine people—and a fine future.

Plenty of Jobs Here

In addition to the opportunities here with which you are familiar, some new ones have developed during the war. For instance, a lot of people around here have been making good money working in pulpwood. The tremendous war-time demand for pulpwood will continue because of the civilian demand that has been piling up and the many new industrial uses that have been discovered. Pulpwood has no reconversion problem.

And that is typical of most of our business here. It runs along pretty steadily—no big ups and downs. You can enjoy security here and a nice way of living that doesn't cost every penny you make.

So come on back home to stay! We'll be mighty glad and proud to have you with us again.

Cut this out— Mail it to somebody you want to come back home

Report Your Poor Flax Crop

Farmers, with intentions of abandoning flax acreage, because of poor stund, drowning out, or any other reason, should notify the County AAA Office before plowing the ground or putting the land to any other use, stated Chas. N. Kranz, Chairman.

Producers, having insured their flax with the Federal Government should immediately notify the County Office as soon as a loss is apparent, and the County Office in turn will inform the Federal Inspector of the apparent loss, and the inspector will make the adjustment.

Any acreage not carrying insurance and eligible for the $5.00 per acre incentive payment, should be left as it is until the County Office has been notified and an inspection made by a representative of the County Office to determine the eligibility of the producer to collect the incentive payment, stated Kranz.

Flax acreage abandoned before an inspection has been made, Will not be eligible for the incentive payment, he stated; therefore, we urge all producers not to be too hasty in plowing the ground or putting it to some other use.

Ram Sale Exchange Day

Marshall County will continue its march toward better and more profitable flocks of sheep with another ram sale and exchange day October 4th at Warren, it was announced today by County Agent Forbes. As in past years, the get-to-gether for sheep raisers is sponsored by the County Extension Office and a committee of local breeders.

Steady improvement in the quality of locally raised lambs can be attributed largely to the improvement of sires, County Agent Forbes believes. No farmer can afford to slip backward in his ram selection. Each ram must be better than the one before, and should be chosen with an eye to correcting any weakness, in the present flock.

Rams of superior quality, Hampshires, Shropshires, and other breeds, will be consigned by the purebred breeders in this county.

Rail Quiz

Consideration by Congress of a bill to repeal the Land Grant Act has prompted many to ask, "What is a land grant railway?"

In 1850-1871 the federal government ceded about 130,000,000 acres of land to railways — to encourage construction in undeveloped territory, attract settlers, increase taxable wealth, and enhance the value of and promote sale of government-owned land remote from markets. A land grant railway is one which received such grants. This aid was given to less than 10 per cent of the nation's present rail mileage.

Present law requires transportation by land grant railways of federal military personnel and property at one-half the rates available to commercial shippers. Non-land grant railways by agreement with the government meet these reduced rates.

One result is a commercially disruptive rate situation affecting suppliers of military goods. The lower land grant rates favor the firm so located that land grant rates apply to its shipments and against a competing concern so located that land grant rates do not apply, thus requiring payment of higher established commercial rates.

Original value of the granted land has, in the intervening years, been repaid to the government many times over through land grant rates.

Great Northern is not a land grant railway but meets the land grant rates of other lines in its territory. Only such grants ever acquired by Great Northern on its entire system embraced some Minnesota lands belonging to predecessor companies Great Northern later purchased.

OPENING FRUIT JARS EASY WHEN YOU KNOW HOW

So you can't get 'em open? Well maybe you thought that circular with the jars was advertising matter and threw it away without reading. Don't worry, we will tell you about opening jars and sealing them too, because chances are that part of the trouble with opening is due to failure to follow instructions for sealing. Surely you know about sterilizing everything, leaving plenty of head space, and having the rubbers wet. So we will skip that part.

There are two types of home canning jars, and all have a trade name lettered in the side. The ones with screw-thread necks are Masons. Those with glass lids held in place with wire bails are lightning type or Ideals.

Mason jars are used with one-piece zinc caps and rubber rings, or with two-piece metal vacuum seals, or with glass top seal caps. The glass top seal is sometimes called a three-piece cap because it is made up of glass lid, rubber ring and metal band.

When sealing a Mason jar with zinc cap, place a rubber flat on the sealing surface (you may call it shoulder or ledge), screw the zinc cap down tight, then turn it back about half an inch. This is done to prevent steam forcing the rubber out of place or causing the cap to bulge. The cap is screwed tight as soon as the jar is taken out of the canner.

Use Pliers to Open Jar

The easiest way to get the jar open is to use pliers to pull the rubber out. Small dime store pliers are best for this because friend husband won't be tempted to borrow them when he has to fix the fence. If you have no pliers, the next best way is to run the sharp point of a knife under (not over) the rubber, wiggle the knife sidewise (not up and down), then unscrew the cap. If you can't manage this, turn the jar upside down in hot water for five minutes before unscrewing.

When sealing Mason jars with Glass Top Seal Caps, put the rubber flat around the rim on the under side (top side has the name on it) of the lid, then place the lid so the rubber lies flat between the top of the jar and the lid. Screw the metal band tight and then loosen by turning it back one-fourth turn. This band must be loose while the jars are in the canner. (Failure to keep this in mind has caused a lot of painful burns.) They are tightened after processing. The metal bands should be taken off the jars the next day after the canning is done. Yes, if the manufacturer's instructions are followed, the jars will stay sealed without the bands. When ready to open, run the sharp point of a knife between the top of the jar and the rubber. Move knife sidewise as moving it up and down is likely to damage both jar and lid.

Opening Vacuum Seals

When using Mason jars with vacuum seals, place the lid white side down so that the sealing compound rests on top of the jar. Screw the metal band tight as it will go with ordinary hand pressure and leave it that way until the next day. Then take it off and leave it off. No, you don't tighten the band again after processing. Metal lids, especially those which are slightly rounded or domed, are flexible. The compound is softer than a jar rubber. The flexible lid and soft compound permit steam and air to seep out during processing. That's why the bands are tightened before processing and need not be tightened again.

When ready to open the jar, flip the lid off with a bottle opener, or punch a hole in it and pry it off. The hole is all right because vacuum seal lids should never be used a second time.

When using a lightning type or Ideal jar, put the rubber flat on the sealing surface. Keep the lip out of the way of the wires. Place the lid so that it rests on the rubber. Then pull or push the long wire up until it fits in the groove on top of the lid. Leave the short wire up while the jar is in the canner. Push it down against the side of the jar just as soon as you take the jar out of the canner.

When ready to open, push the lower bail up and the upper bail down, then pull the rubber out with pliers or rub the sharp point of a knife under the rubber, but remember moving the knife up and down may chip the jar or lid.

Pretty Frocks for Dressy Dates Set New High in Chic and Charm

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MORE men at home means calls from wives, sweethearts, sisters, cousins and aunts and adoring mothers too, for dress-up clothes for joyous reunions and social events that are sure to follow. More celebrations at homecomings and more people in a gala mood just naturally calls for one pretty "date" dress after another. Glancing over the new collections, one realizes that our style creators have sensed this demand for dress-up clothes. This season utmost stress is being placed upon the importance of charming "date" frocks that have that air about them that makes one look one's prettiest.

While it is true that fancy again turns to "beautiful black," which this season takes on more beguiling ways than ever for cocktail and date dresses, there is also a definite flair for wool frocks that play up vivid eye-thrilling colors.

Wool dresses that double for campus or dates place emphasis on color as well as a soft styling technique which achieves very interesting and new-looking silhouettes. It seems that college girls are going all out for fine wools this season. Color choices run in two directions. The neutrals in pale beige or various grays make wide appeal. Contrasting these are colors as daring as imagination can picture, some playing up striking contrast, others used in one tone for the entire dress. The newest fashion gesture is to use bright colors with beige or gray wool.

This season satin comes into the picture as ideal for dressy "date" wear. A young style that is convincingly of last-minute vintage tops a graceful dirndl skirt of soft black crepe satin with a bodice top of black jersey, cut severely plain, but teamed with the full satin skirt. The effect is very striking. A streamered bow of the satin at the left waistline adds the perfect accent. It is just such masterpieces of simplicity as is this frock that proclaim the dawn of a new era in styling technique.

The allover gleam of satin as seen in the stunning gown centered in the illustration is the newest note for cocktail and informal evening glamour. The satin is in Oriental stripes carried out in muted shades of blue, green and rust on a brown ground. The widened cap sleeves and higher neckline are news, as is the gathered pouch pocket and narrow tie, each dotted with sequins. This handsome gown, shown in a recent New York Dress Institute fashion display, bespeaks a brilliant future for richly colorful striped satins.

Cotton de luxe goes on a special date in the rich black velveteen suit pictured. Eight bright silver buttons give the jacket the gala touch needed for a party. The high neck, cap sleeves and bustle at the back of the jacket are favorite style details with fashion this year. The slim skirt goes on duty with other jackets and a whole wardrobe of blouses, both dressy and tailored. For "across table" glamour be sure to include in your collection one of the very lovely pastel satin blouses that has a discreet but fascinating touch of glitter embroidery.

Designers see infinite possibilities for drama and glamour in the now-so-fashionable contrast sleeve effects that highlight many a charming gown that will go dating this fall and winter. See the lovely model to the left. Note the graceful wing-sleeves that contrast the dark crepe of the dress. This is new-style costume design at its best. The leopard fur at the front of the belt gives smart accent.

Campus Favorite

The loose-knit classic cardigan is proving a college girl favorite. Versatile, useful and comfortable, it is one of the "hit" fashions of the season. The girls are wearing them with clan-plaid all-around pleated skirts, and they are also good-looking worn with the new slender wrap-around skirts.

Black Satin Frocks Are Topped by Marten Stoles

At fashionable gatherings black satin dresses with marten scarfs or stoles are very much in evidence. With sparkling jewels and a tall important looking hat these de luxe costumes stand out conspicuously as the favorite costume for early fall dress-up wear.

Entire Wardrobe Now Made of Chic Corduroy

It seems as if corduroy is being used for most everything this season from sport and campus clothes to most elegant formals and date dresses. At a recent fashion display, it was demonstrated how beautifully corduroy can be styled for the bride's trousseau. For instance, there was a Victorian gray going-away suit that was simply stunning. The new corduroys come in the most charming colors fancy might picture. The featured shades this season for corduroy are neon pink, Indian turquoise and the lovely Victorian gray. Young fashions were stressed in party coats made of white corduroy. The new French pleat slacks, and clam digger shorts with black jersey tops in corduroy are top fashion this year. With the college girl, the long coat or the shortie type made of corduroy has become a favorite. Smart as can be is the bolero suit made of wide wale corduroy, the stripes rather wide wales, worked horizontally all the way through.

Rich Jewelry Embroidered Right on Dress Is Latest

One of the big success fashions of the season is the dress that has a necklace and bracelets (two on the left long fitted sleeve) embroidered on as an integral part of the dress itself. Cleverest idea ever! And it's going over big. The bracelets are wide and are usually embroidered on one sleeve only. Sequins, pearls and multi-color stones are used together with metal thread stitchery. They give a most opulent look to the simple black frock.

ONE year ago Darryl Zanuck, of 20th Century-Fox, selected five comparatively unknown young players and predicted that within 12 months each would be a star. He was right. Jeanne Crain, Dick Haymes and Vivian Blaine are currently starring in the new technicolor musical, "State Fair" — though they don't seem exactly stellar material. June Haver is seen in "Where Do We Go From Here?" with Fred MacMurray, will be seen with Betty Grable in "The Dolly Sisters." William Eythe played opposite Tallulah Bankhead in "A Royal Scandal," and will be seen in a starring role in "The House on Ninety-Second Street," the F. B. I.-atomic bomb news-drama.

It later became a favorite of pirates in the inns of Tortuga Island, West Indies — hence its selection for the picture.

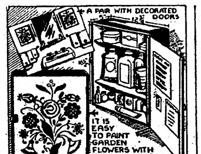
Bathroom Cabinet, Gay and Useful, Creates a Bright Spot in Your Home

By Ruth Wyeth Spears



A PAIR WITH DECORATED DOORS
IT IS EASY TO PAINT GARDEN FLOWERS WITH TRACING PATTERN AND COLOR GUIDE

WHY not brighten up the bathroom by making one or a pair of these gay little cabinets? A pattern gives you a list of materials needed, shows the exact size to cut each piece, and also illustrated directions for putting them together.

The painting comes next; and that is the real fun. A tracing pattern gives the outlines for the old-fashioned garden flowers, color suggestions for painting the cabinet inside and out; and tells you what color to use for filling in each flower, leaf and stem. Materials are listed—everything you need to know—even if you never painted a sprig of flowers before. There are border designs on the pattern too and flowers for decorating containers of various sizes.

What One Language Do All Speak?

YOU KNOW the answer to that one. They all speak the silent language of earth and weather—of crops and stock—of planting time and harvest. For they are farmers—blood brothers the world over.

Today, many of the farmers of other lands aren't doing so well. Their lands have been mined, fought over, ravaged. Their stock has been butchered. Their farm buildings burned. They have no seed to plant the soil.

They desperately need your help.

And you can give your help—through the dollars you give to your Community War Fund.

Those dollars you wring from the soil, and give to a great and worthy cause, help more than the farmers of other lands. They help farmers' sons—and other men's sons—endure the tedium of prison camps. They help provide the blessing of entertainment to service people throughout the world. And they help solve war problems right here in your own community.

The dollars you give to your Community War Fund go farther than any dollars you're apt to put anywhere else. And this year—they need to go farther than ever before. So give again—and generously—won't you?

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Now it can be told: Workers proudly tell of their sabotage work when rubber plants in France were under Nazi control. They spread soapstone on the plies as they built a tire. Finished product looked perfect, but in use plies would break, leaving the Nazis flat.

"Rubber made in the U. S. A." has been developed to such a high degree that the war-born synthetic rubber industry will probably continue long after the war.

As of December 31, 1944, the average age of all passenger cars on the road was seven years.

There is an interval of 53 years between the births of the two "Ikes." George Thomas will soon be two years old.

Good mechanics are economists. Whether a workman is a competent millwright or a graduate mechanical engineer, he is an enemy of lost motion. And lost motion is a menace to prosperity, serious as fire. When an engine is running idle it is only wearing out. When a machine is driven with its brakes on, the waste is even more damaging; property is injured and energy thrown away.

What is true of a mechanical assembly is true of a human organization in this respect. The owners of a farm or the stockholders of a corporation are no penny richer for having a crew that works hard all day doing nothing. Work is necessary on a farm; sweat and calluses are only incidental; it's the crop that brings in the money and pays the men who till the land.

Production Pays

Prosperity results from work but not from all work. Prosperity results from productive work. People who keep busy but do not increase the yield might as well be resting. The man who figures out a way to increase yield without extra labor is the best man on the job. He works with his brain; knows enough to stop lost motion, to take precautions against fire and the like.

In England there is a magazine called The Economist. It is Britain's leading financial publication. It is read and respected by business men and financiers generally. Just recently it has been running a series of articles entitled "A Policy for Wealth." The articles have shown why England is poor; that is, why the English people must put up with low living standards.

Deserve the Best

A large and respected group of Americans often say "Mother England." The British are a proud and industrious people and the Americans respect them. The British well understand how to enjoy and appreciate life's good things. They deserve to live as well as anybody but they don't. What's the reason? Well, here's what one writer for The Economist, looking back at 1943, has to say:

"Industrial efficiency, as measured by production per head, was roughly similar in Great Britain and Germany while in the United States it was more than twice as great as in the other two countries." The statement is that of Dr. Leon Rostas, based on serious study of authentic records. Now there is a movement on foot in England to double her productive output per man by 1972.

Lest We Forget

No longer ago than 1943, when America and England both had full employment, our American workers were twice as well off. They were producing enough to live twice as well as the British. About that time Britain was investing only 3% of her income in equipment for additional production. It was like a woodman saying, "Why buy a file? A dull saw pulls easier."

The British point to Americans and say, "Look! They work less, earn more and live better than we, all because they encourage more investment in tools to produce more goods per man." Now England wisely plans to encourage larger investments to obtain greater production per man-hour, higher wages and higher living standards. Unless we adjust today's tax laws, we will be poor, watching the British produce and prosper in 1972.

Come Back Home Jobs Are Waiting

A LOT of our patriotic neighbors left home to serve their country, either in the armed services or in war industries.

If you are one of them, we want you to know there is a warm welcome and a job waiting for you here.

We hope you will come back to make your home here among your old friends and neighbors. This is a good town with a lot of fine people—and a fine future.

Plenty of Jobs Here

In addition to the opportunities here with which you are familiar, some new ones have developed during the war. For instance, a lot of people around here have been making good money working in pulpwood. The tremendous war-time demand for pulpwood will continue because of the civilian demand that has been piling up and the many new industrial uses that have been discovered. Pulpwood has no reconversion problem.

And that is typical of most of our business here. It runs along pretty steadily—no big ups and downs. You can enjoy security here and a nice way of living that doesn't cost every penny you make.

So come on back home to stay! We'll be mighty glad and proud to have you with us again.

Report Your Poor Flax Crop

Farmers, with intentions of abandoning flax acreage, because of poor stand, drowning out, or any other reason, should notify the County AAA Office before plowing the ground or putting the land to any other use, stated Chas. N. Kranz, Chairman.

Producers, having insured their flax with the Federal Government should immediately notify the County Office as soon as a loss is apparent, and the County Office in turn will inform the Federal Inspector of the apparent loss, and the inspector will make the adjustment.

Any acreage not carrying insurance and eligible for the $5.00 per acre incentive payment; should be left as it is until the County Office has been notified and an inspection made by a representative of the County Office to determine the eligibility of the producer to collect the incentive payment, stated Kranz.

Flax acreage abandoned before an inspection has been made, Will not be eligible for the incentive payment, he stated; therefore, we urge all producers not to be too hasty in plowing the ground or putting it to some other use.

Must Greed Prevail?

It is predicted that America's most violent strike era lies ahead. Union leaders have given union locals the word that they are free to strike whenever ready. The skilled craft unions are already preparing to refuse new members. They think that they can maintain prosperity for a few by keeping supply below demand in closed shops.

Some union leaders can see that this policy of denying the right to work to a man will play into the hands of advocates of legislation which would permit men to enter any occupation for which they are qualified, regardless of union restrictions.

Both unions and Congress seem to have forgotten that there is a Constitution of the United States under which men were guaranteed the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness—which means the right to work. If we have any Constitution left, or any semblance of freedom for the individual, and courts to protect him, why shoul any man be shut out of any work by any union or any industry, until he pays some organization for the privilege of being allowed to earn his daily bread and butter?

Until this question is answered and a man is free to work and free to join a union or not join it, as he sees fit, we cannot hold the United States up to the rest of the world as a shining example of a free country. What have our soldies been fighting for if when they return to their homes they cannot work without paying for the privilege?

OPENING FRUIT JARS EASY WHEN YOU KNOW HOW

So you can't get 'em open? Well maybe you thought that circular with the jars was advertising matter and threw it away without reading. Don't worry, we will tell you about opening jars and sealing them too, because chances are that part of the trouble with opening is due to failure to follow instructions for sealing. Surely you know about sterilizing everything, leaving plenty of head space, and having the rubbers wet. So we will skip that part.

There are two types of home canning jars, and all have a trade name lettered in the side. The ones with screw-thread necks are Masons. Those with glass lids held in place with wire bails are lightning type or Ideals.

Mason jars are used with one-piece zinc caps and rubber rings, or with two-piece metal vacuum seals, or with glass top seal caps. The glass top seal is sometimes called a three-piece cap because it is made up of glass lid, rubber ring and metal band.

When sealing a Mason jar with zinc cap, place a rubber flat on the sealing surface (you may call it shoulder or ledge), screw the zinc cap down tight, then turn it back about half an inch. This is done to prevent steam forcing the rubber out of place or causing the cap to bulge. The cap is screwed tight as soon as the jar is taken out of the canner.

Use Pliers to Open Jar

The easiest way to get the jar open is to use pliers to pull the rubber out. Small dime store pliers are best for this because friend husband won't be tempted to borrow them when he has to fix the fence. If you have no pliers, the next best way is to run the sharp point of a knife under (not over) the rubber, wiggle the knife sidewise (not up and down), then unscrew the cap. If you can't manage this, turn the jar upside down in hot water for five minutes before unscrewing.

When sealing Mason jars with Glass Top Seal Caps, put the rubber flat around the rim on the under side (top side has the name on it) of the lid, then place the lid so the rubber lies flat between the top of the jar and the lid. Screw the metal band tight and then loosen by turning it back one-fourth turn. This band must be loose while the jars are in the canner. (Failure to keep this in mind has caused a lot of painful burns.) They are tightened after processing. The metal bands should be taken off the jars the next day after the canning is done. Yes, if the manufacturer's instructions are followed, the jars will stay sealed without the bands. When ready to open, run the sharp point of a knife between the top of the jar and the rubber. Move knife sidewise as moving it up and down is likely to damage both jar and lid.

Opening Vacuum Seals

When using Mason jars with vacuum seals, place the lid white side down so that the sealing compound rests on top of the jar. Screw the metal band tight as it will go with ordinary hand pressure and leave it that way until the next day. Then take it off and leave it off. No, you don't tighten the band again after processing. Metal lids, especially those which are slightly rounded or domed, are flexible. The compound is softer than a jar rubber. The flexible lid and soft compound permit steam and air to seep out during processing. That's why the bands are tightened before processing and need not be tightened again.

When ready to open the jar, flip the lid off with a bottle opener, or punch a hole in it and pry it off. The hole is all right because vacuum seal lids, should never be used a second time.

When using a lightning type or Ideal jar, put the rubber flat on the sealing surface. Keep the lip out of the way of the wires. Place the lid so that it rests on the rubber. Then pull or push the long wire up until it fits in the groove on top of the lid. Leave the short wire up while the jar is in the canner. Push it down against the side of the jar just as soon as you take the jar out of the canner.

When ready to open, push the lower bail up and the upper bail down, then pull the rubber out with pliers or rub the sharp point of a knife under the rubber, but remember moving the knife up and down may chip the jar or lid.

Many Attend Ditch Hearing

A large delegation of farmers from the Fifth District were at Warren on Tuesday to attend the Ditch District hearing there. According to reports there was very little that could be done now as an old ditch district was found to be established about 20 year ago and, had not according to records, been disolved.

'At That, the City Chap Wasn't Doing So Bad!

A city chap was fishing on the banks of a stream for several hours without as much as a nibble, when a country lad approached and asked, "How many fish ya got, Mister?"

To which the angler replied, "None, as yet."

"How long ya been fishin'?" asked the boy.

"Oh, I guess a couple of hours."

"That ain't bad," observed the the boy. "There was a feller fished here for two weeks and he didn't get any more than you did in a coupla hours."

And the fisherman could but remark, "You don't say!"

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

CIO Strives to Maintain High Pay Level in Postwar Industry; Act to Spur Building Activity

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

LABOR:

Seek Peace

Armed with emergency powers, Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach moved into the troubled industrial front, where CIO demands for appreciable wage boosts threatened to retard the reconversion program and jeopardize stabilization policy.

Schwellenbach faced no easy task, what with the strategic oil, automobile, farm equipment and steel unions striving for wage readjustments to bring 40-hour-a-week pay up to wartime overtime levels, and major producers bucking the demands in the face of rigid price control.

In all instances, CIO demands for substantial wage boosts were predicated on the claim that the big companies had made sizable wartime profits and could use the money to defray part of the increases until peacetime production could be reestablished on a volume basis.

R. J. Thomas

While oil workers already had walked out of midwest refineries in a strike that threatened to spread and imperil the national fuel supply, principal interest continued to center in the troubled automobile situation, where the United Automobile Workers headed by R. J. Thomas laid plans for enforcing their demands for a 30 per cent wage increase by walking out on individual companies and leaving their competitors free to invade their markets.

In assuming command of a labor department strengthened by the inclusion of the War Labor board, war manpower commission and United States employment service, Secretary Schwellenbach planned to proceed slowly before exerting emergency powers, first exhausting ordinary procedure.

PACIFIC:

MacArthur Disputed

Taking sharp difference with Gen. Douglas MacArthur's declaration in Tokyo that only 200,000 American troops may be needed for the Japanese occupation, Pres. Harry S. Truman feared for its effect on army demobilization plans and Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson said that at this time it was difficult to forecast the eventual size of the force.

Basing his estimate upon the Japs' wholehearted effort at co-operation with his command, MacArthur's latest figure of 200,000 was a sharp reduction from the 400,000 recently projected and the 900,000 at first thought necessary. In making his statement, MacArthur said that the Japs' execution of his dictates through their governmental framework relieved the U. S. of establishing an elaborate military authority to perform the same tasks.

In seeking to offset expectations that MacArthur's announcement might lead to speedier demobilization, President Truman declared the program was not dependent upon occupation needs.

Speaking for the state department, Acting Secretary Acheson asserted that the ultimate size of the occupation force will depend upon the scope of the job of eradicating the whole Jap war-making economy.

DEMOBILIZATION:

Point Cut

Asserting that no man would be kept just to maintain a big army, Gen. George C. Marshall revealed a stepped-up demobilization program providing for a further decrease of discharge points to 60 on November 1 following the October 1 slash to 70. At the same time, the total necessary for officers was to be cut to 75.

Marshall reviewed demobilization plans at a meeting with 300 congressmen at which he also affirmed receipt of General MacArthur's estimate of an occupation force of only 200,000 for Japan by next summer. Though MacArthur had reduced his estimate, Marshall said, General Eisenhower's figure of 400,000 for Germany remains the same.

Declaring that the present rate of releases has been determined solely by the availability of discharge facilities, Marshall said that all G.I.s without useful army work would be freed within three to four weeks. With the exhaustion of high point men by late winter, the army may further alter its demobilization program by releasing all men with two years of service.

POSTWAR BUILDING:

Lid Off

With removal of all building controls, government agencies bent themselves to the task of speeding up construction and at the same time keeping costs within bounds to head off an inflationary boom during the reconversion period.

As experts looked for the erection of 500,000 private dwellings next year and a peak of 800,000 in 1948, officials sought to increase the supply of scarce building materials, permitting wage and price boosts and priorities to break bottlenecks, if necessary. Inventory controls also were to be strengthened to prevent hoarding and creation of artificial shortages.

At the same time, OPA announced that it would tighten price control over building materials to counteract heavy demand, while federal credit agencies prepared to discourage loose financing in a market booming with home needs and prospects for high postwar employment.

RETAIL PRICING:

Absorb Increases

Declaring that up to now retailers have not been squeezed by price control, OPAdministrator Chester Bowles reiterated government policy that dealers would have to absorb any increases in manufacturing costs in the reconversion period.

Rejecting a plea of a retailer group that such absorption would be uneconomic and unfair, Bowles said that dealers' markups were not reduced during the war, and records show that profits soared under increased volume and lower operating costs. Whereas the profit margin of department stores stood at 1½ during the 1936-'39 period, it reached 12 per cent in 1944, he said.

Under OPA's pricing policy for manufacturers for the reconversion period, some increases will be permitted to allow for higher labor and material costs. Profit margins will be held to half the industry-wide average for larger businesses or prewar levels for smaller firms, however.

Industry Takes Kindlier View of Oldsters

Because of their generally fine performance while "pinch-hitting" during the wartime labor shortage, older workers will find employment opportunities much broader in the postwar era than in prewar years, Northwestern National Life Insurance company found in a survey.

Hard-and-fast age limitations existing in the prewar era were pretty thoroughly broken down during the war and will stay broken in many fields, although most large concerns will conduct their most intensive recruiting in the 20 to 30 age group.

Many employers who have had unsatisfactory experiences with irresponsible young employees during the wartime labor shortage express a definite preference for older workers, who are loyal and very dependable.

WHEN Ann Sothern's 8-months-old daughter Patricia is old enough to aspire to fill her mother's shoes, she'll have a complete set of "Maisie" films and airshow recordings to study. Mama (who is Mrs. Robert Sterling in private life), has had each of her "Maisie" movies reduced to 16 mm. sound film for her daughter's library. And since she started the Wednesday night CBS radio series she's had special recordings made of each broadcast. Incidentally, the latest popularity rating of the "Maisie" broadcasts shows a marked increase over the previous survey—in fact, a gain of nearly 3,000,000 listeners in a single month!

Lt. Wayne Morris has returned to his screen career at Warner Bros. with a brand new contract. He enlisted in the navy immediately after Pearl Harbor, and earned his commission while in the service. A fighter pilot with seven enemy planes to his credit, he's won plenty of decorations, among them the Distinguished Flying Cross with two stars and the Air Medal.

When you see Jose Iturbi dashing around on that motorcycle in "Anchors Aweigh" he's just being natural. He drives that same vehicle just that way around the studio all the time—and nobody'll ride with him, not for love, money, or even a new contract.

Una O'Connor, one of Hollywood's most versatile character actresses, makes a good bit of extra money each year by doing the crying for screen babies who refuse to wail when the director wants them to. She calls this extra-curricular profit "tear money" and invests it in war bonds. The voice of the weeping infant in "Christmas in Connecticut" is hers; she also has an on-stage role in the picture.

Those wise men of the motion picture industry, the exhibitors, voted this way in the Motion Picture Herald's annual poll to determine the stars of tomorrow: 1. Dane Clark; 2. Jeanne Crain; 3. Kennan Wynne; 4. Peggy Ann Garner; 5. Cornel Wilde; 6. Tom Drake; 7. Lon McCallister; 8. Diana Lynn; 9. Marilyn Maxwell; 10. William Eythe. That's a prophecy worth remembering.

Eleanor Parker of "Pride of the Marines," who'll have the feminine lead in "Humoresque," is regarded as the shyest star in Hollywood. Doesn't go to night clubs, doesn't show off at public functions, never attends a premiere of her own pictures unless completely disguised.

Tuesday night on NBC is dedicated to laughter. There's Amos 'n Andy at 9:00 p. m., E.P.T.; "A Date with Judy" precedes them, and a climax is reached with Fibber McGee and Molly following.

* * *

If you've ever wondered what the studio audience was laughing at, when listening to a broadcast, and felt annoyed because you couldn't share the fun, you'll agree with Kate Smith's manager, Ted Collins, who feels that too many radio stars play up to the studio audience, to the detriment of their radio performances. That's why Kate has eliminated studio audiences on her new Friday night series.

* * *

Danny O'Neil has been signed for his first network commercial series as star of the new Powder Box theater, beginning October 11, Thursday nights on CBS. The series replaces "Rhythm, Romance and Ripley." Evelyn Knight and Jim Ameche are also featured.

* * *

ODDS AND ENDS—Extras who kissed Shirley Temple in the kissing-booth sequence of Columbia's "Kiss and Tell" were paid $16.50 a day—those who merely stood in line got $10.50. . . . RKO is so enthusiastic about Frankie Carle's first picture, "Riverboat Rhythm," that he'll be starred in a bandleader story. . . . According to the latest Hooper survey, "Mr. District Attorney" ranks second in popularity among all radio programs. . . . For the next two months Ethel Barrymore will play her co-starring role in "Some Must Watch" in bed—the script, not her health, is responsible; Dorothy McGuire and George Brent share honors, on their feet.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

A U. S. Senator traveling in the West stopped to help a young lady change a flat tire. The flat developed a friendship that blossomed into marriage.

Soap is one of the important manufacturing agents of synthetic rubber. B. F. Goodrich has developed a synthetic rubber using a rosin soap derived from Southern pine trees that is a great improvement over ordinary synthetic.

Demand for passenger car tires will total about 70,000,000 casings in the first year after the war—for both new cars and replacements.

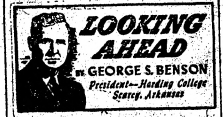
The Weather

The weather over the week end sort of put an end to the growing season in this part of the country. Friday night we had a killing frost followed by another hard freeze Saturday night. On Friday night the temperature dropped to 14 above. Since then the weather has turned eice and warm.



Fear This

Political developments in England this summer have made a show, profitable for Americans to watch. Peace in Europe is really felt in England; terror and bloodshed ceased for a time—for a long time we hope. Britain's post-war problems are upon her and they are almost exactly like ours will be when our war is over in the Pacific. There is however one big difference.

The difference lies in what the working people think. British labor is socialistic, in large part; American labor is not. The British workers don't think they fared very well under the system in which private capital owned the factories and private management operated them in so-called competition. English laborers figure they would be better off if the government owned everything.

Workers Prosper

Workers in America still favor the system of free enterprise. Most of our labor is in favor of open competition. The reason is that working people in America see how they have fared all right with private enterprise. Labor leaders express themselves freely in favor of capitalism. Our workers probably will not turn against the American system since it has not turned against them.

Nobody has the working people of either country fooled. They have the truth in both cases. In England, labor has had a pretty shabby deal; in America the worker has lived well. The important question is this: British workers oppose capitalism and American workers favor it—can it be possible that they are talking about the same thing?

Have Same Name

Prior to World War II, the economic system in Britain was called private enterprise — same as in America. Moreover, the two were quite a little alike, at first glance, except that wages on this side of the ocean were high and American workers earned more than twice as much as the British workers, trade for trade. The difference was that private enterprise in Britain was not free.

Private enterprise in England was hog-tied. Competition there was not actually open. Wasteful monopolies operated within the law. Private business concerns were fenced in with legal restraints on this and government restrictions on that. What they had was government-bossed private enterprise. Business men couldn't make any money and therefore couldn't pay their workers.

Socialistic Labor

Working as hard as they could, British workers could not earn enough to live well. They needed new tools and modern methods so they could produce more; so their employers could pay them better, but the employers couldn't buy better tools. They were so restricted that they couldn't make any profit. Result: Labor unions formed a socialist party and now are bidding strongly for control of the government for the third time.

The same thing can happen here. America can keep free private enterprise and the prosperity that goes with it. With prosperity and progress, American firms can pay their workers well. But silly restrictions and heavy taxes can choke out profits. Without profits there will be no new tools, no progress, no better wages. Unhappy workers bring socialism. Socialism, nowhere in the world, has brought wages half as high as America now enjoys.

Come Back Home Jobs Are Waiting

A LOT of our patriotic neighbors left home to serve their country, either in the armed services or in war industries.

If you are one of them, we want you to know there is a warm welcome and a job waiting for you here.

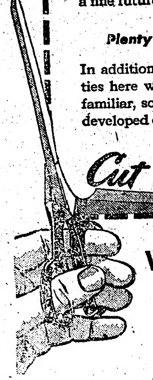
We hope you will come back to make your home here among your old friends and neighbors. This is a good town with a lot of fine people—and a fine future.

Plenty of Jobs Here

In addition to the opportunities here with which you are familiar, some new ones have developed during the war. For instance, a lot of people around here have been making good money working in pulpwood. The tremendous war-time demand for pulpwood will continue because of the civilian demand that has been piling up and the many new industrial uses that have been discovered. Pulpwood has no reconversion problem.

And that is typical of most of our business here. It runs along pretty steadily—no big ups and downs. You can enjoy security here and a nice way of living that doesn't cost every penny you make.

So come on back home to stay! We'll be mighty glad and proud to have you with us again.



Cut this out- Mail it to somebody you want to come back home

Rail Quiz

What is the story of the headlight?

In the early days of railroading, trains ran only in daylight hours, and headlights were unknown. As the railroads developed, however, night operations became increasingly necessary. The first crude step was taken under the direction of Horatio Allen, then with the South Carolina Railroad in South Carolina. He attached a small flat car to the front of the locomotive, covered the car with a heavy layer of sand on which he kept a bonfire of pine knots burning. In other instances, large candles protected by glass cases, fitted with reflectors, were used. Whale oil was extensively used in the 1840's and 1850's. After the discovery of petroleum in 1859, kerosene lamps took the place of candles and whale oil lamps. Then came gas lights, fed from storage tanks, and finally electricity. The first patent for an electric headlight was issued to Leonidas G. Woolley May 3, 1881, and several electric headlights were in use in 1884. Since the introduction of electric lighting, great progress has been made. Today locomotive headlights are powerful searchlights.

Paying Parliament

How would you like to be elected to the board of governors of the finest country club you ever saw? Unless you are an exceptional person, you can't afford such a job. It uses a lot of time and there's no salary connected with it. Helping to boss a lovely palace in the middle of a big playground is fun (I imagine) but it's an expensive pastime.

People who habit such spots to enjoy their spare time are in the financial upper brackets. If they work at all, they do things they enjoy doing, or perhaps they do a few jobs nobody else can do as well. Such wealthy people are usually competent but they engage others to handle their routine work. This leisurely class is growing steadily smaller, but it still exists.

Work Well Done

A rich country club is proverbially well managed. It does not need to economize and cut corners, but that's only part of the story. It is governed by men of singular ability with spare time, who like their club and take personal interest in it. They have no better minds than men who hustle for business and use their wives for stenographers, but excellence thrives on calm deliberation.

By the way, Mrs. Harry S. Truman used to serve her husband as secretary when he was senator from Missouri. The President told it himself to the press while he was discussing the proposal to allow additional expense pay to representatives. It would be hard to find stronger testimony that members of the Congress of the United States need better compensation for the work they do.

No Time to Think

In every practical sense, members of Congress have been elected to the board of governors of the world's grandest country — not a country club. They represent important segments of people who have chosen them to help boss (not a playground) the most influential power under the shining sun, and, until early last June, they got $10,000 a year — the pay of a junior executive.

One of America's ugliest habits is criticizing Congress for shortcomings that result directly from being poorly paid. No one man can study all the profound issues congressmen must vote on, and no $10,000 man can afford to pay experts to digest them. Often congressmen use precious hours doing chores for people back home because they can't afford enough competent assistants.

A Good Man's Job

Many solons labor intemperately. Rep. Doughton, who is past 81, rises regularly at 5:00 a.m., and starts his 12-hour day at 6:30; this after 34 years in the House and 14 years chairman of the Ways & Means Committee. What $100,000 official of industry claims to be worth more to his firm than Doughton is to his state and nation? American legislators are top-flight, except in pay.

Must we send rich men to Congress because poor men lack funds to finance the job, or can't afford to maintain an extra home in wealthy Washington? Do we want incompetents on Capitol Hill who stay there because they could never earn so much anywhere else? The answer is "no" of course; America can afford the best. Then congratulate your congressman on this increase and don't let him wait 20 years for the next one.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Although the Germans manufactured and used synthetic rubber in volume long before America, a general superiority of the American synthetic rubber over the German product has been established by technologists.

To obtain enough rubber to make a tire for a low-priced car, two rubber trees must be tapped for a whole year.

Longer, more uniform tire life, constant goal of tire manufacturers, is now being achieved through use of a new type of synthetic rubber developed by B. F. Goodrich.

Steering wheels of post-war cars may be cushioned with a covering of synthetic rubber.

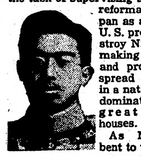
JAPAN:
Economic Checkup

To Gen. Douglas MacArthur went the task of supervising the economic reformation of Japan as a part of the U. S. program to destroy Nippon's war-making potential and promote wide-spread opportunity in a nation formerly dominated by four great business houses.



Hirohito
Not a Pauper

As MacArthur bent to the task, the prospects rose that the personal fortune of Emperor Hirohito would be divulged, revealing him as one of the world's wealthiest persons. Though the Mikado's assets are known to only a select few, the imperial family maintains a four-story concrete building complete with staff on the palace grounds to keep its accounts.

Indicative of the vastness of Hirohito's holdings, the emperor possesses stock in every Japanese enterprise, since a bloc of shares are allotted to the emperor by a corporation upon organizing. Of the 300,000 shares of the Bank of Japan, Hirohito reputedly owns 140,000.

Besides the Mikado, the great business houses of Mitsubishi, Sumitomo, Yasuda and Mitsui possess the greatest holdings in Japanese enterprise, with their share estimated at over half the total.

Under the U. S. program, steps will be favored for the dissolution of these politically influential institutions with their grip over banking, industry and commerce. Policies will be pushed for a wider distribution of income and ownership of productive and sales facilities, and encouragement given for the development of democratic labor and agricultural organizations.

In stripping Japan of its war-making potential, the U. S. will prohibit the operation of industries adaptable to war production. As in the case of Germany, manufacture of aircraft is to be prohibited and shipping is to be limited to immediate trade needs. U. S. authorities also will supervise Japanese industrial research.

As MacArthur's staff undertook an accounting of Japanese assets as the first step in the implementation of economic reform, the general ordered Premier Higashi-Kuni's government to institute immediate wage and price controls and ration commodities to head off extreme privation among the country's 80,000,000 people.

With Japanese experts figuring it would take Nippon from two to five years to get back on its feet, they proposed that the U. S. sell the country 250 million pounds of cotton within the next year in addition to 60 million pounds of wool; 3 million tons of rice; 2 million tons of salt; 500 thousand tons of sugar; 3 million barrels of oil, and 3 million tons of steel.

FOOD:
To Curb Output

Declaring commodity production goals should reflect consumer demand rather than maximum ability for output, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson indicated that the government's 1946 farm program may call for smaller harvests in view of decreased military and civilian needs.

In making his views known in a conference with farm bureau representatives in Washington, D. C., Anderson also raised the possibility of imposing marketing quotas to restrict the heavy output of certain crops.

At the same time, Secretary Anderson joined President Truman in assuring the farm bureau men that the government would back its commitment to support commodity prices at not less than 90 per cent of parity for two years after the official end of the war.

VETS:
Job Rights

Clarifying the rehiring provision of the selective service act, draft officials declared that a returning veteran has an absolute right to his former position, or one of like status, even if it means the discharge of a worker with higher seniority.

At the same time, the officials stated that no veteran would be required to take union membership in regaining his old position, since the law makes no provision for such conditions as a basis for his re-employment.

In further lowering the point score for overseas duty, the army revealed that enlisted men whose credits or age, as of September 2, 1945, equal or exceed 36, or who are 37 years old or 34 years old with more than one year of service, will be exempt. Also exempt are male officers with 48 points; army doctors and dentists with 45 points or 40 years of age; veterinary and medical administrative officers with 30 points or 35 years of age; dietitians and physical therapy aides with 18 points or 30 years of age, and nurses with 12 points or 30 years of age.

In handing down its ruling on vet job rights, draft officials directly clashed with the unions, which have stood for the rehiring of soldiers on a seniority basis, but opposed their re-employment in preference to others with longer working records at affected plants.

LABOR:
Fuel Threat

Secretary Lewis Schwellenbach's new streamlined labor department received its first real test as federal conciliators moved to bring about settlement of the CIO oil workers' demands for a 30 per cent wage increase before a growing strike threat imperiled the nation's fuel supply.

Early negotiations were snagged by the union's demand that discussions be held on an industry-wide basis and the companies' equal insistence that agreements be effected by individual refineries. In asking a 30 per cent wage increase, the oil workers reflected the general CIO aim of maintaining wartime "take-home" pay by bringing 40-hour-per-week wages up to the total of the former 52-hour week.

In other labor trouble, 60,000 northwest AFL lumber workers struck to press demands for a $1.10 hourly minimum compared with the present scale ranging upward from 70 cents, while 15,000 AFL elevator operators and building service employees paralyzed service in over 2,000 New York skyscrapers by walking out in protest of a War Labor board grant of $28.05 for a 44 hour week instead of the $30.15 asked for 40 hours.

LETTERMEN:

A survey by the American College Publicity association shows that only 4 per cent of college letter men were turned down as physically unfit for military service, thus debunking the impression of a high rate of rejections among athletes.

According to the survey, only 358 students out of a total of 9,635 letter men in 119 colleges and universities in 1941 were found unfit for service.

Push Fight on Polio

In the mounting drive against polio, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis allotted the unprecedented total of $4,157,814.15 for research, education and the treatment in the year ending last May 31.

As yet no preventive or cure for polio has been found, although it is generally recognized as an infectious, communicable disease caused by a virus.

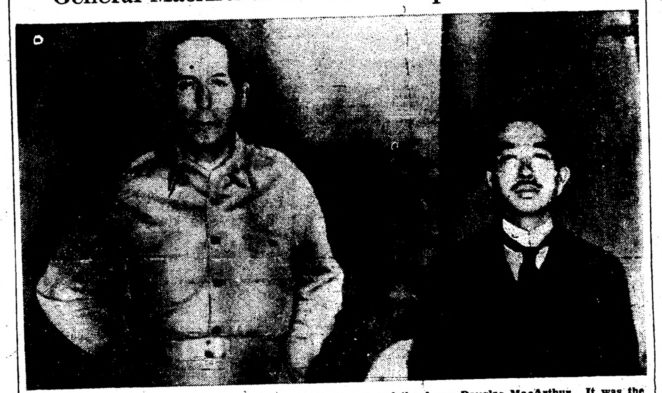
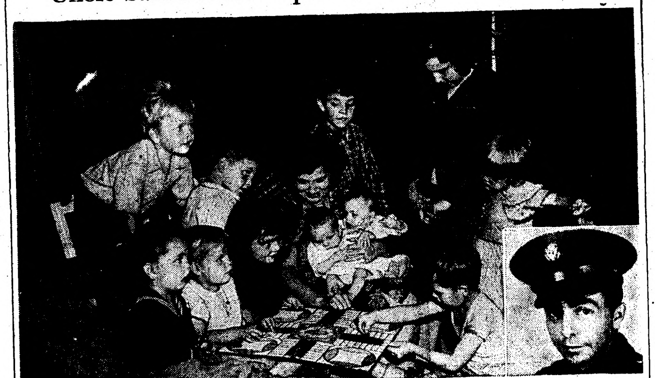
General MacArthur Receives Emperor Hirohito



Japan's emperor went to meet Japan's conqueror, General of the Army Douglas MacArthur. It was the first time in 2,000 years of Japanese history that a mikado had left the royal palace to be received by a foreigner. Emperor Hirohito, "The Son of Heaven," was dressed in formal morning attire, not in his flamboyant dress of admiral or marshal. The conquered ruler bowed to American correspondents.

Uncle Sam's Most Expensive Private First Class



Pfc. Arthur Griser, insert, whose wife and 11 children are shown awaiting his return from Europe to their Pitcairn, Pa., home. They have been married 12 years and have three sets of twins among their 11 children. Their army allotment of $280 a month is believed to be the highest paid to any private first class. Griser is just as anxious to return to his family as the paymaster is to be relieved of this expensive soldier.

And So Again the Early Birds Got the Worms

Morris Gest, the theatrical producer, was a genius when it came to thinking up effective publicity stunts.

"I think I'll put an ad in the newspapers announcing the fact that tickets will be on sale at our box office at 5 a. m. tomorrow," he confided in a friend.

"It sounds crazy," reproved his companion. "What's the idea?"

"I want people to think our show is such a smash hit that if they don't get tickets first thing in the morning, they'll be out of luck."

It worked out, too. Next morning at the crack of dawn patrons stormed the box office and bought out every ticket in the house!

Frozen Lemon Pie Is Toothsome Dish

FROZEN lemon pie is a toothsome dinner dessert for the family that's been working hard all day, says the Country Cooking editor of Capper's Farmer.

Graham cracker crumbs are crust and topping for the chilled yellow filling, she writes in the nationally circulated farm magazine. Pie-shaped pieces are made by cutting diagonally across the refrigerator tray in which pie is frozen.

The dessert which will be an ever-popular family favorite, serves 8, the Capper's Farmer expert advises.

FROZEN LEMON PIE

2 eggs, separated
⅓ c. lemon juice
Rind of ¼ lemon
½ c. sugar
1 c. evaporated milk, whipped
⅔ c. graham cracker, cooky or cake crumbs

Beat egg yolks; add lemon juice and piece of rind sliced from lemon and all but 2 tablespoons of the sugar. Cook over low heat 15 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove rind and cool. Beat egg whites until stiff; add remaining sugar and fold into cooked mixture. Add whipped evaporated milk. Line refrigerator tray with waxed paper. Sprinkle with ¼ cup of the crumbs. Pour in lemon mixture; sprinkle with remaining crumbs. Freeze with temperature coldest. Serves 8.

POW Help With Beet Harvest

Sugar beet harvesting in the Warren community is progressing this week with the assistance of more than 200 Italian prisoners of war who arrived in Warren on October 7th and set up a prisoner of war camp in the North Star college building.

In the contingent that arrived were 220 prisoners together with a U. S. Army guard complement of 23 men, all of whom are now housed in the college building.

A large number of farmers in that area made application for use of the men for completing their harvest operations.

With The Men In Service

Second Lieutenant William E. Weaver, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Weaver of Holt was released from service with the Army Air Forces on October 3rd. at the Drew Field seperation center at Tampa Florida. In February 1945 he was sent overseas with the 447th Bomb Group to Englund where he remained until his return to the United States in July of this year. He holds the Air Medal with one cluster.

Word has been received here that Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Adams, who have made their home at Miles City, Montana the past few years, have now moved to Thief River Falls.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been of the finest fall variety and the farmers are working hard trying to catch up on late threshing and plowing.

Drainage District Hearing Held

Hearing on the petition to create a Red Lake river drainage district, scheduled to be held at Thief River Falls on Thursday, October 4th, was continued indefinitely pending a decision by the District Court on a motion that a similar district, organized in 1920, covering substantially the same territory, is still in existance and will serve the purpose for which a new district would be formed. The motion was made following a meeting of attorneys representing the petitioning counties at which it was concluded this would be the proper way to proceed. Judges Oscar R. Knutson of Warren and Graham M. Torrance of Bemidji, residing, continued the hearing their decision on this point of law and their decision will be filed October 20.

The possibility that the Red Lake river watershed was already organized as a drainage district was not discovered until after the petitions for a new district had been filed and the date for a hearing set. The district had been organized in 1920 had ceased to function when the river dredging project it proposed failed to secure the approval of the courts. It was organized under the Drainage and Conservancy Act of 1919; the same law under which the new district would have been formed. While the old district included the entire watershed of the Red Lake river and its tributaries, the petition for a new district excluded the Red Lake Indian Reservation and the lands that drain directly into Red Lake.

If the Judges decide the old district is still a entity then the new petition will be dismissed and five commissioner will be named to effect an organization. And if the judges find the old district is no loger alive then a hearing on the petition to for a new district will be resumed.

Counties that have joined in seeking the formation of a drainage district at this time are Beltrami, Clearwater, Polk, Red Lake, Pennington and Marshall, the object being to create a responsible authority qualified to represent the communities benefited by the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers improvement project and contract with the federal government in meeting certain conditions required by the government. County officials representing all these counties, as well as representatives from the cities of Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, Crookston and East Grand Forks, and many other communities, were present at the hearing to support the new petition. Only one small opposition group is known to have been present, a group of Marshall coudty landowners represented by H. O. Berve.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Lappley and daughter and Mrs. Miller returned to Madison, Wisconsin, on Sunday after a weeks visit here at the Sam Lorentson home and with other relatives.

Victory Loan Drive Opens Oct.29

Marshall County's quota for the Victory Loan Drive which open on October 29, is $434,000.

This will be the Eight and final War Loan drive and represents a reduction of $350,000 from the record breaking Seventh War Loan conducted early last summer when the county quota was $784,000, according to advises from state War Finance committee headquarters to O. M. Mattson, county chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kroke of Stephen were Sunday visitors at the A. C. Burtness home.

Miss Opal Sanoden arrived home last week from Los Angeles, Calif., where she has been employed the past three years.

Waiting Contest

Hard as it may be to get a died-in-the-wool bureaucrat thinking about winter problems in the summer time, unless something unusual happens, cold weather will come again. One of these days a school bell will ring, a boy will come down the street bouncing a football and after that it won't be long. Moreover winter calls for a lot of things that are scarce now.

Let's take shoes as a down-to-earth illustration. Which is better for keeping a boy's feet off the frosty ground, a 1942 price ceiling or a pair of good heavy brogues with wool socks in them? That's the problem before the American people, with school bells only a few days away. Getting into production on civilian goods is what the OPA is currently bungling.

Hold That Price

The OPA's war job was to keep prices of needful things from skyrocketing — a noble work requiring some stiff rules. But today, with the war won and war business slack, OPA is still making rules. One of them says: Manufacturers may make things for civilians provided they sell at 1942 prices. There's the rub, for factory owners now ready to start reconverting, making jobs safe for their employees.

The 1942 price rule stops them; nothing else. Workers want their jobs to last. Most civilians have saved some money and want to buy new things. Industry is anxious to serve them but very few factories can operate at 1942 prices. Materials cost more now and labor costs more also. There is only one thing a manufacturer can do, namely, beg OPA for special permission to price-up and go to work.

Mail Bags Full

The OPA, if you remember, is famous for leaving no stone unturned, and all that sort of thing. It is rumored that some men in the bureau have their own private opinions about business people anyhow. Before they grant any firm special leave to change a price, they investigate. That's all right, but applications to reconvert are coming in fast, more than 500 a day.

The bureau will never wind up its red tape in time. The only possible way out of trouble is to make a reasonable rule for all industry to follow, let whistles blow at 6:00 a. m. and ask questions later. Will they do it? Who knows? Employees and customers would probably cheer loudly for any employer who kept his payroll alive and said "Ph-f-v-v-ut" to the OPA, but its dangerous.

Formula for Panic

Most business men are conservative. They are likely to wait exactly as long as the OPA says wait. Unable to do business on 1942 prices, they may pull fires from under their boilers and lay off the crew. Then the waiting contest starts. Bureaus will wait on investigations; employers will wait on bureaus; workers will wait on employers and you and I will wait for everything.

Idle workers in the soup-line; farmers without markets let crops rot in the field. An ugly picture. The way to avoid it is to let industry convert, sell its products to people with money and pay the men who work. Inflation can be prevented without starting a panic, if OPA will adopt a workable rule soon enough. But bureaus are usually more interested in rules than in reasons—warts on the nose of progress; bunions on the toe of time.

Sunday School Conference

Coming Sunday afternoon and evening the Trinity Lutheran Church at Thief River Falls will be host for a conference on Sunday School and week day school instruction. This will comprise the south half of Thief River Falls Circuit and teachers in parishes served by pastors Silas Erickson, Fredrick Johnson and Walter Peterson have been invited. Rev. Megorden of Fosston, will be the guest speaker for the afternoon session which begins at 3 o'clock.

Saw Two Bull Moose

Arthur Olson, farmer living west of Holt saw two large bull Moose go across the big swamp west of his place on Wednesday. This is the first time in years that Moose have been seen in that part of the county. When last seen they entered a large woods south of the Jens Jorgenson farm. This team of bulls may have strayed from the Mud Lake refuge or have come down the pike from Canada.

In Memoriam

In memoriam of our dear mother, Mrs. Clara King, who passed away 10 years ago on October 22, 1935.

Deep in our hearts is a picture
Of a loved one gone to rest.
In memory frame we shall keep it,
Because she was one of the best.

Our lips cannot speak how we loved her,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say,
God only knows how we miss her
As we journey along lives way.

Yet again we hope to meet her,
When the day of life has fled
And in Heaven with joy to meet her
Where no farewell tears are shed.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Post-war automobiles may ride on rubber springs which will eliminate noise and the necessity for lubrication. B. F. Goodrich has supplied over half a million rubber springs for military landing vehicles.

B. F. Goodrich is now making tires of a new kind of synthetic rubber. The new rubber makes tires wear longer.

Since cotton is of almost equal importance with rubber in the manufacture of tires, the rubber industry is one of the biggest customers of the Agricultural South.

Steel and brass are used in the manufacturing of ordinary passenger car tires.

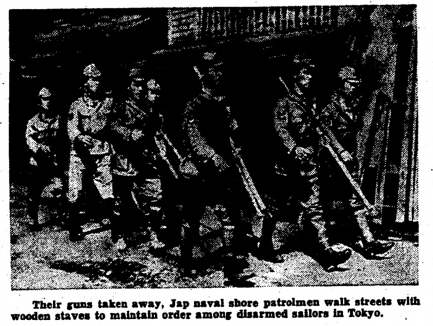
Settlement of Oil Workers' Pay May Set Reconversion Pattern; Ease Curbs on Consumer Credit

Released by Western Newspaper Union

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Their guns taken away, Jap naval shore patrolmen walk streets with wooden staves to maintain order among disarmed sailors in Tokyo.

LABOR:

U. S. Acts

Acting energetically, Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach took the all-important oil workers' wage dispute virtually in his own hands by transferring negotiations to Washington, D. C., in an effort to effect a settlement that was expected to set a pattern for the reconversion period.

With the Oil Workers' union demand for a 30 per cent wage increase embodying the program of other powerful CIO organizations, and with the oil companies' offer of a 15 per cent boost representing the usual compromise, final disposition of the case would go far toward determining the amount of "take-home" pay for employees during the ensuing months.

Schwellenbach's decision to shift the parley to Washington, D. C., from Chicago, Ill., followed upon an early deadlock in the bargaining over the union's insistence that the dispute be settled on an industry-wide basis and the companies' stand that contracts should be signed by individual plants.

Meanwhile, over 1,500,000 persons were affected by the strike of AFL elevator operators and building service employees in New York, with business losses running over $1,000,000 a day and production of winter and summer garments virtually stopped. Balking at a war labor board award of $28.05 for a 44 hour week, the union asked $30.15 for a 40 hour week.

JAPAN:

Historic Precedent

September 27, 1945, went down in history as the red-letter day on which a Japanese emperor, unbending himself in defeat, made a personal call upon a victorious U. S. commander to break all precedent.

God to his people, small, wiry Hirohito, in formal morning clothes and high silk top hat, was very much man to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who, steeped in occupational duties, met him in informal military attire and without a tie.

Motoring to the American embassy in Tokyo for the visit, Hirohito made his call just as MacArthur set about shaping plans for the re-education of the Japanese people and stripping Nippon of all its war-making potentialities by an economic reformation.

In recasting the Japanese mind, MacArthur chose to pursue the present policy of working through native personnel. Japanese press, radio, movies, government information bureaus, schools and various social groups would be used as mediums for the dissemination of democratic principles and ideals for world co-operation.

In Japan's economic reformation, the U. S. will strive for the eradication of all potential war industry, confining the Nipponese merely to civilian production. At the same time, efforts will be made to break up the business monopoly of the four great houses of Mitsibushi, Mitsui, Yusada, and Sumitomo, and promote widespread ownership and trade. Organization of labor and agricultural organizations also will be encouraged.

Meanwhile, Japanese economic experts called for a resumption of trade with the U. S. to speed Nippon's postwar recovery and stave off impending privation. In return for American cotton, wool, salt, oil, iron, sugar and leather the Japanese proposed exports of silk, gold, porcelain ware and lacquer goods.

TIRES:

Demand Mounts

While the production of new automobile tires is making fair progress, prospects for the elimination of tire rationing in the near future are not promising, according to the National Automobile Dealers association.

Although the tire industry is planning on the production of approximately 12 million tires between October and the end of the year, some will be reserved for new cars.

CREDIT:

Ease Controls

In a move hit by OPA because of inflationary possibilities, but rapped by finance companies because of its restricted scope, the government removed all credit controls over building renovation and eased regulations on loans for services or non-essential purchases.

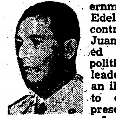
Remaining unchanged in view of popular demand and limited supply was the 12 month credit repayment for washing machines, vacuum cleaners, bed linen, mattresses, boats, watches, cameras, automobiles, pianos and furniture.

Though OPA resisted the restricted easing of credit regulations for fear of a scaling of prices upward in face of heavy buying, certain financing groups declared that continuing restrictions placed low income classes at a disadvantage and price control and rationing assured market stabilization.

ARGENTINA:

Buck Change

Problem center of South America, Argentina was under another state of siege as the government of Pres. Edelmiro Farrell, controlled by Col. Juan Peron, rounded up economic, political and labor leaders following an ill-fated attempt to overthrow the present regime.



Colonel Peron

In extending military rule and suspending constitutional guarantees of speech, press and assembly, the government declared that it was forced to move to stem "a growing campaign aimed at alteration of the (existing) order and conducted by the oligarchy (powerful interests) . . ." Liberty would be restored when the various groups would know how to use it, Farrell added.

The abortive revolutionary attempt by two top Argentine generals followed close upon the heels of widespread demonstrations of democratic elements against the pro-military Farrell-Peron regime, maintaining the present economic and social setup in the face of persistent demands for its liberalization.

JOBLESS BENEFITS:

Shelve Bill

Declaring that the current wave of strikes has confused the question of whether a real need exists for the lengthening of unemployment compensation payments up to 26 weeks, the powerful house ways and means committee held up a senate bill providing federal aid for extension of benefits.

By its action, the house group dealt a body blow to President Truman's program for jobless aid, since the senate in passing a modified bill previously had refused to boost unemployment compensation up to a maximum of $25 weekly. The senate measure would have permitted the federal government to advance sufficient sums to the states to spread jobless payments over 26 weeks.

House committee rejection of the bill stirred labor's wrath, AFL Pres. William Green accusing the congressmen of "callous disregard of human needs," and CIO Chieftain Philip Murray calling upon the CIO and its Political Action committee for an all-out drive to "secure reversal of this shameful act."

ARMY SEEKS MISSING

Army "search teams" are combing the battlefields of Europe and the Pacific for personnel now listed as missing.

Consisting of five soldiers, one of whom speaks the language of the locality, search teams are assigned a certain area of approximately one and one-half square miles. Information on missing personnel is consolidated to speed investigation

Aircraft Engines

The expansion of aircraft engine production facilities from July, 1940, to June, 1944, exceeded air-frame factory expansion by 10 per cent, indicating the pressing need for increased engine production following Pearl Harbor. The advent of four-motored bombers and the expanded production of multi-engine types placed a tremendous load on engine production.

Ever Try Making Cough Syrup In Your Kitchen?

Quick Relief. No Cooking. Easy!

If you've never tried mixing your own cough medicine, you've missed a lot. It's no trouble—needs no cooking—and gives you about four times as much cough syrup for your money. You'll say it beats anything you ever tried for coughs due to colds. And here's how it's done:—

Make a plain syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until it is dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from your druggist. Put this into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a pint—a family supply. Tastes fine and never spoils. Children love it.

And as for results, you've never seen anything better. It goes right to work on the cough, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritation, and helping clear the air passages. You will like it for its results, and not merely for the money it saves.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.—Adv.

Fattening Lambs

One help in putting weight on lambs is to keep sheep and lambs free from parasites, especially nodular worms and stomach worms. Infestation with parasites holds back growth and increases feed costs. Serious losses from parasites can be prevented by providing clean pasture, by the use of phenothiazine, and by taking other precautions.

Bike Passenger

You invite disaster when you carry another person on your bike.

Egg Eating

Egg eating by chickens is a habit usually developed by young pullets. This costly habit can be prevented by providing plenty of nests—one nest for each six birds—so eggs will not be broken by nest crowding at laying time. All nest bottoms can be kept well padded with litter such as hay, straw, cottonseed, shavings, so eggs will not be broken as they are laid. If the egg-eating habit has gone so far that some of the birds break the eggs themselves, it may be necessary to remove those birds from the flock for a few days or dispose of them entirely.

Heating Safety

One of the most notable innovations in safe heating is the wet base boiler in which water circulates under the ash pit. The fact that the boiler can be placed on a combustible floor is of interest in connection with the trend toward the basementless house. In such houses it is often desirable to install the boiler on a wooden floor in a utility room or kitchen. Other safety features of modern boilers are foot-treadle door openers, ball-shaped, air-cooled handles and side shakers, making it easier to open and close doors.

Apple Picker

Watch the experienced apple picker at work and you will see that he sets his ladder properly and keeps balanced on it so he works as freely as he does on the ground.

One of the first things the apple picker should do is to see that he has clothes for the job that protect the skin and help prevent accidents. They should be fitted for bending, be snug at the neck, ankles and wrists, and have usable pockets.

OIL:

U. S.-British Pact

Virtual monopolists in oil, the U. S. and Britain came to an understanding for the orderly development of petroleum trade in the postwar world in a pact fashioned in London by Secretary of the Interior Ickes and British officials and subject to senate ratification.

Removing vigorous opposition to any control over domestic production as envisaged in a previous agreement later repudiated by the U. S., the new pact only provides for advisory regulation of American and British operations overseas. Both countries have extensive oil holdings in foreign lands, notably in the middle east, where deposits are reportedly as great as in the U. S.

In drawing up the agreement, Ickes and British Fuel Administrator Shinwell provided for mutual respect of all concessions and rights obtained by either country, and also pledged non-interference with operations.

MEAT:

More Available

Because of the seasonal increase in the marketings of range fed cattle, OPA removed point requirements for lower grades of beef, veal and lamb through most of October, and also made hamburger, lamb and veal patties, short ribs and brisket of beef, breast and flank of lamb and shank of veal ration-free.

In addition, points were lifted from such low-grade meat products as sausage, frankfurters, luncheon variety and canned meats.

In contrast, however, the continued tight supply of hogs and finished cattle necessitated the retention of current point values on pork cuts, bacon and other cured meats, and choice selections of beef, veal and lamb. Though fats and oils were kept on the rationing list, point removal on cheaper meat will furnish additional stamps for these items.

Henry II Takes Over

To husky, 28-year-old Henry Ford II, who in college displayed more of a penchant for sociology than engineering, went the presidency of the huge Ford Motor company, following the retirement of his famed grandfather from active service with the firm.

Upon assuming his post, Henry the II declared his ambition was to return Ford to leadership in sales again, the company having trailed Chevrolet throughout most of the decade preceding the war. On his toes, young Ford had shown the new 1946 model last July, only two days after government authorization for resuming civilian production, and the firm was well off to postwar output when impeded by strikes.

Retiring at 82 after having resumed the presidency of his famed company in June of 1943 upon the death of his son, Edsel, Ford declared that he would devote most of his energies to his outside interests, chief of which have been utilization of farm products in industry.

EUROPE:

Occupation Problem

In war or in peace, old General Patton, with a mind of his own continued to make news, the latest ocasion being his clash with General Eisenhower over the use of competent former Nazi civil servants for a restoration of German economy to head off threatened chaos this winter.

Besides being asked for an immediate report on the number of former Nazis still holding office in 3rd army territory, Patton also was directed to give Eisenhower a personal accounting of his control over the Bavarian region. For a hard peace, Eisenhower favors a ruthless denazification of Germany's political, educational and economic life, and an early establishment of a Reich living standard no higher than surrounding countries'

Though the first to be called on the carpet, Patton's attitude is known to be shared by other U. S. officers seeking to avert starvation, frost suffering and epidemics this winter in the shattered nation.

FAR EAST:

Native Uprising

Even as Chinese and British forces took over Indo-China, native Annamites rose in rebellion at the prospect of a return of French rule, terrorizing the European population of the state, which normally exports much rice, rubber, high-grade coal, spices and tin.

Frenchmen were the principal targets of native wrath, since many, under protection of Chinese and British guns, have displaced Annamites holding public offices preliminary to re-establishment of French colonial rule.

Strangely enough, the Japanese, who promised Indo-Chinese independence during their military occupation of the country and still remain in force prior to their complete demobilization, have been called upon to help assist undermanned Allied units re-establish peace.

Aids Health

Remote, disease-plagued regions of the Amazon systems of Peru and Bolivia have been equipped by modern health measures to progress in human welfare.

The menace of malaria and other tropical diseases has been considerably lessened in the two countries by inauguration of hospitals and medical services by the U. S. and South American nations through the Institute of Inter-American affairs.

NAVY GOES MODERN

A young midshipman reported to the commanding officer of a battleship for duty. The C. O. was a gruff old sailor who had worked his way up through the years. He sized up the youngster coldly, and said, "Well, young fellow, I suppose that as usual, they've sent the fool of the family to sea."

"Oh, no sir," replied the midshipman, politely, "they've changed all that since your time, sir."

Entertaining Junior

Junior—Uncle John, please tell me a story.

Uncle John—Well, when I was a youngster about your age, I went to sea, and one day I landed on a desert island, and instantly I had to fight for my life with 16 cannibals, and only one of them got away.

Junior (interrupting) — But last year you told me it was eight cannibals.

U. J.—Yes, but you were too young to know the whole horrible truth.

"Because according to my calculations we are now inside St. Paul's Cathedral."

Was wartime 1944 the record year for railway freight and passenger traffic in the United States?

To the People of this Community

You've celebrated V-E Day and V-J Day but how about V-I Day? While you were buying extra bonds to equip and back our fighting forces, you also were beating down the threat of runaway living costs at home. The record of your part in fighting inflation speaks for itself in this report to you by Ted R. Gamble, National Director of the Treasury's War Finance Division. Says he: "Americans invested in war bonds two-thirds of every excess dollar of war wages above the cost of living."

The extra Victory Bonds you buy today are the most important bonds you have ever owned because they battle to preserve the gains you have scored on the home front. Hold the war bonds you own. Buy extra Victory Bonds. That's self-interest which serves you and your country. Don't fritter away the job you did for yourself in seven previous war loans. V-I (Victory over Inflation) Day is today and every day you buy more and more Victory Bonds.

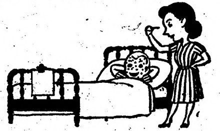
RED CROSS HOME NURSING

WHAT'S YOUR IQ ON SYMPTOMS?

SILLY SUSAN—When Johnny is tired and irritable, complains of a headache and sore throat, she tells him to run out and play with the other youngsters. "Fresh air will make you feel better." A few hours later Johnny is running a high temperature and his face is covered with angry red spots. Susan frantically telephones the doctor exclaiming helplessly that Johnny is dying of some strange disease.



CAPABLE CATHY—She takes Billy's temperature and pulse, reporting his symptoms accurately to the doctor by telephone. She puts him to bed immediately in a room by himself, and feeds him only liquids until the doctor arrives. When the doctor says Billy may be coming down with measles, she knows her prompt action has made Billy's recovery quicker and protected other children in the community.

HELP YOUR DOCTOR—HOME NURSING SHOWS YOU HOW—Your doctor is busier than ever now. He'll appreciate your intelligent assistance when illness strikes your family. Let Us Finish The Job

With the above slogan in mind, Marshall County's Victory Volunteers, more than 400 strong, will begin the task of contacting every resident on Monday morning to raise Marshall county's $434,000 quota in the Eighth and final Victory Loan Drive.

Quotas for the county were established at a meeting of the County War Finance committee in Warren last Thursday afternoon and evening. The quotas represent a reduction of approximately 25 per cent from the 7th War Loan whichwas successfully conducted in the County last summer.

While the district chairmen realize that it will be a difficult task to raise the county's quota, they feel confident that it can and will be done and will go to work with enthusiasm right at the start on Monday morning.

Marshall county was never in better financial condition than at the present time with deposits in every bank showing new high figures. The deposits at the present time in the banks of the county total approximately $7,000,000, and more are gaining daily as the 1945 crop is being sold.

"The residents of Marshall county have done an excellent job in supporting our armed forces all through the war," said O. M. Mattson, county war finance committee chairman. "Now in the Victory Loan, the people will have a chance to finish the job as our fighting men so gallantly finished theirs. We want an unconditional victory in this last of the war loans too. The extra dollars placed into Victory Bonds will serve as a cushion for future years when crops may not be as bountiful or prices as high as they are today. It is just good sound business policy to invest extra money in Victory Bonds today for the future.

Following are the quotas for HOLT DISTRICT
Geo. Fricker, Chairman

Agdar	$ 4,500.00
East Valley	3,000.00
Excel	11,000.00
Holt Twp.	3,000.00
Holt Village	2,500.00
New Solum	4,500.00

Locker Plant Started Here

Work has now started here on the construction of the Cooperative Meat Locker Plant. Carl Johnson and son Forest have leveled the lots and they and R. F. Smith have now put in footings for the foundation.

Mrs. Geo. Fricker went to Chisholm on the Iron range on Thursday to visit her parents.

POW Help With Beet Harvest

Sugar beet harvesting in the Warren community is progressing this week with the assistance of more than 200 Italian prisoners of war who arrived in Warren on October 7th and set up a prisoner of war camp in the North Star college building.

In the contingent that arrived were 220 prisoners together with a U. S. Army guard complement of 23 men, all of whom are now housed in the college building.

A large number of farmers in that area made application for use of the men for completing their harvest operations.

Infant Daughter Passed Away

The sympathy of the people of Holt and community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Andor Hjelle in the death of their infant daughter, Lois Ann on Monday afternoon at a hospital at Fargo. The little girl had been ailing since birth and they took her back to a specialist at Fargo on Monday as she had become ill over the week end.

Lois Ann was born on February 4th., 1944 and was at the time of her death almost 20 months old. Funeral was held at Newfolden on Thursday afternoon. The pallbearers were four Holt girls namely: LaRue Fricker Dorothy Sagstuen, Gladys Ness and Ruth Larson.

Eddy Henning got in some good goose shooting up at Thief Lake this week.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
*President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas*

Employment First

People who work in the fields, in mills, mines and shops, on railroads and in industry generally, are to be congratulated upon President Truman's choice of Fred M. Vinson, the new Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. His undertaking is enormous, delicate and vital. But it is my belief that nobody else in government is quite as well qualified to handle the job as Vinson.

The new cabinet member knows taxes. Things he has said already prove that he is keenly aware of two things that are currently the most important facts about taxes. (1) High taxes are necessary, now and for some time to come. (2) Wrongly devised taxes in the United States can wreck the financial structure of the entire world in a few months. Dark Ages might visit the earth again.

A Dependable Thing

The "yankee dollar" is one of few known quantities left in the financial world. While this condition lasts, there is a way for weak and depleted countries to gain industrial and then financial strength. The dollar will remain good so long as Uncle Sam keeps meeting his obligations promptly, fulfilling promises and paying the interest on his stupendous national debt.

Our debt is so big and America's moral obligations are so exacting that taxes must be high after the war, much higher than they have ever been in peaceful years before. Government has no way to get money except by taxing its citizens. Consequently the citizens have to be prosperous. There must be full employment, plenty of jobs at good wages—otherwise not enough taxes.

Holding our Ground

The world is relying on the solvency of America, on the soundness of the dollar, and it all depends on jobs. Mr. Vinson said: "Taxes should be levied in such a way that they have the least harmful effect on the expansion of business investment and the creation of jobs because productive employment is the source of . . . revenue which the government collects from taxes."

The Secretary's eye was not on taxes alone. In a recently published report he made it clear that productive employment is the foundation of America's living standard (highest in the world), the source of all income and the basis of prosperity for business and agriculture. We may be assured that Vinson will always do his best to prevent ruination of jobs by taxing business to a standstill.

A Rational Economy

Here is a powerful and rational sentence from Vinson's pen: "The sooner uncertainties in the post-war tax structure are removed, the sooner business management will be inclined to make firm commitments for expansion and the faster men can be put back to work following the wholesale cancellation of contracts that will occur with the unconditional surrender of Japan."

Persons who would like to see America in chaos, people who would like to see a dictator climb to power over America's wasted estates, may call the new Treasury head a friend of big business. He apparently is, to whatever extent such a friendship means jobs for workers, prosperity on the farm, customers in the store and food on the table for America's plain people.

Beware Of Frozen Cornstalks

While there is always some danger of cornstalk poisoning when stock is turned into fields in the fall, this may be a year to take special precaution, according to County Agent Forbes. Green corn and early frost tends to aggravate the danger.

The only way to find out whether constalks are dangerous is to try out a field with a few animals says Dr. W. L. Boyd, chief in the veterinary division at University Farm. Test animals should be watched carefully for sympyoms of trouble.

Results of recent experiments indicate that stalks lose their poisonous quality after having stood in the field or in shock for some time.

While cornstalk disease is considered something apart from moulds which are associated with damp corn, moulds, too, can be dangerous and will bear close watching, according to Boyd. Mouldy corn canbe fatal to horses and poultry, and will cause severe digestive disturbances in swine.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been rugged. Cold, cloudy and some traces of snow.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Peterson, Mrs. Ella Carlson and son Oscar and Melvin Leiran were entertained to a goose dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eddy Henning on Sunday.

Allied Mercy Crew Has Odd Experience With Foe At Air Field.

CHUNGKING, CHINA. — An Allied mercy crew which landed at Keijo, Korea, in the midst of 50,000 Japanese soldiers was alternately cursed, threatened, wined and entertained before it took off again with 500 gallons of Japanese gasoline, a member of the party said recently.

The mission of 22 Americans and Koreans landed at Keijo on a Saturday. The Japanese refused to allow them to see Allied prisoners of war but, rather than intern them, gave them the 500 gallons of gasoline to return.

OWI Correspondent Henry R. Lieberman, who accompanied the team, related the story.

The team was led by Lt. Col. Willis H. Bird of Landsdowne, Pa. As the transport settled down on the Japanese air strip, high ranking Japanese officers, including one identified as Lt. Gen. Yoshio Kotsuki, commander of the enemy forces in Korea, approached. He refused the request of the Americans to see Allied prisoners and also refused to give the names and nationalities of the prisoners.

Drinks, Songs—and Guns.

The mercy team and the crew of the plane put up for the night because the Japanese commandant was unable to get enough gasoline for the C-47 to leave immediately.

The Japanese meantime brought up two tanks and set up trench mortars around the plane. A 37 millimeter cannon covered the party.

During the night the Japanese entertained the Americans with beer, sake and Japanese songs.

Flight Officer Edward McGee of Durant, Okla., commenting on the scene said: "If someone had told me two weeks ago I'd be in a setup like this I would have turned him over to the loco ward."

Although the members of the team were armed with revolvers, tommy-guns and hand grenades just in case of trouble, Capt. Patrick Teel of New York City, who was with the first Ranger battalion at Anzio, said: "It'll take just five minutes to make us all dead ducks."

The flight to Korea from Sian entailed a journey of almost 1,000 miles over Japanese occupied territory.

As the plane got within 500 miles of Keijo the radio operator, Lt. Meredith L. Price of Charleston, W. Va., attempted to establish contact with the Japanese.

"We are expecting you and we guarantee you safe conduct," the Japanese said.

When the plane landed, Maj. Gen. Junjiro Ihara, chief of staff for the Japanese forces in Korea, asked Col. Bird his mission.

Just Looking Around.

The American officer replied that he was in Korea "as the initial pre-Allied occupation representative to bring whatever help is needed by Allied prisoners of war and to make preliminary arrangements for future evacuation in accordance with the terms of the peace negotiations."

"Then you're not here to negotiate a surrender?" Ihara asked.

"No, our mission is purely humanitarian," Bird replied.

Ihara said that the prisoners were well and were being cared for, but that the party could not see them.

During supper that night the Japanese were quite convivial. After singing Japanese songs, one asked, "What is the American air force song?"

Led by Capt. John Wagoner of the air transport command, from Grand Island, Neb., the Americans let loose with the chorus of "Off we go into the wild blue yonder."

The Japanese beamed and beat time on the table with their fingers.

After the Americans finished, the Japanese sang their air force song, "The Fighting Wing."

The next day the atmosphere became tense again. When Bird asked a Japanese officer to sign a note saying the mission had arrived but was refused permission to act, the major swore and made stinging references to "inferior persons."

Shortly afterward the guard around the plane was increased.

The gasoline finally was poured into the big ship and the Americans and Koreans took off on the return flight.

Two Marine Casualties Go AWOL—to Japan

WITH THE MARINES, YOKOSUKA. — Two marine casualties from Okinawa, who wanted to march into Tokyo so badly that they pushed aside a chance to go right home, came to Japan as stowaways and piled ashore with their old buddies.

They are Pfc. Joe A. Sagraves, Ashland, Ky., and Cpl. Joseph Curry, Sioux City, Iowa. They sneaked into a battalion work gang loading transports at Guam. Their pals got them arms and they hid aboard at sailing time.

"I'm putting the boys back in their old platoons with no punishment for going AWOL from Guam," said Maj. Wilson E. Hunt, Wayne, Pa. "Kids like that deserve being in at the finish."

Iron Across Length

When ironing, press with the length rather than across the width of fabric wherever possible. But if a skirt, slip or nightgown is cut on the bias, then iron on a slant, along the grain or straight of the material. This will prevent the stretching and sagging which makes hems uneven.

Keeps Mouth Shut

MRS. ALLEN'S HUSBAND GIVES HER A SURPRISE

WEST MONROE, LA.—Mrs. Carl C. Allen of West Monroe, Louisiana, has an interesting story to tell about how she discovered Faultless Starch. Here is what she wrote:

"Last week my husband brought home a box of Faultless Starch. I decided to use it, thinking that all starches were about the same. You can imagine my surprise when I began ironing. My iron fairly flew and I was finished in no time. My clothes were so bright, with no rough starch blotches to mar their sleekness. I felt I just had to tell you how wonderful your starch is. My husband was just as proud as I when he saw his shirts. I wish all women could just try your product."

Now there is a thoughtful husband. That box of Faultless Starch really meant more to Mrs. Allen than a box of candy—and here is why:

SAVE 468 MINUTES A YEAR

Let's say it takes ten minutes to make hot starch when you have to cook it and stir it over a hot stove. But you can make hot Faultless Starch in a minute. That means you save nine minutes each time you make it. If you wash only once a week, in one year you would save 468 minutes, or seven hours and forty minutes. Would you rather have a box of candy or a box of starch that saved you better than seven hours a year?

SAVE 26 HOURS A YEAR

And that isn't all! Many people tell us that Faultless Starch makes it possible to save half their ironing time. Let's be conservative and say that Faultless Starch might save you half an hour each ironing day. In a year you would save twenty-six hours of hard ironing time! Which is best—a box of candy or a box of Faultless Starch?

Why go on starching and ironing the hard way when you can do it the easy way with Faultless Starch. Or, better still, ask your grocer for a box today. You deserve Faultless Starch, too.—Adv.

225,000 Germans Are Listed as Criminals

PRAGUE.—Dr. Bohumil Ecer, Czechoslovakia's representative on the International War Crimes commission, said that the names of 225,000 Germans were on the provisional war crimes list.

In addition to Nazi leaders, he said, the list includes German financiers and industrialists who helped promote the war.

Wronged Husband, 17, Shoots Rival

Killed Man Who Won Wife 'Under My Nose.'

LOS ANGELES. — An outraged 17-year-old husband told police he shot and killed Harold Timothy Young, 30-year-old father of three children who wooed and won his wife away from him "under my very nose."

Leon Benon, 17, a warehouseman, was held on suspicion of murder. Deputy sheriff said he freely admitted shooting Young when he "found him making love to my wife."

Benon and his pretty 16-year-old wife, Lois Jean, celebrated their first wedding anniversary three days ago. Both are from Alpine, Texas, as is Young.

Officers summoned to the Benon home by Francis Elgin Smith, 33-year-old baker, found Young's body on the living room floor, his head and body riddled with rifle slugs. Benon and his wife were arrested at the home of his mother-in-law.

"This fellow has been playing around with my wife for a couple of months," Deputy Gordon Bowers quoted Benon as saying. "I finally said, 'To hell with it' and went for my gun."

The gun was found dismantled and tucked into a bedroom drawer at the Benon home, Bowers said.

Smith told the most complete story of the tragic affair. He said he and Young and the Benons had returned from a ride in Los Angeles and started talking in the living room.

"Young said suddenly, 'I'm in love with Lois. I want her to go to Texas with me,' " Smith related, according to police.

"Lois said she'd like to. Benon turned to her and said, 'Do you love him?' She said, 'I think I do, I don't know.' "

"That got Benon. He jumped up, grabbed his gun and blazed away."

Science Sweetens Future Sponges in Your Candy

WASHINGTON. — Maybe your postwar candy bar will sound different. It may contain "starch sponges"—which are very crispy and crunchy.

Don't worry though—a starch sponge isn't any relation to the porous swab you use to wash your car.

It's something stewed up in a test tube at the department of agriculture's northern regional research laboratory at Peoria, Ill., by a lady scientist named Majel M. McMasters. It's made of corn and department officials are pretty enthusiastic about its possibility as a food project.

T. Swann Harding, editor of the department's house organ, "Usda," gave the world its first notice that science is beating field corn into candy bars for the snack trade.

"In its dry state," he reported, "the ground or shredded sponge, because of its crispiness, imparts crunchiness to confections or crackle-like wafers.

"Shredded dry sponge also has properties similar to shredded coconut or chopped nut meats. When finely ground, the material shows promise as a stabilizer in chocolate coatings and icings."

Making it involves a lot of processes. The result is an extremely porous material with "very high calorific value," Harding says, and you know—crunchy.

Commercial candymakers are definitely interested.

Massachusetts Town Remembers First Banana

WELLFLEET, MASS.—This Cape Cod village is celebrating this year the 75th birthday of the banana.

It was in 1870 that Capt. Lorenzo Dow Baker of the Wellfleet succeeded in bringing a cargo of bananas to the United States from Jamaica, B. W. I.

Previously all attempts to import the fruit had failed because the bananas spoiled during the long voyage from tropical climes. In that year, however, Baker made the trip from Jamaica to Massachusetts so quickly—11 days—that the bananas arrived intact.

Faithful Camel Loses Out to Modern Motor Car

LONDON.—At long last the faithful camel is going the way of the horse as a beast of burden, according to Col. W. F. Stirling, British officer in the Middle East and one-time chief of staff to Lawrence of Arabia.

Back on his first leave in five years, Stirling said the automobile is taking the camel's place on the desert.

"The bottom has dropped out of the camel market and they are being sold for meat now," he said.

Heating Safety

One of the most notable innovations in safe heating is the wet base boiler in which water circulates under the ash pit. The fact that the boiler can be placed on a combustible floor is of interest in connection with the trend toward the basementless house. In such houses it is often desirable to install the boiler on a wooden floor in a utility room or kitchen. Other safety features of modern boilers are foot-treadle door openers, ball-shaped, air-cooled handles and side shakers, making it easier to open and close doors.

Lucky Stones

Emeralds were once believed to be beneficial to the eyes and amethysts were thought to prevent drunkenness, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica. The belief in lucky stones still exists.

Bath Banishes Blues

According to etymologists, the English word "bath" comes indirectly from a Greek word meaning "to drive sadness from the mind." Which goes to prove again that the classic Greeks were a modern people and that they knew the full value of bodily cleansing. Bathe frequently and thoroughly, and thus "drive sadness from the mind."

Plan Baths

If the man of the house has been accustomed to taking his daily shower in the morning, reserve this time for him. The children might bathe in the evening, alloting the time according to their ages and when they go to bed. The younger children might be bathed before dinner, older children later. Plan your own bath for whichever hour will give you the most relaxation.

Eggs Nutritious

Eggs help keep the body healthy. They make strong muscles and red blood. A child needs four to five eggs a week. An older person needs three to five eggs a week. Eggs may be eaten plain, or mixed in other foods.

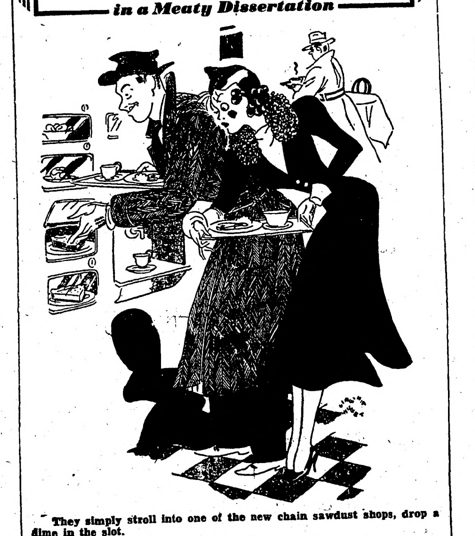
FRANK CONDON

in a Meaty Dissertation



They simply stroll into one of the new chain sawdust shops, drop a dime in the slot.

By FRANK CONDON

PEOPLE who are forced to wrestle with the weekly or monthly grocer's bill—and that means everybody — will be amazed and delighted to know about the news that has come from Harvard university, which is located in Cambridge, Mass. That news is what I call real news. It concerns the latest scientific advance, as explained by the celebrated German professor to the other admiring professors. The applause was deafening when the German ceased speaking.

Briefly, it is this. They have finally, after many years of laboratory struggle, succeeded in making sawdust edible. In a very short time, we shall be able to feed our families, using nothing but the lowly and despised offspring of the whirling saw and the unresisting tree, and naturally that is a matter of jubilation for the entire human race, as many persons have been going hungry in recent years and have been fed by their governments.

We don't have to understand how they do it, as long as they can do it, so the best way is to accept the word of the renowned German professor and be happy, for sawdust is just about our cheapest commodity and always will be. There are too many trees for sawdust ever to get expensive.

May Balance Budget.

Over in Germany, they are already feeding sawdust in edible forms to the farm animals and with elegant results. Horses so fed pull far heavier loads, cows give more milk, pigs squeal with greater gusto, goats butt harder and the ducks honk in two tones.

The effects of this new deal in human diet will spread over the world and all classes will share. It means genuine economy and a settlement of economic problems, for if we don't have to pay so much for our meals, then perhaps we can balance our national budget and perhaps Europe can pay off her war debts.

Consider the father of a family of 12, now struggling hopelessly on small pay to keep his little flock full of beans, potatoes, milk and bread. On the way home from his factory job, he will be able to stop in at the carpenter's shop and pick up a bag of sawdust from Joe, and then go cheerily on home with enough sustenance to feed the family for five days. If the carpenter happens to be out of sawdust at the moment, the old man simply borrows a saw and a two-by-four and saws himself a small heap of good, solid meals.

Sawdust Meals From Slot.

Or take the case of the young city clerk, who would like to escort his sweetheart to dinner and the theater. He cannot do it, not under our present food regime, as the double bill is too much for his delicate purse. He can pay for the theater tickets, but the restaurant charge overwhelms him, especially if his girl is healthy and likes steaks, salads, desserts and the trimmings. In a nice restaurant, this is about seven dollars, not counting the tip.

But under the coming sawdust system—and mind you, science will be able to produce any form, any kind of food from soup to nuts—they simply stroll into one of the new chain sawdust shops, drop a dime in the slot, a mere cover charge, and fill up on the rarest sort of viands, delicacies, fruits and assorted vittles, topping the meal off with a steaming beaker of sawdust coffee and sawdust ice cream.

The new discovery is indubitably one of the most important in the last hundred years, and may change the course of empires. As it stands today, we cannot grow coffee, but Brazil can; and Brazil cannot grow wheat, but we can. So we are forced as nations to swap products, using hundreds of ocean freighters and thus wasting coal and man-hours.

Dishes of Every Country.

France ships us Napoleon brandy and in return, we send France California peaches. Turkey ships us tobacco and we ship Turkey Oregon apples; Russia sends over caviar and we send back potato chips and the whole process is expensive, but when the new sawdust era dawns, all this foolishness will come to an end, for then we can walk over to the nearest lumber dealer, buy a barrel of fresh sawdust and sit down presently to a table groaning with the rarest and most delectable dishes.

It certainly is a cheery prospect and proves what many people have often said—that civilization would never have advanced thus far without the helping hand of science, without the aid of those noble and self-effacing men who toil silently in laboratories for the betterment of mankind.

Of course, man being the imperfect creature he is, the future may not be all skittles and beer. It may be that grasping and greedy capitalists will step in and corner the sawdust, buy up all the forests and woodland down to the last quivering aspen tree, and then go ahead boosting prices and making us pay through the nose.

Graft in Sawdust Industry.

Selfish politicians may side with the speculators and the day may come when a citizen will not even be allowed to walk into a shady woods. Then we shall have sawdust boot - leggers and sawdust speakeasies, with possibly a grim repetition of the whole unhappy prohibition scandal. You may not be able to buy a saw without a police permit, or carry one on your person, even a little jigsaw. You can even imagine a courtroom scene on the day after Christmas, with a respectable but downtrodden citizen facing the judge and trembling.

"What were you doing with the Christmas tree?"

"Your honor, I was just taking it home, so's to hang up a few toys for the children, a few glass balls and some imitation snow."

"They found a saw in your house, didn't they?"

"Yes, your honor, but—"

"Just another sawdust thief. Sixty days. Next case."

Diet Has Hazards.

Some second rate saloons like to have sawdust on the floor, but this market is comparatively small and is growing smaller, since ladies took to sitting in bars. It seems ladies do not like sawdust on the floor. The other use is to pour sawdust into ice-houses to keep the ice from melting and that also was a trifling market. All is changed. Families that own forests in this country will do well to hang on for a rising market, for one single pine tree may contain the makings of 5,000 hot dogs, 6 barbecues and a dozen New England clam bakes.

Heavy eaters and plain gluttons who overstuff at the table had better watch their steps and go easy, as it is rather embarrassing for a glutton to be walking down the street full of sawdust and chasing off the wood-peckers.

Cotton Damage

Most of the ginning damage to cotton occurs during the first three to four weeks of the ginning season. The cotton is "green" and damp because of the high moisture content of the seed.

Cotton Pickers

The leaves of the cotton must be removed by chemicals in order for picking machines to do the best jobs. Cotton is easily stained by green leaves and this makes dyeing of the cotton difficult.

Garden Superstition

As late as 1740, people in New England thought potatoes would shorten men's lives and make them unhealthy.

Towel Laundering

Increased use of towels means more frequent laundering. Hang towels straight on the line rather than by a corner. After using bath towels, spread them out on racks to dry instead of folding or bunching them. Never pile wet towels on the floor or in a laundry bag. Soggy towels can mildew overnight in hot weather.

Palm Wine

Fermented palm wine is often used as a yeast substitute for bread making in Liberia.

Canned Carp

A Minnesota manufacturer is about to can carp and market it, grated, tuna-style, under the name of "Lakefish."

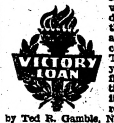
To the People of this Community



You've celebrated V-E Day and V-J Day but how about V-I Day? While you were buying extra bonds to equip and back our fighting forces, you also were beating down the threat of runaway living costs at home. The record of your part in fighting inflation speaks for itself in this report to you by Ted R. Gamble, National Director of the Treasury's War Finance Division. Says he: "Americans invested in war bonds two-thirds of every excess dollar of war wages above the cost of living."

The extra Victory Bonds you buy today are the most important bonds you have ever owned because they battle to preserve the gains you have scored on the home front. Hold the war bonds you own. Buy extra Victory Bonds. That's self-interest which serves you and your country. Don't fritter away the job you did for yourself in seven previous war loans. V-I (Victory over Inflation) Day is today and every day you buy more and more Victory Bonds.

Here's Where the Jobs are NOW!

● During the war, many of our people left home to work in war industries. We are proud of their patriotic service, just as we are of our sons and daughters in uniform.

But now we want them all back.

Now the war plants in big cities are closing.

Now there is increasing unemployment in large metropolitan areas.

Now the best place to look for a job is right back here at home.

Pulpwood a Growing Industry

One of the industries that offers great post-war opportunities is pulpwood. The tremendous wartime demand for pulpwood will continue because of the civilian demand that has been piling up and the many new industrial uses that have been discovered.

A Good Place to Live

Living costs are less here than in war boom cities, and it's better living. This is a good town, with a lot of fine people and it offers much in the way of security, friendship and wholesome living that you can't find in cities.

Hagen Returns From Europe

Washington—Returning from a two-months tour of the devastated areas of Europe, Representative Harold C. Hagen of Crookston has urged an immediate appropriation for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration as the only means of averting chaos there.

"UNRRA is doing a splendid job in the countries I visited," Hagen said. "It is supplying 90 per cent of the food in Greece, for example, and is the only thing standing in the way of anarchy and chaos in several countries. I am going to urge congress to grant the $550,000,000 approprition that is needed now so UNRRA can make plans for continuing its work without delay."

Rep. Harold C. Hagen.

Hagen made the trip to investigate UNRRA in Greece, Italy, the Balkans and other countries. He also examined condition in Germany, France, Norway and Sweden.

Norway, he said, is in the best condition of any of the war torn countries of Europe.

"They'll have enough food until sometime next spring," Hagen said "and the supply of clothin is fairly good, with the exception of shoes. Many Norwegians are wearing wooden and straw shoes."

Devastation of Greece and southern Italy is beyond belief, he said and those countries face severe hardships this winter because of shortages of food, clothing, housing and transpotation.

Hagen estimated that Greece would need UNRRA help indefinitely," while Italy, especially the southern part, might be able to get along after another two years.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College Searcy, Arkansas

Freedom

Individual liberty is one of the teachings of Jesus. It goes hand-in-hand with personal responsibility. How can a man be held responsible for his acts unless he is free to determine how he shall act? The understanding that certain rights are everybody's rights, and that no man can rightly deprive another man of them, is an idea for which the world is indebted to Christianity.

Compulsion in religion is older than history. Every nation's lore is colored with tales of forced worship. In fact, the history of Christianity is marred with a shameful record of coercion. Just the same, obedience to Christ is voluntary or it is not obedience at all, and (being an every-day thing) Christianity lives and grows best in surroundings of personal liberty.

A Moral Duty

Opposing dictatorship, resisting infringement by a few upon the liberties of many, is a reverent act of fidelity to the source of all freedom. No government is perfect; no economic system is perfect. For that matter, no church is perfect. All are subject, more or less, to leadership by imperfect people. Nevertheless some principles are right and worthy of vigorous defense.

Harry Emerson Fosdick said, "One of the great hours in history struck when mankind ran into the idea that all the pe[illegible] should unite in making laws, [illegible] then all the people should obey. Behind our pitifully fallible experiments with representative government stands the Ideal, worth everything our fathers gave for it and all that we can give—the democratic state."

Godless Laws

One-man governments traditionally become jealous of their subjects' loyalty to God; covetous too, perhaps, of their free-will offerings, large or small. Rarely do totalitarian states begin at the church when they start cutting off people's liberties. They get around to it in the long-run, however. There are about enough exceptions on record to prove the rule.

Dictators usually start their trespasses on freedom by presuming to say who shall engage in trade. It is the natural way to commence. Never do they find a large class in commercial pursuits, so they can begin grabbing power without antagonizing a majority. The next big strategy is to dominate the news. By this method a dictator can make his people think what he pleases.

Step at a Time

With buying and selling pinched under government's heel, one emergency follows another, accidentally or by design; either way serves the purpose. Consumers, the class most hurt by government in business, never learn the truth if press and radio are under control. Selfish rulers snatch away comforts and dole out confusion and suspicion, the chains of serfdom.

Traditionally tyrants work this way; it has happened all along through history. After business is confiscated and the news agencies seized, the people are poisoned with malice, and malice destroys living souls. Americans who value their religious liberty have no choice but to defend representative government, free enterprise, free speech and free press. They can fight on the front line and win, or wait to fight in the last trench and lose.

Let Us Finish The Job

With the above slogan in mind, Marshall County's Victory Volunteers, more than 400 strong, began the big task of contacting every resident on Monday morning to raise Marshall county's $434,000 quota in the Eighth and final Victory Loan Drive.

Quotas for the county were established at a meeting of the County War Finance committee in Warren last Thursday afternoon and evening. The quotas represent a reduction of approximately 25 per cent from the 7th War Loan whichwas successfully conducted in the County last summer.

While the district chairmen realize that it will be a difficult task to raise the county's quota, they feel confident that it can and will be done and will go to work with enthusiasm right at the start on Monday morning.

Marshall county was never in better financial condition than at the present time with deposits in every bank showing new high figures. The deposits at the present time in the banks of the county total approximately $7,000,000 and more are gaining daily as the 1945 crop is being sold.

"The residents of Marshall county have done an excellent job in supporting our armed forces all through the war," said O. M. Mattson, county war finance committee chairman. "Now in the Victory Loan, the people will have a chance to finish the job as our fighting men so gallantly finished theirs. We want an unconditional victory in this last of the war loans too. The extra dollars placed into Victory Bonds will serve as a cushion for future years when crops may not be as bountiful or prices as high as they are today. It is just good sound business policy to invest extra money in Victory Bonds today for the future.

Following are the quotas for

Agdar	$ 4,500.00
East Valley	3,000.00
Excel	11,000.00
Holt Twp.	3,000.00
Holt Village	2,500.00

Tarragon Vinegar

Tarragon vinegar is a favorite in dressing summer salads. The dark green leaves of tarragon are used for seasoning the vinegar. They are used both fresh and dried. This herb needs a little covering of litter and leaves for winter protection.

Cage Crickets

In the Orient the chirping noise of the house cricket is highly appreciated and many households keep them in cages, the cages often elaborately wrought and decorated.

Two-Headed Stream

The Rhine river rises as a two-headed stream in southern Switzerland, enters the Boden See (Lake Constance), and emerges to continue its winding 850-mile course to its multi-mouthed outlet in the North sea. In its oceanward journey it picks up several important tributaries, such as the Lahn, the Neckar, the Main, and the Ruhr from the east, and the Mosel from the west. In some stretches the river is an international boundary. It is a frontier between Switzerland and tiny Liechtenstein, between Switzerland and the old Austria, between Switzerland and Germany, and between France and Germany. Through Germany the river flows in a general northwesterly direction, turning sharply west at the Netherlands line to enter the North sea.

Freshen Grass With Fertilizer in Fall

Late August or September is the best season to give lawn grass a "lift." After the hard summer season, some refreshments in the way of fertilizer, and possibly lime, is called for. Thin stands of grass are particularly in need of help. If your lawn has not been limed in the last few years, it is suggested that you apply 50 to 75 pounds of ground limestone per 1,000 square feet. This will sweeten the soil and make it possible for the grasses to respond better to fertilizer treatment.

The addition of 10 to 20 pounds of fertilizer per 1,000 square feet of lawn will do wonders. Fertilizers such as 5-10-5, 4-12-8 or those of similar ratios are well adapted for thickening lawn grasses. Uniform distribution can be obtained by spreading the material in two directions. Measure out half of the fertilizer needed for the lawn and spread it in a north-south direction. Then spread the other half in an east-west direction, and there should be little difficulty in getting even coverage.

Lawns given a tonic in the manner described soon will assume a good healthy color and develop a dense stand of grass. Lawns composed of dense turf will resist invasion by undesirable weeds such as crabgrass, buckhorn and dandelion.

Combustioible Hay

Experienced farmers know that hay, if incompletely cured at time of storage—meaning that it has a moisture content of 25 to 30 per cent — is subject to spontaneous combustion.

Perk Up Potato Salad

Potato salad will taste better if placed in the refrigerator to chill several hours before serving time. This gives the onions and seasonings a chance to permeate the salad, making it uniformly delicious.

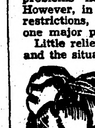
Sugar Restrictions Prevent Solution Of Dessert Problems

Mounds of creamy ice cream ride on top of peach halves set on squares of tasty, hot milk sponge cake. A dessert sauce made of the peach juice is a delightful foil for the fruit, ice cream and cake.

Now that food rationing has loosened up in most of the eatable goods, and we are once again able to get back on a prewar standard, cooking problems need not be pressing. However, in spite of this lifting of restrictions, we still have at least one major problem—that of sugar.

Little relief is in sight right now, and the situation will probably prevail for some months. What shall we do about dessert?



Well, first of all there are fruits which can be dished up in any number of perfectly delightful ways. There's whipped cream and ice cream, and, of course, sugar substitutes.

One cup of sugar or less is a good rule to follow if you are using recipes calling for this sweet but scarce commodity. If your cake calls for 1⅓ cups of sugar, use ¾ cup of sugar with ¾ cup of corn syrup. In this case you must use 2 tablespoons less milk than the recipe calls for and 2 tablespoons of flour, additional.

The fat scarcity also limits us to some extent on the baked goodies we want to make. That's why sponge cake will be popular, as in this following recipe:

Peach Sponge a la Mode.
(Serves 8)

- Sponge cake
- 1 No. 2½ can peach halves
- 1 quart vanilla ice cream
- Dessert sauce

The cake used uses 4 eggs and is made with scalded milk to give it a fluffy texture:

Sponge Cake.

- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 4 eggs
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup milk, scalded
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 3 tablespoons butter, melted

Sift flour and measure. Sift three times with salt and baking powder. Beat eggs with rotary beater until thick and lemon colored. Add sugar gradually and beat until fluffy. Fold in flour mixture, then milk, flavoring and melted butter. Fold until well blended. Pour into square cake pan lined with waxed paper. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 30 minutes. Cool in pans.

Dessert Sauce.

- Liquid from peaches
- 2 teaspoons granulated sugar
- Remaining peach halves, chopped
- ¼ cup salted almonds, slivered
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar

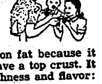
Cook the peach liquid down to ¾ cup. Stir in the granulated sugar and chill. Serve over the peach halves a la mode and top with nuts mixed with brown sugar.

To serve, arrange a peach half on a square serving of cake. Top with a mound of ice cream and serve with the dessert sauce.



If it's apples you want, then you will like this pie which is easy on fat because it does not have to have a top crust. It uses an egg for richness and flavor:

Open-Faced Apple Pie.
(Serves 6 to 7)

- 3 cups sliced apples (about ¼ pound)
- 1 egg, well beaten
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon flour
- ⅓ teaspoon cinnamon
- ⅓ teaspoon grated lemon rind
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons melted butter
- Plain pastry for 1 crust (about 1 cup flour)

Line pie pan with pastry, building up the edge. Fill with sliced apples. Add remaining ingredients to beaten egg; beat well. Pour batter over apples. Bake in a hot (425-degree) oven for 25 to 30 minutes.

Apples which are best to use in this type of pie are Rome Beauty or MacIntosh.

Black walnuts can lend a distinctive flavor to pie when fruit supplies dip to a low during the cooler weather as in this recipe:

Black Walnut Pie.

- 2 cups milk
- 1 cup sugar
- 6 tablespoons flour
- 2 egg yolks
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 teaspoons butter
- 1 cup black walnuts
- Baked pastry shell
- Whipped cream

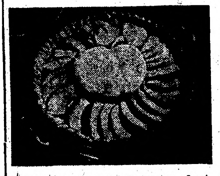
Make a custard of the milk, sugar, flour and egg yolks, cooking until thick in a double boiler. Add salt, vanilla and butter. Cool. Add nutmeats and pour into a baked pastry shell. Let set and cool. Serve with whipped cream topping.



This novel apple pie saves shortening by using just one crust. For delicious flavor and good, old-fashioned heartiness, add an egg to the apple mixture.

The old-fashioned puddings are always popular because of their molasses sweetness and fragrant spices. Suet is usually used for the base, but one of the fats may be substituted if it is unavailable. Buttermilk is used to give that fluffy texture which is so appetizing.

Quaker Pudding.
(Serves 10)

- 2¼ cups sifted flour
- 1⅓ teaspoons soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 1⅓ cups buttermilk
- 1 cup ground suet
- 1 cup molasses
- 1 cup raisins or other chopped dried fruit, or candied fruit
- ¾ cup rolled oats

Sift flour with soda and salt. Add all other ingredients in order given and mix thoroughly. Pour into two one-quart greased molds. Cover and steam for 3 hours. Serve with Foamy or Orange sauce.

Stuff green peppers with creamed chicken or turkey and rice. The peppers should be parboiled first, and after stuffed, they may be heated for 10 minutes in a moderate oven.

If you like stuffed green peppers, try them with a stuffing of corned beef hash mixed with onion. It's mighty good.

Like sweet potato pudding? One way to make it is to mash six cooked sweet potatoes with 6 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons grated lemon rind and 1 cup of orange juice. Bake this mixture in a greased casserole in a moderate oven for 15 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Make Meals Good: No family enjoys eating the same, same foods every meal. It's a good idea not to repeat dishes more than once every three or four weeks. Even favorite foods get monotonous when served too regularly.

To get contrast in every meal, follow the basic seven charts to see that you get in all different types of foods.

In planning a meal, have some things crisp, others soft, and still others hard. For example, meat can be the "soft" food, while broccoli or salad add the crispness, and rolls are the "hard" part.

Try to combine colors, too. Cauliflower, potatoes and creamed chicken may all be good, but they don't stimulate the appetite. However, consider the colorfulness of creamed chicken with french fried potatoes and peas with carrots.

There should also be a combination of hot and cold dishes. Even with a salad luncheon, the hot foods can be soup and coffee.

Some cooked, some raw is another good rule. Be sure to have a salad—a big one, too, if you are having roasted meat, cooked vegetables and pie or pudding, which are all cooked.

Cloudless Skies

When Australia starts developing its infant film industry and decides to build a counterpart of Hollywood, it won't be able to set it up in central Australia. The weather's too dry there for film-making. Clouds needed for essential pictorial effects in the cattle-droving epic, "The Overlanders" were so rare that on one occasion they had to race 60 miles across a tableland to catch up with a herd of cattle and photograph them while the thin, fleeting clouds were still around.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

A man's social position in Java is said to be determined by the number of spare tires he carries on his car. The more spares, the greater the owner's prestige among the natives.

Fliers can breathe easily at altitudes of 80,000 feet in a pressurized strato-suit developed by B. F. Goodrich.

Kidneys Must Work Well—
For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Operators Advised to Use DDT Killer With Care

No one can be too careful in applying DDT, the insect-killing chemical which is attracting so much attention. When the material is used in barns, poultry houses, and similar places, all feed should be removed so that it will not become contaminated. He reminds that all drinking cups and salt licks should be covered while the DDT is being applied. The spray must be allowed to dry thoroughly before animals are permitted to return to the premises.

Operators applying DDT spray or dust are urged to avoid getting any more of the material on themselves than is absolutely necessary and the same precaution applies to inhaling the material. Operators should be especially careful with DDT and oil mixtures because the oil penetrates the skin of humans much more readily than water and, therefore, is much more dangerous to handle.

General use of DDT is not advised because there still is considerable research work to be done on insects and crops. It has been used safely as a spray for fly, bedbug, louse and roach control in dairy barns and poultry houses, as a spray in combination with bordeaux mixture for the control of flea beetles and leafhoppers on potatoes, and as a spray or dust under certain conditions for various household insects.

Biological Desert

A virgin forest has been called a biological desert because it does not produce enough feed to support animal life in abundance.

Deep Rooted Plants Aid Soil

Plants that root deep, including trees and some grasses, are important agents in enriching the surface soil, the department of agriculture has found. The deep-ranging roots draw from the deeper layers of the soil the various plant nutrients, particularly minerals. When the plant dies and decays these are returned to the soil, but are concentrated in the top layers where shallow-rooting plants can draw on them.

To the People of this Community

Take a tip from your favorite retail merchant. His Christmas counters are stocked for the first time since 1939 with commodities you dreamed about in the darkness of war. And yet he and his employees will go the limit today in telling you for your own good to buy "something else" first.

As a war-wise thrifty American you need not be told that the name of this product is Victory Bond, that it can never be worth less than you pay for it, that it will return $4 for every $3 invested when held to maturity 10 years hence, that it is your personal servant at the same time it is serving your country's current needs, that it will assure you not only a merry Christmas this year but help to make Christmas merry in the years to come. Your merchant knows a great product. That's why he is putting every effort to stuff the Christmas stockings of this community with extra Victory Bonds.

NOV. 21, 1945
AN IMPORTANT DATE FOR THOUSANDS OF ARMY VETERANS NOW IN CIVILIAN LIFE

Between now and November 21, thousands of Army veterans will reenlist in Uncle Sam's new volunteer peacetime Army. Because men who have been discharged between May 12 and November 1 of this year and reenlist on or before November 21 will be able to return to the Army with the same grade as they held when discharged.

Men with six months of satisfactory service discharged as privates will, on reenlistment before November 21, be given the grade of private first class.

Men now in the Army who apply for discharge after NOVEMBER 1 for the purpose of reenlisting in the Regular Army will also retain their present grades, if they enlist within 20 days after discharge and before FEBRUARY 1, 1946.

"BEST JOB IN THE WORLD"

These special privileges are typical of the new law recently passed by Congress. Few opportunities for a lifetime career offer as many attractive advantages.

Can you think of any other job that would give you good pay, your food, clothing, quarters, free medical and dental care, world-wide travel, 30 days' furlough every year, education and training in any of nearly 200 skills or trades, and enable you to retire with a life income any time after 20 years' service?

There isn't any! That's why a job in the Regular Army has been called "The Best Job in the World."

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE NEW ENLISTMENT PROGRAM

1. Enlistments for 1½, 2 or 3 years. (1-year enlistments permitted for men with 6 months' service.)
2. Men reenlisting retain their present grades, if they reenlist within 20 days after discharge and before Feb. 1, 1946. The same applies to men discharged between May 12 and Nov. 1, 1945, who reenlist before Nov. 21, 1945.
3. An increase in the reenlistment bonus to $50 for each year of active service since the bonus was last paid, or since last entry into service.
4. 20% extra pay when overseas.
5. Paid furlough, up to 90 days, depending on length of service, with furlough travel paid to home and return, for men now in the Army who enlist.
6. Mustering-out pay (based upon length of service) to all men who are discharged to reenlist.
7. Option to retire at half pay for the rest of your life after 20 years' service — or three-quarters pay after 30 years. (Retirement income in grade of Master or First Sergeant up to $155.25 per month for life.) All previous active federal military service counts toward retirement.
8. Benefits of GI Bill of Rights.
9. Family allowances for the term of enlistment for dependents of men who enlist or reenlist before July 1, 1946.
10. Choice of branch of service and overseas theater in Air, Ground or Service Forces on 3-year enlistments.

Liberalism

Back in America's colonial days before the Revolutionary war when everybody was underprivileged, there were only three freedoms. Everybody had a right to work hard, save as much as he could of his earnings and use his head as profitably as possible in business. If you have a taste for long words you might call the three freedoms industry, frugality and ingenuity.

Politics in those days were all full of rich-man vs. poor-man problems, same as now. They were, to be sure, better decorated with pretty English but the issues were about the same: What will we have to work with? If we do well, how much can we keep, and how much will be taken by the government? Government in those days was the English king, of course.

Lovers of Freedom

People who thought the king ought to show more liberality called themselves liberals. In theory the king owned the land. In reality he held a tight rein over his subjects. He taxed them plenty and his subsidized buying concern paid little enough for what they produced. A liberal, in those days, was a man who wanted government to loosen up a bit in favor of the individual.

Affairs of the people were not changed very much by the Revolution. Colonies changed into states and new issues arose but still there was an over-all government. In this over-all government were people who had power-lust, or else feared to trust the common people with vital decisions. Opposed to these power-hungry folk were the liberals, still plugging for personal liberty.

Liberals Won Out

The liberals were right. Time has proved beyond a doubt that people act better and live better and make more progress materially and spiritually when they have more freedom. Since the United States became a first-class power in record time, the world's wealthiest and happiest people, the word "liberal" has been popular here. A liberal, to us, is one who wants the individual to be free.

Through the same historic periods America has had reactionaries. They were the people, in colonial days, who wanted the king to rule them. After the Revolution, the same element wanted an iron-rod rule in Washington—something like a dictator. Small wonder that reactionaries have always been unpopular in America, people who howl against the system and try to grab power for themselves.

Try to Swap Labels

Reactionaries in America today are smart. They have learned one lesson well. They are very sure of one thing: they have a bad name. They know also that the word "liberal" is an asset. Accordingly they have adopted the term "liberalism" and call themselves liberals. This is the very same political element that supports more government rules and less liberty for individuals.

By the same strategy, this political element has begun to call people reactionaries who hold precisely to the liberal teachings of Thomas Jefferson. Don't let anybody tell you that government control of everything, and the destruction of individual freedom and opportunity, is the liberalism that Americans think so highly of—nor that it is liberalism at all. It is a counterfeit road sign designed to misdirect American thinking away from the ways of freedom.

Friend Of The Poultrymen

Governor Thye, himself a producer of chickens on his farm near Northfield, is proving an effective friend of the Midwest poultrymen. As told by the Pioneer Press, the Governor's ideas of the need for federal government support for poultry prices wero confirmed when sale of his own farm flock of hens brot only 16 and 18 cents a pound. Not for himself, since his chickkens had been sold, but for other poultrymen, the Governer drew attention of the Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson to the price decline.

It was Governor Thye also who revealed, on authority of Secretary Anderson, that the U. S. Commodity Credit Corp. was considering action to support prices of chickens and turkeys. For a time, there was skepticism among officials and non-officials as to the correctness of Governor Thye's information.

But confirmation came quickly from Washington that a program of supports for prices of chickens at parity and of Turkeys at slightly above parity actually has been drawn up and by the Department of Agriculture, and awaits the official "go" sign to get under way. Just how far the government will go, and how the program will work out remains to be seen. But it is plain that, with his personal experience and understanding as part of the background, Governor Thye has done his part in defence of the poultry producers of this and neighboring states.

—Editorial in St. Paul Dispatch, October 29, 1945.

Note: Governor Thye telephoned Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson and placed before him the plight of turkey and chicken growers. He pointed out that Minnesota poultrymen raised this year's big flock in direct response to appeals, backed by promises of price supports, from the government for all-out production for war needs. He asked if a way could not be found through price supports or some other way to protect farmers from disastrous losses.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Over 300 patents dealing with rubber chemistry are among the 45,000 United States patents seized from aliens and nationals of occupied countries which are now available for licensing to American citizens.

Even at peak production rates, it may take eight years for manufacturers to meet the demand for new automobiles.

In five years the number of synthetic rubber passenger-car tires in this country has risen from a few thousand tires to about 33,000,000.

To combat the shock from contact with icy waters, B. F. Goodrich has produced a new synthetic rubber anti-exposure suit for fliers.

Conestoga Wagon

The precursor of the great Prairie Schooner, the Conestoga wagon was a huge broad-wheeled, cloth - canopied wagon, usually drawn by six horses. Generally it was painted blue and was topped in red. It has been described as "one of the most distinctively American devices of all our transportation history." The Conestoga wagon originated among the Pennsylvania Dutch and took its name from the township in Lancaster county where they first were made. Records do not indicate definitely when they were built first but historians place it about the mid-18th century. The first turnpike road in the United States, from Philadelphia to Lancaster, over which they traveled, was opened in 1794. Occasionally they traveled independently but generally they went westward in caravans.

Good Breakfast Dish

A hearty cereal mush or porridge, which is usually served with milk, is a good main dish for breakfast. But everybody needs eggs, and if eggs are not included in other meals, have them as the main dish for breakfast several times a week. You might also serve fish once in a while. For example, creamed white fish flakes on toast, or codfish balls, or a smoked fish. The variety meats make good breakfast dishes, too—kidneys, liver or brains.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Congress Fashions 5½ Billion Dollar Tax Reduction for 1946; Ponder Postwar Army Training

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

With freedom of speech assured under Allied orders, former Japanese political prisoner addresses gathering in Tokyo. Under proposed liberalized constitution, all Nipponese elements would be afforded opportunity for recognition in nation's governmental councils.

TAXES:
Good News

Though the senate and house had yet to compromise their differences, John Q. Public could look forward to substantial reductions in income taxes in 1946, and American business was assured generous relief for the immediate postwar period.

No less than 2½ billion dollars was expected to be lopped off of individual income taxes as a result of provisions for permitting $500 exemptions for dependents before payment of the normal 3 per cent levy and the scaling down of surtax rates.

Close to another 8 billion dollars was scheduled to be pared from corporation income taxes through substantial reduction or total elimination of the excess profits assessment; repeal of the declared value excess profits and capital stock levies, and graduated decrease in surtax rates on companies with less than $50,000 net return.

In addition to income tax reductions, the use tax on automobile and boats was expected to be dropped. Solons were divided on the question of wartime luxury levies, however, with the house for cutting present rates to prewar levels July 1 and the senate against the action.

With reserves well over 6 billion dollars, both houses were unanimous in freezing present social security payroll taxes at 1 per cent on employee and employer alike and forestalling an automatic increase to 2½ per cent apiece January 1.

Under the tax relief bill drawn up by the senate, G.I.s would not be required to pay taxes on service compensation during the war years, and officers would be permitted to spread tax liabilities over a three year period interest free.

LABOR:
Setting Pattern

With both Henry Ford II and United Automobile Workers' leaders expressing confidence in settlement of a wage adjustment at the company, government officials held high hopes that an agreement might result in the establishment of a postwar pay pattern and clear the way for speedy reconversion.

Government optimism was a welcome note in the dreary labor picture, pointed up by the deadlock in negotiations between the UAW and General Motors over the CIO union's demands for a 30 per cent wage increase to maintain wartime "take-home" pay and the corporation's resistance to the demands because of possible effects on prices.

Setting the pattern for other CIO unions, the UAW declared that General Motors was well able to dip into alleged huge wartime profits to carry over any losses accruing from higher wages until future production reached big volume levels. Reflecting industrial sentiment for its own part, General Motors denied exorbitant wartime earnings and declared any withdrawal from reserves would crimp expansion plans.

As the companies and unions clashed, the administration worked on a reconversion wage policy designed to guide negotiations through the troublesome days ahead. Strongly influenced by labor, the government reportedly favored substantial wage boosts to maintain wartime "take-home" pay while freezing prices at prewar levels, except in hardship cases.

Giving both capital and labor its say in the formulation of a reconversion pay program, the government moved slowly in the establishment of policy. Hopes ran high that the forthcoming management-labor parley would result in the voluntary creation of machinery for settlement of important disputes.

MILITARY TRAINING:
Await Response

Having received President Truman's recommendation for one year of postwar military training for American youth 17 to 20, congress adopted a cautious attitude on the question, with one ear perked for popular reaction and the other for military argument.

Personal congressional response to the President's request varied, with Senator Revercomb (Rep., W. Va.) declaring "... I am open minded—I want to hear both sides of this. ..." while Representative Celler (Dem., N. Y.) exclaimed "... We want no truck with compulsory military conscription. ..."

President Truman asks congress for military training for youth.

Meanwhile, it was estimated that about 975,000 youth would be called up for training each year under the President's program, with 250,000 rejected for physical or mental deficiencies. Because of weather considerations, the largest number of camps undoubtedly would be located in the south, with regular army officers and non-commissioned officers in charge. Fewer routine tasks, such as kitchen police, would be in store for reservists, military sources said.

JAPAN:
Reform Imminent

Her military machine smashed, Japan's highly developed economic monopolies, designed for foreign as well as domestic exploitation, also faced imminent dissolution as part of the Allied program to strip Nippon of her war-making potential and democratize the country.

The losers figured to be the five great financial-industrial families of Japan, which, as the dominant civilian powers, had exercised strong pressure on the nation's foreign policies. Backed both politically and financially by the government, the big five, known as the "zaibatsu," were heavy investors in overseas development.

By smashing the "zaibatsu," the Allies planned to loosen their grip over Japanese politics and permit more liberal and democratic elements to exert influence over government direction. At the same time, destruction of the great combines promised freer opportunity for economic development in the country.

As steps were taken for the dissolution of the "zaibatsu," the political transformation of Japan slowly gained ground with new parties in the development stage and more liberal political institutions impending in the rewriting of the national constitution.

Huge Postwar Market for Autos Looms

Potential demand for automobiles by domestic consumers next year should amount to 9,843,000 cars, after allowing for 331,000 cars to meet the increase in population, says the Alexander Hamilton institute.

At the beginning of 1942, the number of passenger automobiles in operation in the United States was at a record peak of 27,364,000, results of an extensive survey showed. As the result of the stoppage of production during the war, the prospect is that there will be only 21,921,000 cars in operation at the beginning of 1946. Taking into account the increase in population since 1942, the number of passenger automobiles in operation at the beginning of 1946 will thus be 6,768,000 cars below the normal level and in addition 2,744,000 cars may be scrapped in 1946.

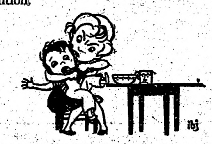
RED CROSS HOME NURSING

ARE YOU AS SMART AS YOUR BABY?

WHEN YOUR BABY CRIES do you fly into a panic, wring your hands and wonder, "Oh dear, what can the matter be?" Try giving him a bottle of water if he cries between feeding times. He might only be thirsty. Or loosen his clothing so that he can move freely. Your baby's cries are not always a sign of serious trouble. He just wants to tell you that he needs attention.



WHEN JACK REFUSES HIS CARROTS do you angrily force him to eat them or threaten, "I'll take you to the doctor unless you do?" A wise mother would substitute another food of equal value or gradually teach him to like carrots by feeding them to him in small amounts. Young children have taste likes and dislikes just as adults do. And never instil fear of the doctor in a child's mind with threats.

RED CROSS HOME NURSING teaches you how to care for yourself before the baby is born and how to care for him during the pre-school years. You also learn what precautions will prevent illness in your family and how to be of assistance to your doctor when illness does occur.

If there is no home nursing course offered at present in your community, ask your Red Cross chapter how you may help organize one.

LOOKING AHEAD
BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College Searcy, Arkansas

From "V" to "E"

The indicator that points to primary objectives on Uncle Sam's dial moved, August 12, from Victory to Employment. Correctly this nation's first aim from December 7, 1941, to V-J Day was to win the war and save the world's free peoples from despotic rule; worth all it cost in blood, sweat and tears. Now that's finished, and the new primary objective is to hold what's been gained.

Damages have been fearful. Some never can be repaired;—some can. There are twisted minds and broken hearts, wounds to heal and debts to pay. Those losses that can be won back will demand much time and patience. By their very nature, they are deferred. But unemployment is another aggressive enemy, not to be put off. We provide work now or lose what our young men bought with their lives.

Something to Avoid

Mass unemployment in this country might easily start a revolution among industrial workers that would overthrow the republic and destroy our very American way of life. It is the one catastrophe to be feared by the whole people of America. War's end touched off much talk about post-war legislation but all of it is relatively unimportant except what has to do with gainful employment.

Legislative acts that merely promise work to service men are nothing but emotional brainstorms. Jobs have to pay their own way to be worth having. Since 15,000 men will lay down arms every day for 14 months, one of three things must happen: (1) Private industry must expand and make room for them, (2) Government will make a big WPA for them or (3) Want will bring desperation.

Good Tax Laws First

A hungry and outraged people rush mob-like to dictatorship. An army-size WPA marches with slave-like steps to the same destination. Well paid jobs in private industry with opportunity for improvement and advancement constitute the only work fit for a free people. It is the only solution worthy of America's clean record. Industry must expand and make jobs. It is the only way to remain free.

Only one thing stands in the way —taxes! Expanding industry, enough to make the needed jobs, calls for investments which (same as jobs) have to pay. Today's taxes, however, make it impossible to find a paying investment that will make jobs. The tax laws were all right in 1940 when they were passed to take the profit out of war. Now they threaten to ruin our future by taking the prosperity out of peace.

A Simple Tax Plan

It is my conviction that corporation taxes and standard individual taxes should be levied at the same rate. I think the structure should be high enough to meet the requirements of the proposed budget without having any surtaxes higher than 50%. For an investor to pay out more than half his income in taxes will discourage large investments—the very kind needed.

With a few specific exceptions I oppose excise taxes and consider it wrong in principle to tax distributed income of corporations more than once. Excess profits taxes should be eliminated immediately. A fair tax policy, and certainly an expedient one, will encourage capital investments for profit in going concerns rather than in government bonds. We want the right taxes for the most jobs.

Deer Season Opens Tomorrow

"Play safe in the woods!" was the warning issued today by Lew E. Fiero, state game and fish director, to an estimated 100,000 deer hunters who will seek their white-tailed quarry beggining tomorrow and extending through Sunday, November 25.

Fiero calls attention to the fact that the chances of being shot while hunting are greatest while in the pursit of deer. Records for 1944 deer season showed 23 deer hunting accidents including 13 injuries and 10 deaths. Eight of these deaths were caused by other hunters and two were self-inflicted.

According to the new game and fish code, 50 per cent of the cap and 50 per cent of the jacket of each deer hunter must be red. Penalty for failure to wear red as prescribed in the law is revocation of the hunter's license.

Don't hunt while intoxicated.

Mrs. M. O. Mattson of Waubun and her brother Martin Olson of Crookston were here Wednesday making arrangements for Mr. Mattson's funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Ness, Amanda and Ingvald Fosholm attended a party for Cleo Monson at Thief River Falls at the Ole Heiran home on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Swan who have been farming near St. Hilaire, have sold out and moved to St. Paul.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Crises in China and Indies Threaten Peace in Far East; Foresee Substantial Wage Gains

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Given noisy welcome by populace, marines arrive in Tientsin, China, to occupy port after Jap surrender. As crowds cheer, this leatherneck enjoys spin in bicycle rickshaw.

FOREIGN POLICY:

Regional Security

Though Japan has laid down her arms, peace has not yet come to the Pacific, what with Chinese nationalists and communists at swords points and Indonesians seeking their independence from Dutch rule.

U. S. troops stood in the middle as Chinese nationalists squared off against the communists, with marines guarding the vital coal mines and rail route around the shipping port of Chinwangtao in the troublesome northern zone.

Heretofore, the communists have considered this territory their especial domain, and until Chiang Kai-shek's troops set foot upon it after disembarking from U. S. vessels, no nationalist forces had ever challenged Red control there. While the communists withdrew in the face of nationalist landings at Chinwangtao, they remained active to the west, cutting rail routes over which Chiang could deploy his armies.

With the U. S. supporting the nationalists and the Russians having recently promised to keep hands off of Chinese politics, Chiang has enjoyed every advantage in his effort to extend his domination over the country. While his representatives have haggled with the Reds over terms in Chungking, Chiang has cleverly pressed his edge in the north.

President Soekarno

Meanwhile, natives of the East Indies, led by President Soekarno of their recently established republic, looked to conferences with Allied authorities to clear their claims for independence. Strongly organized early this year when the fortunes of their Jap conquerors began falling, the Indonesians presently represent a formidable trouble-making force hoping to browbeat the Dutch into terms.

The Mr. Big of the independence movement, Soekarno was kept busy trying to quell Indonesian hot-heads whose outbreaks threatened his control of the situation and promised to weaken his hands in dealing with the Dutch.

WAGE POLICY:

Labor Sees Gain

Though President Truman left the way for reconversion wage settlements up to the collective bargaining of employers and unions, labor looked to the administration program to pave the way for substantial pay increases within the stabilization structure.

By appealing for maintenance of high wartime "take-home" pay, and declaring business well able to absorb the added costs, or eligible for moderate price increases, Mr. Truman was seen to apply pressure on management at a time when attention is being focused on the all-important wage negotiations in the automobile, oil and steel industries.

In enunciating his reconversion wage policy to a radio audience estimated at 32,000,000, the President did so only after administraton consultations with both big business and labor leaders. As a result of one of these conferences with Henry Ford II, government officials expressed confidence a satisfactory settlement could be arranged in the company's plants, setting an industry-wide pattern.

While the President said industry generally was capable of extending wage increases because of overtime elimination, greater productivity per worker, tax credits for lower earnings and abolition of the excess profits levy, he promised that price boosts would be granted after a trial period if the added costs resulted in operating losses.

Meantime, price rises would be considered in cases where industries raised wages to a full 28 per cent to cover added living costs since January, 1941; boosted pay to iron out differences in plants in the same industries or localities, or paid more to attract workers to essential enterprises to speed up reconversion.

With the government's wage policy established, representatives of management and labor met in Washington, D. C., to establish machinery for settling differences.

FARM PRICES:

Substantial gains in prices received by farmers for truck crops, grains and cotton were primarily responsible for a two-point upturn in the general level of prices received by farmers to 19. per cent of its August, 1909-July, 1914 average in mid-October, the department of agriculture reported. October parity prices reached another new 25-year high as prices paid by farmers for commodities, interest and taxes, advanced.

AGRICULTURE:

1946 Prospects

Though the government intends no leveling off of over-all production next year and demand for food should remain high, real farm income may drop as much as 15 per cent during 1946 in reflecting increases in some prices of what farmers buy, the department of agriculture predicted.

Despite a 15 per cent drop in real income—that is, what income will actually buy in goods, etc.—it will still remain double the prewar average, the department reported. However, any kind of a decrease would be the first since 1935.

Predictions of a drop in real income for 1946 followed reports that the government would soon outline production goals for next year, asking for maintenance of present livestock and hog marketings and wheat and corn acreage; increased plantings of cotton and sugar beets, and sharp cuts for eggs and chickens and oil bearing crops. Milk and potatoes would be scheduled for smaller reductions.

FUEHRER'S END:

Died Wth Eva

Answering repeated rumors of Hitler's escape from Berlin, British intelligence declared that an exhaustive investigation had indicated that the fuehrer had shot himself in the bunker of the reichchancellery on April 30 and his consort, Eva Braun, had followed him in death by taking poison.

Though broken in health, Hitler remained alert in mind to the end, the British found, and even held hopes for a successful defense of Berlin after his decision to remain in the capital on April 22 and abandon plans for a last-ditch stand in the Bavarian mountain redoubt. When the Russians continued to hammer forward, however, hope faded and Hitler and his mistress were married on April 29, climaxing a long, secret relationship.

Bidding his personal followers in the reichchancellery goodbye the next day, Hitler then shot himself through the mouth while his mate took poison, the British said. Per the fuehrer's last orders, Propaganda Minister Goebbels and Deputy Leader Bormann then saturated the bodies with gasoline and burned them beyond recognition. It is also believed that the remains may have been further broken up and then buried.

More Shoes on Way

With production for November and December expected to hit 30 million pair a month, shoes soon should become plentiful, with dealers able to replenish stocks curtailed by former wartime regulations and runs made upon stores following the removal of rationing.

At 20,000,000 pairs per month in August, the output began to spurt after V-J day, reaching 28,000,000 for October.

Warn of Traffic Hazards

As chairman of the National Safety council's committee on winter driving hazards, made up of 30 experts in fields of traffic and transportation, Prof. Ralph A. Moyer of Iowa State college warned that the coming snow and ice season may cause one of the worst "traffic accident winters" in history.

With a study of recent years showing traffic accident death rates for 36 northern states 24 to 53 per cent higher in the winter than in the summer months, Moyer said, the combination of more and older cars, more gas, and more "restraint weary" drivers may result in the worst season in history. Drivers in snow belt states must consider dangerous road conditions and should immediately check their brakes, tire chains, windshield wipers, defrosters, and headlights.

Concerning future auto and truck models, Professor Moyer said manufacturers are giving more consideration to safety and practical fender styling for easier installation of anti-skid chains without impairing streamlining. New windshield and window designs, defrosters and headlights also improve winter visibility.

GERMANY:

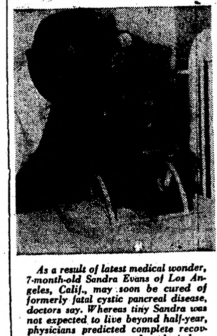
Foresee Trouble

Because of widespread unemployment, food and fuel shortages and murder and looting by displaced persons, serious outbreaks may occur in Germany over the winter, General Dwight D. Eisenhower reported.

Eisenhower's statement followed disclosure of a survey that the Germans generally had praise for the occupation of the British, were irked by seeming American indifference to conditions and fostered a deep hatred for the Russians. The statement also came on top of demands in some circles that the Allies lay down a clear-cut economic policy for Germany so that normal activity may be restored to relieve the widespread chaos.

German youths and returned soldiers presently constitute the largest trouble-making element, Eisenhower said, with much of their ire directed against frauleins fraternizing with Allied troops and displaced persons. Such discontent could well lead to organized resistance against occupation forces, Eisenhower warned.

On Road to Life



As a result of latest medical wonder, 7-month-old Sandra Evans of Los Angeles, Calif., may soon be cured of formerly fatal cystic pancreal disease, doctors say. Whereas tiny Sandra was not expected to live beyond half-year, physicians predicted complete recovery after treatment under plexi-glass, requiring inhalation of vaporized penicillin diluted in saline solution.

JAP NAVY:

Remnants Doomed

Once proud possessor of the imperial fleet, Japan will be reduced to zero as a sea power following Allied plans for the destruction of Nippon's remaining capital ships and the division of the smaller craft and auxiliaries.

Because differences in design prevent their efficient use by the U. S., Britain, Russia and China, one battleship, four cruisers, four aircraft carriers and 51 submarines will be sent to the bottom, with the battleship expected to serve as a target for an atomic bombing test. Indicative of the differences of bigger Jap warships, space between decks is 6 inches shorter than in other navies, thus cramping their use by taller people.

Some 38 destroyers built according to usable specifications will be divided among the Big Four along with coastal and auxiliary vessels. In constructing their destroyers, it was learned, the wily Nipponese solicited plans from shipbuilders, copied them and then returned them as unsatisfactory, escaping payment for their use.

BEVERAGE TAXES:

Federal revenues from distilled spirits have increased steadily from the $163,998,710 recorded in 1934 to $1,408,368,230 in 1944, the New York Trust company points out.

Although state revenues from distilled spirits cannot be totaled as accurately as the federal because of the complexity of state revenue regulations and the manner of collection, there is little question but that the sale of distilled spirits forms a substantial part of state income, the company found.

Fundamentals Needed In Postwar Education

Courses Must Be Centered Around Core of Subjects Stressing Human Relations; Physical Build-up Also Important.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

(This is the second of two articles on the "new reconversion," this one in education.)

In a previous column I laid before you the vital need of reconverting our educational system if America is going to meet the challenge of other ideologies to the faith in our democratic institutions. I pointed out how poorly many of our occupation forces are testifying to their democratic convictions in the face of the geniality of our former enemies.

I took you into the office of Commissioner of Education John Studebaker who pointed out to me how reconverting educationally is as important as reconverting industrially if we are going to meet the problems of the day. Dr. Studebaker said that this could be achieved by making a solid core of education available to all. Such a core would be composed of certain basic studies which educators believe are essential to a solidarity of democratic thought. The commissioner of education sees this core as a reinforcement of mental iron in the moral structure of the nation.

When you talk about making this core available to all, that is not the complete picture. Men like Doctor Studebaker would have this group of basic studies required of all student, not just made available to them. And thereby, say the traditionalists, hangs a threat to the elective system under which many institutions of learning have been comfortably educating students. Under the system of free choice, College Joe and College Jane could pick the courses their hearts desired. If their hearts desired a little extra sleep in the morning, they could pick classes that would not require early rising. If extra-curricular activities were particularly heavy one semester, they did not have to take economics which was hard when Turkish architecture was a snap.

Too many students have been coming out of our institutions of learning without a basic concept of what our democracy is all about, say the educators who are crying for reconversion. If they don't select the courses that will give them that concept, they must be required to take them, these same men say—the future of our way of life is at stake.

Education Vital Force in State

It is a well-known fact that before the Nazis ever dreamed of world conquest they first restrained by force, those who were too old or too wise to accept Nazi indoctrination. The more malleable minds of the young were filled with the false doctrines of subordination to the state, race hatred and exaltation of might. Their other anti-democratic and anti-Christian principles were poured into the youth until there was produced a state in which the controlling element of the population was fanatically loyal to Naziism.

Democracy and Christian principles once instilled can produce just as strong a loyalty, just as enduring a faith, but there is a minimum of instruction in their true meaning that must be made available to everyone—more than that, that should be required study of everyone who would be a good citizen. This is the first way in which the destructive forces which are working against democracy can be arrested.

And so Doctor Studebaker presents the idea of a "core" around which can be built an understanding of the whole democratic system; how its parts can be fitted into one another and into a world which must either be closely integrated or explosively antagonistic.

There is not space here to consider the details of the composition of this core. Two examples of the type of studies which Doctor Studebaker feels are essential, and which must be taught much more comprehensively and for a longer period than they are now, was given in the first article. They are economics and geography. There must be basic understandings and skills in the field of language. By that the commissioner means the channels by which we communicate and are communicated with—reading, writing, listening, speaking. Since radio broadcasts are heard daily by multiplied millions, critical listening should be a vital part of the basic educational program.

Since freedom of expression is an essential attribute of a democracy, citizens need to develop critical thinking in order to evaluate the powerful influence of communication and propaganda constantly brought to bear on them.

War Exposes Academic Weaknesses

During the war, certain major weaknesses in our educational system were bluntly exposed. Total rejections in the war for physical, psychiatric and educational reasons have been almost as numerous as the number of men who served in the army overseas. We may or may not need our young men to fight another war, but regardless of this, we need to improve school programs of health and physical education, including the early discovery of remediable defects to be corrected by family physicians and public health agencies. A nation that would be strong, must be strong physically.

Military authorities have also found a major weakness in the work of the schools in the failure to require older students to carry mathematics to the point of practical mastery.

The natural sciences gained a larger place in the field of education during the war, and they should continue to do so, according to Commissioner Studebaker. No adequate understanding of our civilization is possible without considerable knowledge of them. Moreover, many careers in trade, technical, professional and scientific pursuits, whether of industry, business or agriculture, are handicapped without a thorough scientific groundwork, laid in the elementary and secondary schools and for many, continued in the colleges and universities.

But one of the most basic segments of the core, in the opinion of Dr. Studebaker, should be made up of the social studies. It is upon this group that we have leaned most heavily in training for responsible citizenship — and this must continue. History and the other social studies are essential to the grounding of our citizens in the American tradition of political liberty, a knowledge of the structure of our republican form of government, and a firm attachment to the democratic faith, Doctor Studebaker says.

I said that it is the belief of important educators that a core of this type must become a "must" in the curricula of the nation, thereby casting overboard the traditional elective system whereby a student is given pretty much free choice in what he will study. This new approach is emphasized in one of the most widely quoted documents of recent publication, the Harvard study entitled, "General Education in a Free Society." This work has startled a number of people coming as it does from the institution that saw the elective system reach its most extreme form, for it recommends the abandonment of that system. In this document, the chief priest of the elective system points out the weaknesses of that long-cherished method.

Of course, it is one thing to set up curricula that will insure the fact that those attending school will get the basic studies. It is another to see that these required subjects are made available to all. Is it possible to produce and democratically distribute this basic core to all America?

Not yet. That is another must in the new reconversion. The expenditures now made on this priceless commodity are inadequate. But I am not dealing here with the finances of education. That is a subject in itself. Suffice it to say that even with greater funds this product, as blue-printed by the experts, cannot be produced in the existing plants any more than the peacetime models and types of industrial commodities can be produced by machines equipped for war production. Nor is the personnel and the training of that personnel adequate.

Sea Tragedies Recalled as Autumn Storms Uncover Rotting Wreckage of Ships on North Carolina Coast

British and Spanish Men of War, Clippers Among Grim Relics.

By BILL SHARP

The burned out hull of an old schooner, the Kohler of Baltimore, stands bleakly on a sand bar near Hatteras, N. C. It was uncovered by the fury of a hurricane. Drifting sands are piling over it again, and it will soon disappear from sight.

Once more Caribbean storms have lifted the curtain on hundreds of tragedies which were played out on the lonely beaches of the Outer Banks of North Carolina in the past three centuries—but as usual, it is a fleeting show. Sand swept away by tides of the September hurricane already is drifting back with mild southwest winds, and before long most of the exposed wrecks will be hidden again.

Silent tribute to the craftsmanship of the old-time shipwrights and the sturdiness of their materials is the preservation of the timbers and planking of these orphans of the storm against generations of grinding sand and pounding wave. When iron men went down to the sea in ships with hearts of oak, it was not the ships that failed in the face of the elements.

Some of the derelicts now on view all the way from Nag's Head to Ocracoke Inlet are familiar, and recall many an anecdote. But some are beyond the ken of the oldest coastguardsmen or their records.

The Carroll Deering.

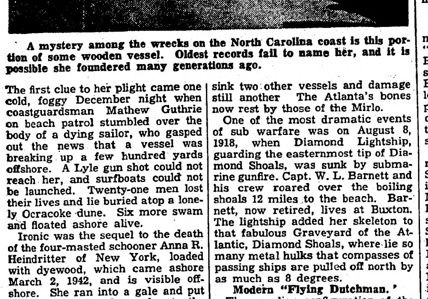
One of the most interesting is the ghost ship, Carroll Deering, out of Bath, Maine. She was found on Diamond Shoals in 1921, undamaged, with sails set, with uneaten food on the table and on the stove, but with only a cat to greet the coast guard crew which boarded her.

The Deering passed Diamond lightship the day before, but that was the last seen of any of her crew, and the cat kept her own counsel. Later she drifted onto Ocracoke Island, sanded up and was lost to sight and almost to memory until the hurricane scoured out her hull.

The George W Wells, first six-masted schooner ever built, and then the largest wood vessel afloat, is also exposed. She came ashore in a 1913 gale at Ocracoke.

Up at Nag's Head were uncovered again the tired ribs of the quaint warship believed by many to be a Crumpster of Elizabethan days. She was first revealed by a storm in 1939 and her primitive construction and fittings aroused much speculation. There is some justification for the romantic identification, for shipwrecks antedated colonization of these shores. The chroniclers of Sir Walter Raleigh's Roanoke Island colony (1587) found the aborigines using crude iron tools which were believed fashioned from spikes taken from a shipwreck. There is record of a Spanish shipwreck at Hatteras in 1558 and some of its crew were rescued by the Indians.

Also on exhibition again is the remnant of the Ariosto, British tramp, a victim of an 1899 storm.



A mystery among the wrecks on the North Carolina coast is this portion of some wooden vessel. Oldest records fail to name her, and it is possible she foundered many generations ago.

The first clue to her plight came one cold, foggy December night when coastguardsman Mathew Guthrie on beach patrol stumbled over the body of a dying sailor, who gasped out the news that a vessel was breaking up a few hundred yards offshore. A Lyle gun shot could not reach her, and surfboats could not be launched. Twenty-one men lost their lives and lie buried atop a lonely Ocracoke dune. Six more swam and floated ashore alive.

Ironic was the sequel to the death of the four-masted schooner Anna R. Heindritter of New York, loaded with dyewood, which came ashore March 2, 1942, and is visible offshore. She ran into a gale and put out anchors, but dragged onto the shoals. Capt. Bennett D. Coleman of Springfield, Mass., and his crew of eight survived, saved by the Lyle gun and breeches buoy, and after the captain had arranged for the "vendue" (auction sale of salvage) he started for home. While changing trains in New York he was run down by a taxicab and killed.

Worst Navy Wreck.

Off the beach at Nag's Head is visible in a calm sea the bell, tank, and boiler of the USS Huron, a warship wrecked November 24, 1877, with a loss of 108 lives—the worst disaster in U. S. naval history up to that time. The crew members were buried on the beach and relatives came, for many years after to search in the shifting sands for them. Cap'n Jeff Hayman of Roanoke Island is believed to be the only person still alive who saw the ghastly affair—and ghastly it was, for subsequent investigation disclosed that some of those aboard were drunk that fateful night when sobriety might have saved both ship and crew. Cap'n Jeff today has the silver sugar bowl from the Huron captain's table.

Such maritime violence has produced a lot of maritime heroism. From Oregon Inlet to Ocracoke Inlet are some 27 holders of Congressional Medals of Honor, possibly the largest group of heroes per capita in these United States. Six of them came as a sequel to the events of August 16, 1918, when the SS Mirlo, a British tanker, was torpedoed, and Capt. John Allen Midgett and five members of the Chicamicomoco coast guard station braved a sea of blazing oil to rescue 42 members of the crew. Strangely enough, the SS City of Atlanta in 1942 was destroyed in the same way and about the same spot, but the Chicamicomoco boys were unable to get through the fire. On the same day and within an hour, helpless watchers on the Banks saw a German submarine sink two other vessels and damage still another The Atlanta's bones now rest by those of the Mirlo.

One of the most dramatic events of sub warfare was on August 8, 1918, when Diamond Lightship, guarding the easternmost tip of Diamond Shoals, was sunk by submarine gunfire. Capt. W. L. Barnett and his crew roared over the boiling shoals 12 miles to the beach. Barnett, now retired, lives at Buxton. The lightship added her skeleton to that fabulous Graveyard of the Atlantic, Diamond Shoals, where lie so many metal hulks that compasses of passing ships are pulled off north by as much as 8 degrees.

Modern "Flying Dutchman."

The peculiar configuration of the North Carolina coast, with the sandy capes jutting out, causes mariners' anxious preoccupation with this area. Most dangerous are Diamond Shoals, an extension of Cape Hatteras, 12 miles into the Atlantic, an area of constantly shifting quick sands. It is a maxim of sailors that once on the Diamond Shoals, no vessel ever comes off.

The Maurice R. Thurlow proved an exception, however, when she ran aground in a 1927 storm. The coast guard removed her crew, but when a cutter came down to try to pull her off, no trace of the vessel could be found. Thirteen days later the schooner was sighted by the Dutch tanker, Sleidrect, in the North Atlantic. A general order was released to run down the modern Flying Dutchman, but though she was reported from time to time, the sea wanderer was never overtaken and no one knows what became of her.

In the shoals lies another famous ship—the pioneering Federal ironclad, Monitor. Following her engagement with the Confederate Merrimac in Hampton Roads, March 9, 1862, the damaged Monitor was sent south in tow of the sidewheeler Rhode Island. A gale sprang up, and the little "cheesebox" sank on the shoals with a loss of 16; 49 others were rescued by the Rhode Island.

Hatteras is a control point in setting courses for coastwise and West Indian shipping, because the shortest route lies near the Cape. Northbound shipping finds a favorable current by staying in the Gulf Stream, which brushes the tip of the Shoals, while southbound traffic goes between the Stream and the coast, where there is a southerly current sweeping down from the arctic. Thus, ships pass as close to the Cape as they can, and sudden storms there are a hazard

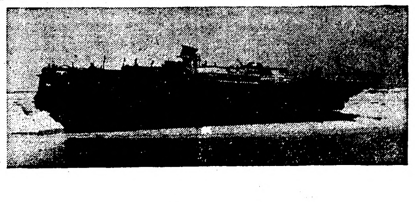
Alexander Hamilton recommended a lighthouse at Hatteras in 1794, and it was completed in 1798, but was too low to provide an adequate signal. In 1870 a new light, 190 feet high, was built (highest brick light in the world) and served until 1936 when the encroaching sea led the government to erect still another light further inland at Buxton.

Diamond Lightship also was anchored at the tip of the Shoals, and a navy radio direction station was set up at the Cape Inasmuch as the new steelgirder lighthouse is not visible to ocean ships by day, the cape now has four navigation aids for the mariner—the old spiral-striped brick tower as a day warning; Diamond Lightship, the new Buxton Light; and the modern radio finding station.

No 'Shipwreckers.'

While it is probably true that for many years shipwrecks were the "principal importation' of the Banks, there appears no evidence to support the charge that long ago the Bankers practiced shipwrecking and looting. However, some homes are partly fashioned from the timber of old ships, and many a house contains articles salvaged from doomed ships or bought at the 'vendue."

In this connection is recalled the most popular legend of the village of Straits, in Carteret county concerning a preacher for whom Starr Methodist church there is named. During the severe winter of 1813—so the story goes—the citizens of Straits were starving after a crop-killing drouth the previous summer. Frozen sounds prevented fishing, and the Napoleonic wars and a British blockade made commerce impossible. Parson Starr thus resorted to prayer: 'If it is predestined there be a wreck on the Atlantic coast," he pleaded, "please let it be Thy will that it happen here!" In a few days a flour-laden ship wrecked on Core Banks, and famine was prevented.



GHOST SHIP

This is all that is left of the Carroll A. Deering, out of Bath, Maine. A storm drove her upon Diamond Shoals January 29, 1921. When coastguardsmen boarded her they found her undamaged. The sails were set, food was on the table and on the stove, but no one was aboard. Only a disconsolate cat roamed the decks. No trace was ever found of any of her crew, although every effort was made. Since she could not be floated again, the coast guard blew her up.

Rail Quiz

How does the railway mileage of the United States compare with that of other countries?

When the war began, rail mileage of the United States was approximately 10 times that of Great Britain, 6 times that of Germany, 4½ times that of Russia, 5½ times that of India, 12 times that of Japan, 37 times that of China. The United States has more railway mileage than in all of South America, Asia, Africa and Australia combined.

It's What You Ordered

Victories over Germany and Japan have been accomplished—but that's not all of the story!

The U. S. Treasury Department must look to the American people before the end of 1945 for further financial support through generous participation in the Victory Loan Drive. Billions of dollars are needed for:

Army and Navy Costs—A substantial Army and Navy must be maintained until world order is restored. It means occupation forces, their equipment, supplies, pay—all adding up to a lot of money.

Care of the Wounded—We cannot pay our debt to them, but we can do our best. Thousands of American boys now need and will continue to require medical care; and, additional thousands whose permanent disabilities from battle are our responsibilities.

Bringing Our Boys Home—Millions of homes are waiting for millions of our service men and women who have been away too long. They must be returned, with every attention to their travel needs.

Mustering Out Pay—Returning service men must have a stake for the resumption of civilian life. The law provides up to $300 per man. If the reduction in armed forces goes as scheduled, this item alone will add up to something like 2 billion dollars in the next year.

Victory over America's enemies is what you—all of us—ordered. Let's finish the job by the largest possible individual participation in the Victory Loan!

Six Deer Hunters Lost Lives

Deaths of six men were blamed on Minnesota's annual deer season which went into its fifth day on Wednesday.

Three hunters perished in their cabin near Roosevelt early Monday when an oil stove exploded and set fire to their building.

AAA Committeemen Election

Machinery was set in motion this week to elect AAA farmer-committeemen in Marshall county's 39 farming communities, according to Charles N. Kranz, county A A A committee chairman.

The scheduled elections for Marshall County will be held on Monday, December 3, all except 2 townships. The time of day and place of meeting will be given to all farmers by letter in next week paper in the county.

Urging a full representative vote in each community, Mr. Kranz deplored "stay-at-home" tendencies among some farmers, and appealed for a full turnout for this year's elections. If less than 6 eligible voters are present the community election cannot be held.

Every farmer has a vital interest in future decisions on farm problems, whether local, state or national, the A A A chairman said.

About 3200 farmers are eligible to vote in Marshall County Every farmer who participates in either the agricultural conservation, or flaxseed payment, or the Federal crop insurance program may vote in the community elections.

Sunday dinner guests at the Hougaard home at Strandquist were: Mr. and Mrs. M. Sandberg Mrs. O. Backlund, Linda Gusa, Lloyd Larson, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Gusa.

Welcome Peace

New York always goes over the top with demonstrations. Magazine pictures and news reels have shown most of the world's civilized people what happens in Manhattan when the King of England calls on a good-will mission or when Tail-wind-in-face Douglas Corrigan comes home. But now I can boast that I saw Gotham's wildest riot of joy. Japan's surrender touched off the biggest of them all.

I was having what we Southerners call supper in the dining room of a mid-town hotel at 7 o'clock p. m. EWT, on August 14 when Washington released the official announcement. There was just one breath of unusual quiet before bedlam bore down. How long does it take a cab driver to reach his siren after his radio brings big news? That's how long the quiet lasted. People seemed to go wild.

Clamorous Jumble

Human voices could be distinguished at first along with the mechanical din, but presently very little was distinguishable except by sight. Bent on seeing, however, I quit the hotel and walked west with the traffic which I later learned was storming from all directions toward Times Square. I never got much closer than five blocks to the focal point. It was too dense for me at 47th street and Fifth avenue.

Women leaned out of skyscraper windows, shrieked and emptied wastepaper baskets. Down like a gray snow came shredded newsprint, yards of new wrapping paper, good stationery—and it didn't stop until Fifth avenue was literally carpeted. Air borne ribbons of ticker-tape crawled in and out among the towers like mysterious aerial serpents. Busses and cabs were jammed with people in hysterical celebration, hours on end.

At the Bright Lights

An officially estimated two million men and women made up a seething mass that centered at 42nd street and Broadway, and one idea seemed to dominate them completely: "War's over!" . . . The words were shouted repeatedly in every dialect with which I have any acquaintance, and undoubtedly many more. The emotion of the multitude said, "Now, everything's going to be all right."

But, now that the shouting is over, what are the facts? They are far from the thoughts of any tumult.—Firing has ceased. Factories that made war goods are closed down. Families are waiting for young men to come home. For the next 14 months military authorities will return the equivalent of one combat division, 15,000 men, to civil life every day.

Our Gravest Need

To live contentedly men must have good jobs and hope of advancement. Jobs for men call for investments, on the average, $6,000 per job. Not much has been done to encourage investment lately; much has been done to discourage it. War is over but war taxes and regulations remain. Wisely imposed to take the profit out of war they threaten now to take the prosperity out of peace.

American efficiency produced the goods that made victory possible. The war did not put our Republic to its supreme test; the peace will. America's trail to a prosperous postwar period has not been well blazed. With growing intensity we are needing something sorely and need it now in a hurry: The right taxes for the most jobs.

Elseth-Peterson Wedding

Miss Elma Elseth, daughter of Mrs. Bergetta Elseth of Newfolden, became the bride of Arnold Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Peterson of Thief River Falls at a pretty wedding ceremony solemnized at the Evangelical Free church at Newfolden on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 11. Rev. Thv. Myhrer united the couple in marriage in the presence of more than a hundred relatives. Attendants were Mrs. Ralph Fischer, sister of the bride and Hartley Peterson, brother of the groom.

Oak leaves and white and yellow chrysantemums decorated the church for the occasion.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Kenneth Lindberg, cousin of the groom, played a selection of nuptial music. She also played the wedding march.

The bride was dressed in an air force blue suit, with a corsage of red roses and white carnations. Her only jewelry was a bracelet, a gift of the groom. Her attendant wore a gray suit, with a corsage of red carnations and sweet peas. She also wore a bracelet, a gift of the bride.

The bride's mother wore a soldier blue dress and the groom's mother was attired in brown, with identical corsages of white pompoms and red carnations. A reception was held in the church basement following the ceremony.

The bride who is a graduate of Newfolden high school and of the Teachers Training Department in Thief River Falls, has recently been employed at the L. B. Hartz office at Thief River Falls. The groom is a graduate of Lincoln High School and has just recently been discharged from the Army.

The week end here has been rather quiet as all the boys who could get away have been out deer hunting. Most of them have bagged their deer. Never before has there been so many deer seen right around home as there has been this fall and especially the past week. The deer come here while the hunters go there.

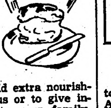
Follow Directions for Tender, Home-Baked Breads
(See Recipe Below)

Hot Breads



If you want to choose one item that will make a company meal out of a plain menu, then add fragrant home-made bread or rolls to it. Fresh-from-the-oven bread or rolls are meal tonics hard to beat.

If you want to add extra nourishment to your menus or to give inexpensive energy to your family, then the formula is bread—or rolls! They contain carbohydrates, some fat and milk and eggs.

Bread can be used lavishly in many interesting ways. A fruited coffee ring for breakfast can mean the difference between a well begun day or a dull, prodding one. And think of the difference between fresh, moist bread in sandwiches for lunch and dry, stale bread.

First of all, there's this scarlet-topped and crystal-glazed quick coffee cake to start the day right. Or, if you prefer, it will do nicely for dessert, thank you!

Cranberry Coffee Ring.
(12 Servings)

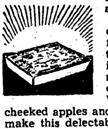
1⅓ cups sifted flour
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
½ cup milk
3 tablespoons melted shortening
Cranberry Orange Topping.

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt together. Beat egg and add milk and shortening. Stir in dry ingredients, mixing only enough to moisten them. Spread topping evenly over the bottom of a ring mold. Pour batter over topping. Bake in a moderately hot (425-degree) oven for 25 minutes.

Cranberry Orange Topping.

3 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
⅓ cup sugar
1½ cups whole, raw cranberries

Mix together in order given and use it as directed above.



Now that cheese is plentiful and unrationed, it's a good idea to use it for main dishes and desserts, too. With plump, red-cheeked apples and cheese, you can make this delectable dessert:

Cheese-Apple Cobblerettes.
(Serves 6-8)

2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½-1 cup nippy grated cheese
2-4 tablespoons shortening
⅔-¾ cup milk
1 cup chopped apples
2 tablespoons sugar

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut or rub in shortening. Add cheese and mix lightly. Add milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead ½ minute. Roll into a rectangular sheet about ¼ inch thick. Spread chopped apples which have been mixed with sugar over the biscuit dough. Roll jelly-roll fashion and slice in inch pieces.

An old favorite is oatmeal bread which is excellent served while warm, thinly spread with butter. Or, if you seek variety for the lunch box, you will like it for meat and cheese sandwiches. The following recipe takes molasses for sweetening.

Oatmeal Bread.
(Makes 1 loaf)

1 cup rolled oats
2 cups milk
½ cup molasses
2 teaspoons salt
4½ cups sifted flour
1 tablespoon melted shortening
1 yeast cake softened in ½ cup warm water

Pour hot milk over oatmeal and let stand until lukewarm. Add yeast, molasses, salt and shortening. Stir in flour and let rise. When light, pour into greased bread pans and let rise again. Bake in a hot (425-degree) oven for 15 minutes, reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees) and continue baking for 35 minutes.

Have you ever looked for a really good roll recipe? Here is one that is easily and quickly made. The trick is to have all the ingredients in the dough at room temperature (lukewarm).

Company Rolls.
(Makes about 2 dozen rolls)

1 cake yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
¾ cup milk, scalded and cooled to lukewarm
1 teaspoon salt
⅓ cup sugar
¼ cup melted shortening, cooled to lukewarm
2 eggs, well beaten
About 4 cups sifted flour

Pour the ¼ cup lukewarm water onto yeast, add 1 tablespoon of the sugar, stir and let stand about 5 minutes.

Dissolve salt and rest of the sugar in milk. When lukewarm, add yeast and blend with 2 cups flour. Beat very thoroughly. Next add eggs and shortening. Mix well and beat 3 minutes. Add remaining flour to make a smooth dough. Knead lightly on board for about 5 minutes. Use only enough flour to keep from sticking. Dough should be kept as soft as possible. Place in a lightly greased bowl. Grease top and let rise until doubled. Fold dough down and let rise again until doubled. Shape into rolls. Let rise in greased pans until doubled. Bake 10-12 minutes in a hot (425-degree) oven.

Shaping Rolls.

The latest in dough tricks is this: after the first rising, shape finger strips of dough 8-12 inches long and wrap around a clean clothespin. Proceed to let rise again until light and bake as rolls. After baking remove clothespin. Fill hot or cold with any desired sandwich filling. Or, proceed in the same manner but wrap finger strips of dough around a frankfurter, dainty or large, hearty size. These make fine snacks for either an evening or children's party.

LYNN SAYS

Bread Baking: For baking bread and rolls, the oven should be fairly hot. On gas, electric or oil ranges, the oven temperature should read from 380 to 400 degrees.

Pans (if more than one loaf is baked at a time) should not stand too close together, so that heat may circulate freely around them. After about 10 minutes of baking, the temperature should be reduced to about 350 degrees and maintained until the loaves are done. Medium-sized loaves require 45 to 50 minutes' baking time, while large loaves need an hour or longer.

If there is no oven thermometer handy, the temperature may be tested as follows: Spread ½ teaspoon flour on an inverted baking tin in a layer ¼ inch thick and place in the oven. At 400 degrees, the flour will become light brown in about 5 minutes. If it darkens more quickly than that, allow the oven to cool before placing bread in to bake.

Save your car your truck yourself

●Farm folks know you can't trust winter weather. You have to be prepared for blizzards at any time. Highways that are clear today may be dangerous skidways tomorrow with fresh fallen snow hiding treacherous patches of ice. That's why WEED TIRE CHAINS are found on millions of farm cars and trucks.

This would be a bad winter in which to lose the use of your car or truck through a skid crash, for new vehicles are still scarce. So are new tires and good recaps. Better look after your tire chains right away. For when your wheels spin in snow or on ice, the heat quickly damages your tires.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Twenty-five years ago passenger cars used only three to five pounds of rubber, not counting tires. Today the average car contains fifty pounds of rubber products.

More than half of all the estimated 100 million automobile wheels in America are now rolling on synthetic rubber.

Nanking University is experimenting with a new type of seed with a view to growing rubber in some of the arid regions of China.

New automobiles built this year will be delivered without spare tires.

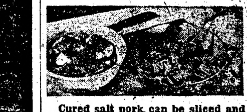
Freeze, Can or Cure Meat for Varied Farm Menus

Berniece Kaples, left, slices a round of partially thawed sausage for dinner. All seasonings except the salt were added before the meat was frozen. Berniece is a 4-H girl in Platte county, Nebr.

In preparation for storage in a freezer locker, this 1-meal piece of meat is wrapped in moisture-vapor-proof paper and inserted in an elastic stockinette, which will be tied shut at both ends.



Cured salt pork can be sliced and fried, then combined with slices of apple and cooked sweet potato.

ALTHOUGH fall is still the popular season for butchering, freezer-locker facilities make it possible almost any month, according to Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home Editor of Capper's Farmer.

"Farm homemakers like to use their home freezers and freezer lockers to hold beef, pork, lamb, veal or poultry at its fresh best until needed," she writes in the magazine read by 1,250,000 farm families. "However, the old standby methods of curing and canning meat continue to be used.

"Many farm families find that preserving by all three methods gives greatest variety to the menus.

"A plan often followed is to freeze tender cuts from rib and loin; can shoulders, shanks and other less tender cuts; cure sides and hams of pork and the inside round of beef.

"Young chickens are frequently frozen; hens may be canned. Poultry should be well fattened for slaughter before freezing."

The length of time meat can be frozen successfully depends on the temperature at which it is stored, she points out. It should be kept at 0° F. or lower. In general sausage and ground meat can be kept for 6 months; fresh pork, veal and fish from 3 to 6 months; beef and lamb 6 to 12 months; and poultry 8 months.

AAA Committeemen Election

Machinery was set in motion this week to elect AAA farmer-committeemen in Marshall county's 39 farming communities, according to Charles N. Kranz, county A A A committee chairman.

The scheduled elections for Marshall County will be held on Monday, December 3, all except 2 townships. The time of day and place of meeting will be given to all farmers by letter.

Urging a full representative vote in each community, Mr. Kranz deplored "stay-at-home" tendencies among some farmers, and appealed for a full turnout for this year's elections. If less than 6 eligible voters are present the community election cannot be held.

Every farmer has a vital interest in future decisions on farm problems, whether local, state or national, the A A A chairman said.

About 3200 farmers are eligible to vote in Marshall County Every farmer who participates in either the agricultural conservation, or flaxseed payment, or the Federal crop insurance program may vote in the community elections.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Wilson have disposed of their livestock here and have moved to Thief River Falls for the winter.

Reports coming in from those who hunted deer near Itasca State Park are that there were about two thousand deer taken out of the park this year. This was the first time the 32,000 acre refuge was ever opened for hunting. They estimated the deer herd there at about 10,000 deer so only 20 percent were taken.

LOOKING AHEAD

by GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Vinson

Shortly after Fred Vinson was named Secretary of the Treasury he was quoted in the press as saying "the American people are in the pleasant predicament of having to learn to live 50% better than they have ever lived before." When he made this remark he was talking about a future day, one that had not come then and has not come yet, but a completely possible future day.

Hitler was no longer a menace, when the new Secretary spoke of a 50% higher living standard in America, but Japan still clouded the Pacific. Now that has cleared up also and today's national problem is economic rather than strategic. The strain is no less, but in a different place. Ease felt in America as firing ceased was like the relief of changing hands with a heavy burden.

Load is on Vinson

About a month ago this column carried an outline of Mr. Vinson's tax policies which I frankly consider sound. Now, in view of the changed international picture, it is high time everybody knew more about this generalissimo of post-war finances, czar of economics in the world's most important country. He is a key man on the team that has to win if liberty, civilization and enlightenment survive.

Fred Vinson is 55 years old. Half a century ago he was playing in the yard of the jailhouse in Louisa, Ky. His father was county jailer. The next year he started to school. . . . His coarse hair is half gray now and he has some loose skin under his chin but he's recognized as the "best in his line" and on a job where everybody wishes him well, if that's success.

A Serious Student

Louisa, with some 2,000 inhabitants, is across the Big Sandy river from West Virginia. There young Vinson entered school, there was elected district attorney and from there went to Congress in 1922. At Center College, Danville, Ky., he worked in the library to help pay expenses, took a leading part in athletics and averaged above 95 in grades all through college and law school.

Mr. Vinson is a penetrating thinker. He has years of experience in government and he knows taxes. He is a recognized fiscal expert. That's what put him on the Ways & Means committee and here his ability is still respected. He has been a Federal judge, the successful economic stabilizer of this country, also director of war mobilization and reconversion—the job that's known as "assistant president."

To Make More Jobs

Vinson has many prime qualifications for his present job. Anent his thoroughness, it came out a time or two in connection with his work as chairman of the tax section of the Ways & Means committee that he knew more than his witnesses themselves about testimony they submitted. Recollection of these incidents naturally tends to keep alive Vinson's influence among congressmen which is a big asset.

It is told that he studied beforehand the financial statements of big corporations whose officials were to testify, and his questioning them proved repeatedly that he knew more about certain aspects of a corporation's business than did its president. This is the man who planned a tax program to create the most jobs, instead of merely raising revenue for the government, something I have been shouting from the housetops for four years.

Jarshaw-Holmstom Wedding

The Rindal Lutheran Church west of Holt on Sunday afternoon, November 11th was the scene of the marriage of T. Irene Jarshaw, daughter of Mrs. Tillie Jarshaw and Ray Holstrom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aug. Hoistrom. Rev. Silas Erickson performed the ceremony in the presence of a host of friends and relatives.

Four large palms and lighted candelabra decorated the alter.

The bride wore a white gown of net over satin and a finger tipped veil with a tiara of orange blossoms. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink rapture roses and white carnations. He only jewelry was a gold locket and a bracelet, gifts of the groom.

She was attended by Miss Dallas Holmstrom, sister of the groom. The bridesmaid wore a blue chiffon dress and carried a colonial bouquet of yellow chrysantemums.

Sammy Jarshaw, brother of the bride was best man.

Ater the ceremony a reception was given in the church basement.

Ray was recently discharged from the army, where he spent the last two and a half years.

To the People of this Community

Extra Victory Bonds are on sale. Bankers will say that they are the best investment ever offered you. The GIs in conquered Tokyo and Berlin will say that today is a new moment for you to show that you are keeping faith. The economist will say the Victory Loan is the opening of the home front's greatest anti-inflation offensive. Ted R. Gamble, National Director of the War Finance Division, declares that millions of volunteers are in action with inexhaustible supplies of an incomparable product to sell fellow Americans.

The Victory Loan is all of these things. It represents your will to help the government pay off war costs, care for the wounded, maintain our troops abroad, finance the return to civilian life of millions of fighting men.

From every angle, you will be serving your own best interest by seeking out the nearest Victory Bond salesman. You can't buy too many or too often for your own good.

Frenchman's Procedure Really Quite Simple

Waiting for supplies to catch up with them, one of General Patton's armored units had rested a few days in a small French village. The citizens told the Americans that the most interesting thing in the town was a man one hundred years old with not an enemy in the world. An American officer thought this an unusual and beautiful thing.

"It is nothing of the sort," the interpreter contradicted him.

"But a man that old with no enemies, surely that is a feat," insisted the American.

"It is no feat," the Frenchman insisted. "He merely outlived all of them."

Some Things Are Not What They Seem to Be

Cork legs are not made of cork. They are made of wood, metal, leather, or strong canvas; they were invented by Dr. Cork. Hackney coaches are not so called because they were first made in Hackney, London. The word comes from the French "Haquenee," meaning an ambling horse.

A laughing jackass is not an animal; it is a bird. Cinderella did not wear a glass slipper. She wore a fur slipper, but the original French words were "Pantoufle en vair," and the sound was mistaken for "Pantoufle en verre"; thus "fur" was changed to "glass."

PEARL HARBOR:
Code Secrets

As the Pearl Harbor investigation got underway at Washington, D. C., before a joint 10-man congressional committee, intercepted messages placed in the records disclosed that U. S. intelligence officers had cracked the secret Japanese code a year before the start of the war.

While the early intercepted messages dealt with ship movements, chief interest centered in the diplomatic documents dating from July 2, 1941, when Tokyo told Berlin that Japan would work for its "greater East Asia co-prosperity sphere" regardless of the world situation.

On November 22, Tokyo advised Nomura and Kurusu, Jap envoys negotiating in Washington with Secretary of State Hull, that it had been decided to set November 29 as the final date for effecting an agreement, after which things would "automatically . . . happen" in case of failure. Then on November 26, Nomura told Tokyo of Hull's ultimatum and the improbability of reaching a settlement.

On November 30, Tokyo informed Berlin of the imminence of war with the U. S. and later relayed the same message to Rome. Meanwhile, Tokyo warned its consulates on December 3 to be on guard for the "winds" messages in short wave radio broadcasts indicating rupture of relations with the Allies. The "east wind, rain" message (meaning war with the U. S.) then came through on December 5.

Among the last messages decoded were Tokyo's reply to Hull's ultimatum on December 6, with final instructions for presentation to the U. S. at 1 p. m. the following day coming in on the morning of December 7. Dated December 7, a Jap message from Budapest, Hungary, to Tokyo stated that the American minister to that country had presented its government with a communique from the British that a state of war would break out on the seventh.

BIG TALK:
Reassures U. S.

In the nation's capital to discuss disposition of the horrific atom bomb and touchy international questions, British Prime Minister Attlee also found time to address congress and outline the democratic objectives of his labor party just as negotiations for a multi-billion dollar loan from the U. S. were materializing.

Aimed at helping Britain get its export-import trade functioning again and lighten the load of six billion dollars of debts to wartime creditors, the projected multi-billion dollar advance was attacked in some circles as an aid to the labor party in socializing the United Kingdom. In addressing congress, Attlee declared that British businesses were only to be nationalized when they had grown into monopolies detrimental to the economy.

No radical in speech or appearance, the short, mild-mannered, mustached British leader described the labor party as a representative cross-section of liberal English society, with professional and business men, and even aristocrats, joining with the working classes in its membership.

In determining to retain the secret of the know-how of harnessing the atom, President Truman and Attlee declared that until effective safeguards were set up against its destructive use, no advantage would come from sharing its use. To work out such safeguards permitting exchange of vital information on atomic energy for industrial purposes, the Big Two recommended the creation of a United Nations commission.

As revealed by Foreign Minister Bevin in the house of commons recently, Britain has expressed deep concern over Russian demands for trusteeship of Eritrea and Tripolitania in the Near East, and establishment of a naval base in the Dodecanese islands, inasmuch as these territories lie athwart the famed "life-line" of the empire through the Mediterranean and Suez canal.

Coincident with Attlee's visit to Washington was the U. S. and British announcement that a joint commission of the two countries would undertake a study of the ticklish Jewish immigration question with a view toward easing the plight of European refugees.

Pressing importance of the issue was emphasized by continued Arab and Jewish riots in the Near East, with scores killed and wounded in widespread demonstrations over the question of making Palestine a national homeland for the Hebrews.

Because they have been banded into a league 33 million strong spread over the entire Near East, with control over rich oil deposits cherished by U. S. and British concerns, the Arabs have greatly complicated settlement of the Palestine issue in view of their stubborn opposition to large-scale Jewish immigration.

Taking the Arab objections into consideration, the joint U. S. and British commission will look into the question of whether heavy immigration would upset the Arabs' political and economic position in Palestine. Consideration also was to be given to providing remedial action in Europe itself and allowing immigration to other countries.

JAPAN:
Seek Trade

As the question of reconstituting the Japanese economy arose, Nipponese officials drew a pattern for the nation's future trade relations with the world by recommending a barter system to facilitate immediate imports of needed foodstuffs and raw materials. Under terms of surrender, Japan will not be permitted to produce some of the items formerly exported.

Under the Japanese proposal for the resumption of trade, Nippon would receive substantial amounts of food, salt, cotton, copra, coal, iron ore and non-ferrous metals, in exchange for gold, diamonds, silk, cotton goods, chemical products, medical supplies, machinery, hardware, and tin.

The problem of recreating the Japanese economy was pointed up by revelation that the country had been the sixth biggest prewar exporter, shipping out almost a billion dollars worth of goods each year. Of the total amount, China obtained the largest part, with the U. S. and India following.

Of the total amount, China obtained 27.2 per cent; the U. S., 18.2 per cent; India, 6.2 per cent; Great Britain, 3.7 per cent; Latin America, 3 per cent; Australia, 2 per cent, and Germany 0.7 per cent. Other European and Asiatic countries took 2.1 and 3.1 per cent of the remainder of exports respectively.

Predict Another Full Larder for U. S.

Total food available for civilians in 1946 will be considerably greater than in 1945 with average food consumption per capita expected to be larger than in 1945, the department of agriculture reported. All foods, however, will not be equally plentiful, with pork, the better grades of beef and veal, fats, oils and sugar in shorter supply.

Most of the expected improvement in civilian food supplies next year stems from the sharp cutback in military food requirements, which will drop to one-third or even one-quarter of the 1945 level. Exports and shipments of food in 1946 will continue large, assuming that satisfactory financial arrangements are completed. The greater part of these exports will move in the early months of the year, mainly to the United Kingdom and the liberated areas of Europe.

Ravenous Birds

Some birds require such tremendous quantities of food that they evidently have to devote all their time, between dawn and dusk, to the task of finding it. As illustrations, the cuckoo eats daily about 225 worms and caterpillars, the flicker 3,000 ants, and the chickadee 5,500 cankerworm eggs.

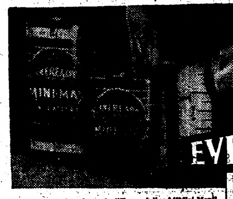
Transmitter, receiver, and detonating mechanism all draw power from a tiny "Eveready" "Mini-Max" battery: a "powerhouse" rugged enough to withstand the shock of the gun's discharge: a force 20,000 times that of gravity!



TYPICAL of "Eveready" "Mini-Max" power in peacetime are these two tiny, powerful batteries! On the extreme left is a 22½-volt battery for "cigarette case" radios small enough to wear! At its right is a 15-volt hearing-aid battery—for lighter, smaller, more economical hearing aids.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

A new rubber cement called "Plastilock" for binding metals, woods, plastics, has been developed by B. F. Goodrich.

Latex foam made of synthetic rubber can now be used in the manufacture of mattresses and other cushioning materials.

The goal of the rubber industry a few decades ago was a tire that would run 3,500 miles. Now it's not unusual for a passenger tire to run ten times that far.

Some of the first synthetic tires built in early war days lasted only fifty miles. Mileage of present synthetic tires compares favorably with natural rubber tires.

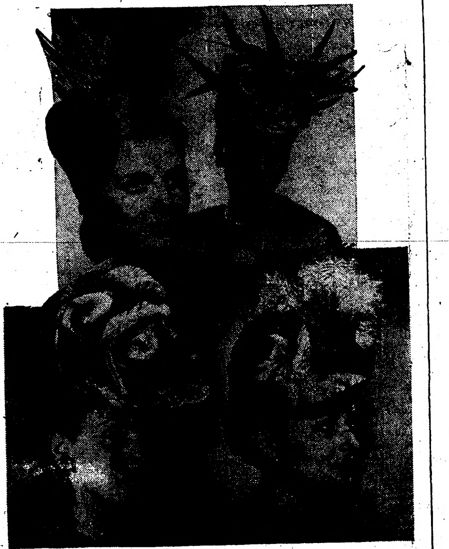
Feather-Trimmed Hats Bringing Drama to the Winter Style Picture

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



FEATHER-TRIMMED hats are making one grand splurge in the fashion world this winter. And what a stir these feathered beauties are causing! They are so lovely and so colorful they top off the winter costume with a witchery all their own.

The current collections include types suited to every occasion, from conservative turbans, toques, tiny sailors and chic berets to fabulous hats for gala events. Outstanding in the displays are gay little flatterers that look like a pouf or a pompon of ostrich fronds. These are worn tilted over the face. They are very lovely in pure white.

It's important news that quantities of wings are being used this year in white, also in lovely pastels and vivid colors. The tall wings, soaring high at the front of the modish hat shown above to the left are in soft rose pink. The high crown of smooth pink feathers is circled with black felt that parts at the center to reveal the handsome wings.

Birds are in the news, too. That pretty chapeau pictured to the right above is done in turquoise velvet trimmed with a flock of wee birds in matching blue. The arrangement of the birds is unique. They look more like tiny wings until you discover the little heads nestled close to the hat. To be sure, they are simulated birds, but they come pretty close to nature's own.

The forward-tilted breton of gray felt below to the left shows a clever use of gray ostrich feathers. The high crown and soaring feathers accent the new taller silhouette.

The toque below to the right gives emphasis to the "new look" being designed, so it would seem, for a sophisticated lady. It is elaborately draped in a high bulky contour. The velvet that makes it is in the very modish electric blue now featured in dresses and coats as well as in millinery. White feather wings and marabou make a striking contrast.

One of the highlights of this season is the colorfulness of hats designed for dinner wear and other dress-up affairs. For "above table" glamour milliners are creating bright little confections such as a peaked little strawberry pink felt with soft ostrich plumes in tearose shaded pink that curl around the crown. Very new is this trend of pastel felts trimmed with feather novelties.

The all-feather hat is as style-important as the feather-trimmed felts. There is wide versatility expressed in these feather charmers that look so enchanting with winter furs. There's flattery galore in the little calots covered with flat feathers with a sweep of brilliant tail feathers falling down over one side to the shoulder. The tail-feather trim that falls over the hair is most picturesque, and it is getting wide response. Those in vivid yellows and greens and scarlet compete with exquisite types formed of long sleek glycerined ostrich in white or in pastel colors. Other feather fashions include fetching little numbers such as the crimson feather-covered little sailor that has as its sole trimming a gorgeous huge rose made of feathers with stems and leaves done in green feathers.

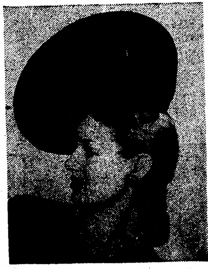
Dramatic New Breton



This stunning bowler breton is a black felt with velvet accent. As you see in the picture, its profile silhouette is most dramatic and very attractive. A velvet-topped crown nestles inside the huge bowl brim which is edged with a wide velvet band and a soft velvet bow that accents the upward movement.

Pastel Satin Hats Are Enchanting and Chic

Just about as gala looking and as prettily feminine as any hat could be are the enchanting little forward-tilted hats made of satin in lovely pastel shades. They are just what you will be wanting for cocktails, dinner and theater wear. Their simplicity is their charm, styled as they are with a big pouf of satin encircling a flat little crown. You can get them in such exciting shades as pistachio, dusty rose, ice blue, cerise and gleaming black.

High Necklines Call For Chic Necklaces

Lots of jewelry will be worn this winter. Not just helter-skelter pieces but selective items designed especially to complement and unify the costume. The new high-throated necklines are causing a rush to jewelry counters for smart chokers or necklaces, either pendant style or formed of multi strands, some of the more elaborate in deep bib-like effect. Tremendous interest is shown in earrings, and the newest stunt is to match them to something or other about your costume, maybe your necklace, your scarf, your jeweled belt or possibly the color in your hat. In order to match you'll be needing a collection of earrings to tune to occasion. Bracelets! Count 'em! It's the latest to wear several posed one above the other, almost to the elbow. If the bracelet be massive and wide, as many of the newest styles are, then just a single bracelet looks best.

Rich, Radiant Browns Are Gaining in Popularity

Even if you have never especially admired brown, you'll simply love it this year. Never have brown tones shown up more beautifully in the fashion color scheme than now. No wonder the rage for rich radiant browns is spreading throughout the fashion world today. It's the color ideal whether it be in the chocolate shade or in the reddish autumn-leaf tone or the coffee or toast shades to choose for your fall-winter costume. Highlight the suit or wool dress with a stunning mink hat and throw about your shoulders a voguish mink stole which is the scarf-wrap de luxe for this winter. If in doubt choose brown! It's the latest for your dress, suit, coat and accessories.

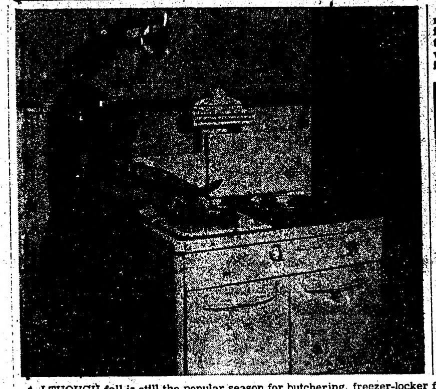
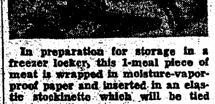
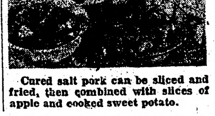
Freeze, Can or Cure Meat for Varied Farm Menus



Bernieсe Kaples, left, slices a round of partially thawed sausage for dinner. All seasonings except the salt were added before the meat was frozen. Bernieсe is a 4-H girl in Platte county, Nebr.



In preparation for storage in a freezer locker, this 1-meal piece of meat is wrapped in moisture-vapor-proof paper and inserted in an elastic stockinette which will be tied shut at both ends.



Cured salt pork can be sliced and fried, then combined with slices of apple and cooked sweet potato.

ALTHOUGH fall is still the popular season for butchering, freezer-locker facilities make it possible almost any month, according to Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home Editor of Capper's Farmer.

"Farm homemakers like to use their home freezers and freezer lockers to hold beef, pork, lamb, veal or poultry at its fresh best until needed," she writes in the magazine read by 1,250,000 farm families. "However, the old standby methods of curing and canning meat continue to be used.

"Many farm families find that preserving by all three methods gives greatest variety to the menus.

"A plan often followed is to freeze tender cuts from rib and loin; can shoulders, shanks and other less tender cuts; cure sides and hams of pork and the inside round of beef.

"Young chickens are frequently frozen; hens may be canned. Poultry should be well fattened for slaughter before freezing."

The length of time meat can be frozen successfully depends on the temperature at which it is stored, she points out. It should be kept at 0° F. or lower. In general sausage and ground meat can be kept for 6 months; fresh pork, veal and fish from 3 to 6 months; beef and lamb 6 to 12 months; and poultry 8 months.

Many Elected To Office Tues.

The Village election was held on Tuesday and only 26 voters went to the polls to vote. This lack of interest was probably due to the fact that no one had filed for the offices to be filled and the ballot was blank for names.

The results were that Walter Peterson got the most votes for Mayor with Sam Lorentson next high man. Hartley Peterson got the most votesof all—getting 13 votes for Councilman.

Geo. Fricker and G. Sanoden tied for Village Treasurer. Mr. Fricker is already in office being Village Clerk. The other offices were for Constable and Justice of the Peace with voting being all mixed.

Two Farm Deals Made Here

Two farm deals have been transacted in this community recently. They are the purchase of the farm from Albert Swenson by his brother, Lewis Swenson. Mr. and Mrs. Swenson moved onto the place in Ringbo a couple of week ago.

The other deal is the purchase of the farm from Ole Maakstad north of Holt by Henry Fosholm. Mr. Maakstad will continue living on his place until spring when Mr. Fosholm will take over This is a nice farm just a mile north of the village on the State Highway.

Mrs. C. O. Saastad is very ill at her home at Thief River Falls.

LOOKING AHEAD

President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Gifts of God

Draw on your imagination for a moment and consider with me an altogether improbable circumstance. Suppose a well-groomed gentleman with an easy flow of language should mount an improvised platform in the public square of an agricultural county-seat town next Saturday afternoon, play a phonograph record through a loud speaker to get an audience, and then should say:

"Ladies and Gentlemen—there is just so much water in the entire universe; so much and no more. Any time you drink more of it than you need to quench your thirst, you are greedy because some unfortunate person somewhere on earth wants water. He is thirsty. His throat is dry and his lips are parching. And it is all for want of the water which you so wantonly swallow."

It Is Not True

Such a speaker would soon lose his audience. People would walk away and leave him. Some of them might think about having his head examined because they know his ideas are out of joint. There is no connection whatever between one man's abundance of water and some far-away stranger's thirst. The need of the sufferer, even if he were a victim of cruelty, is apart from the owner of a good well.

But the speaker might hold his audience if he said something like this: "Ladies and Gentlemen—there is just so much wealth in the world; so much and no more. Anybody with more than he needs for food, clothes and shelter is greedy because there are many people in China and India who never had a square meal in their lives. They are poor because a few people get very rich."

Another Fallacy

This speech is no nearer true than the one about the water. Both have some facts in them but they are not related facts. I am not trying to say that wealth is free and cheap like water, but I am saying this: My neighbor's fine home and big car have cost me nothing. He has more than I have because he (or his father maybe) has more wealth-creating ability than I have.

There is such a thing as oppression of the poor. There is such a thing as exploiting labor. It is a crime which Jesus decried openly. It is also a short-sighted vice because it leads toward poverty and not toward wealth. "Good money in circulation" is a manifestation of prosperity and it occurs only in lands where workers are well paid and thus permitted to maintain good homes and live in comfort.

America's Blessing

Workers are paid well in America, twice as well as in England and six times as well as in Russia, and America is a rich country. Families live on $1 a month per person in China—China is a poor country. Is China poor because America is rich? No! Without the United States as a customer, and supplier, the Orient would be poorer still. The difference is that we have liberty, and they have oppression.

We Americans receive countless benefits from God's hand that people in other countries never heard about. Is God partial to America? Certainly not! Our benefits come through a channel that the rulers of other countries have blindly and selfishly closed by exploiting labor. Our God-fearing ancestors opened it for us long ago. The channel is personal freedom, protected by representative, constitutional government.

Jonh Simonson Laid To Rest

Funeral services were conducted here on Wednesday afternoon from the Nazareth Lutheran Church for John Simonson, retired Excel pioneer farmer.

Rev. E. O. Urness officiated.

John Simonson was born at Fron in Gulbransdalen, Norway February 9, 1864. He came to America at the age of 15 and settled at Parkers Prairie, Minn. He was married to Olina Megrund May 16, 1894. They came to up Excel township and homesteaded the same year and lived on their place two miles south of Holt until the early spring of 1943 when they sold out their stock and farm and moved into Holt. They resided here until in spring of 1945 when Mrs. Simonson passed away on February 11.

Then Mr. Simonson moved to Thief River Falls and made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Gust Erickson, where he passed away on Saturday, December 1.

He is suvived by a nephew, Alfin Simonson, whom the reared from boyhood, a brother Pete of Banks, North Dakota, a sister Sena, also of Banks and a sister Carrie of Minneapolis and a nephew, Olaf Simonson of Steiner. Two brothers preceded him in death.

At the time of his passing he was 81 years, 9 months and 21 days old.

He was one of the sturdy stock of early pioneers of this community and had a host of friends who will mourn his passing. He was always cheerful and ready to lend a helping hand.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Simonson were staunch believers in the Lutheran Faith and were charter members of the Nazareth Lutheran churh in Holt.

Pallbearers were J. P. Augustine, C. O. Larson, Wm. Holst, L. M. Larson, Wm. Mehrkens and F. D. Voth.

Interment was made in Holt Cemetery in the family plot beside his wife.

Mrs. Geo. Leslie of Gatzke, mother of Mrs. Walter Peterson, passed away at a hospital at Thief River Falls on Sunday morning.

THERE ARE PLENTY OF REASONS . . . AND HERE THEY ARE!"

2. "By reenlisting for 3 years I can pick my own branch of service in the Air, Ground or Service Forces, and can go to any overseas theater I wish.
3. "I get my mustering-out pay, even though I'm reenlisting. Also, I get $50 a year reenlistment bonus for each year I've been in the Army. My dependents receive family allowances for the full term of my enlistment. And I'll be eligible for GI Bill of Rights benefits when I get out of the Army.
4. "My food, clothes, quarters, medical and dental care are all supplied to me. And I can learn any of 200 skills or trades in the Army schools.
5. "All of us who are reenlisting are going to have from 30 to 90 days' furlough at home with full pay and our travel paid both ways. And we'll have 30 days' furlough every year with pay.
6. "Any time after 20 years I can retire at half pay increasing year by year to three-quarters retirement pay after 30 years of service. And the time I've already served in active military or naval service counts toward my retirement time. Added up—reenlistment seems pretty sound to me!"

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Special sponge rubber tablecloths, developed by B. F. Goodrich, attached to tables in factory assembly lines enable assemblers to pick up small metal parts without fumbling.

Officials predict that tire production may jump to nearly 4,000,000 passenger car tires a month during the last quarter of 1945.

Spare tires should never remain idle until other tires are worn out. Rubber needs to be "exercised" to keep it in best condition.

The new B. F. Goodrich all-synthetic Silvertown passenger car tire actually outwears prewar natural rubber tires.

Bake Cookies Now To Have Them Ready For Holiday Time

Bake holiday cookies before Christmas and store them in wax paper lined tins to keep them fresh and moist. A raw, unpeeled apple will prevent them from drying out.

Sugar-Shy Cookies

Good cookies are always in season, but particularly so at Christmas time. This year, of course, we are still working under difficulties because sugar is not easy to obtain. But that needn't put a crimp in the Yuletide cookie jar.

Corn syrups, honey and unrationed chocolate are all on hand to help with the Christmas baking. You will find the recipes for these substitutes so good that they're here to stay even when we have plenty of sugar.

Cookies made for Christmas are usually prepared ahead of time to save work as the big celebration approaches. It's a smart idea to take precautions with them to keep them fresh and moist. First of all, use nuts and dried fruits whenever possible as these ingredients add moisture. Second, pack them in waxed paper lined tins with a raw apple. Then they won't dry out.

Incidentally, when using honey or corn syrup in cookies, grease the baking pans thoroughly to prevent sticking. Melted fat brushed on the tins usually solves the problem neatly.

Here are two types of cookies, neither of which requires any sugar at all. One uses corn syrup for sweetening and the other, honey:

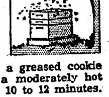
Fudge Nut Squares.
(Makes 16 2-inch squares)

- 1 cup chocolate pieces
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- 2 eggs, beaten
- ½ cup corn syrup
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup cake flour, sifted
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup nuts, chopped

Melt chocolate and shortening over hot water. Beat eggs thoroughly, add corn syrup and vanilla and beat until light and fluffy. Stir in melted chocolate and shortening, which have been slightly cooled. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add to chocolate mixture. Stir in nuts. Pour into a greased, 8-inch square pan. Bake in a moderately hot (375-degree) oven for 25 to 30 minutes.

Honey Drops.
(Makes 4 dozen cookies)

- ½ cup shortening
- ½ cup honey
- 1 egg, unbeaten
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- 1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup nuts, chopped
- 1 cup chocolate pieces



Cream shortening and honey together. Add unbeaten egg and vanilla and beat until light and fluffy. Mix and sift flour, soda and salt. Add to the first mixture. Stir in nuts and chocolate pieces. Drop from teaspoon on a greased cookie sheet. Bake in a moderately hot (375-degree) oven 10 to 12 minutes.

Using only a small amount of sweetening, cookies in the following two recipes take on extra sweetness because of the molasses that is used in them. Both contain dried fruits to make them moist:

Prune Cookies.
(Makes 5 dozen cookies)

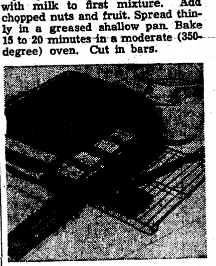
- ½ cup shortening
- ½ cup sugar
- ¼ cup molasses
- 2 eggs
- 1¼ cups sifted flour
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 cup cooked prunes, pitted and cut in small pieces
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream shortening and sugar, add molasses and eggs, one at a time. Sift flour with baking soda, salt and cinnamon. Add to creamed mixture. Beat thoroughly. Add prunes and vanilla. Mix well. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a greased baking sheet. Bake in a pre-heated (375-degree) oven for 12 minutes.

Molasses Raisin-Nut Bars.

- ¼ cup shortening
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- ½ cup molasses
- 2 cups sifted flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon soda
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ cup sweet milk
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 1 cup chopped raisins or dates

Cream shortening, add sugar and beat until light. Add egg, beat well, then add molasses. Sift flour with dry ingredients and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Add chopped nuts and fruit. Spread thinly in a greased shallow pan. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven. Cut in bars.



Everyday brownies will take on a festive touch if they are simply iced with powdered sugar frosting. The cookies should be well cooled before they are spread with icing.

Busy cooks know that bar shaped cookies save preparation time. These molasses flavored fruit bars are just the thing for holiday time.

Molasses Fruit Bars.
(Makes about 3 dozen bars)

- ½ cup sugar
- ¼ cup shortening
- 1 egg
- ½ cup molasses
- 1½ cups sifted flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon soda
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- 1½ cups whole wheat flakes
- ½ cup milk
- 1 cup chopped seedless raisins

Beat together sugar and shortening. Add egg and blend well. Sift flour with salt, soda and baking powder. Crush whole wheat flakes into fine crumbs and mix with flour. Add to egg mixture alternately with milk. Fold in raisins. Spread batter ½ inch thick in a greased baking pan. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

Pear Schooner Dessert.
(Serves 6)

- 6 pear halves
- 6 cupcakes
- Raspberry preserves
- Whipped cream

Cut each pear half in half. Split cupcakes and lay a piece of pear on each half in dessert dish. Pour a spoonful raspberry preserves in center of pears and top with a spoonful of whipped cream just before serving.

Taste Tips: When all the meat has been sliced off the roast, whittle off the pieces from the bones, grind them and mix them with mayonnaise or salad dressing for sandwiches.

The bone from a roast may be simmered with onion, celery, carrots, bay leaf and parsley. This stock is excellent for casseroles, sauces, or as a gravy base.

To prevent the broiler from becoming dry, fit it with a wire rack, and then the fat will drip into the pan. It is easy to pour off, and the broiler pan is easily washed.

When serving veal, complement the flavor with sausage, spiced fruits or pickles.

Never press meat loaf or hamburgers into tight loaves or patties. When loosely shaped, the meat will be more tender.

Frankfurters will have extra appeal if wrapped in biscuit dough, baked and served with mustard white sauce.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Some 6,000 men and women veterans of World War II were sworn into the Legion while spectators held their breath as the candidates repeated the pledge. The Legion plans to recruit five to six million veterans of the last war to add to their ranks.

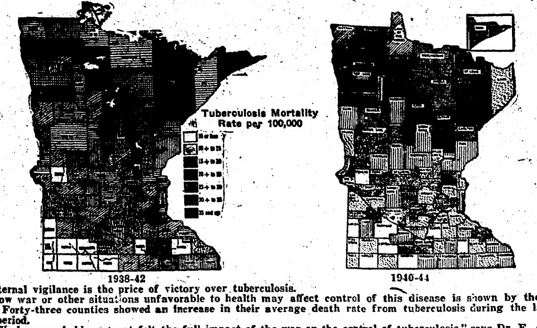
TB INCREASES IN 43 COUNTIES



Eternal vigilance is the price of victory over tuberculosis.

How war or other situations unfavorable to health may affect control of this disease is shown by the above maps. Forty-three counties showed an increase in their average death rate from tuberculosis during the last five year period.

"We have probably not yet felt the full impact of the war on the control of tuberculosis," says Dr. E. A. Meyerding, executive secretary of the Minnesota Public Health Association. "Service men and women are returning home from sections where tuberculosis is rampant; some of the men are bringing wives from countries where the disease is very prevalent."

Snow Storm Hit here Saturday

The weather broke on Friday night from a nice mild belated Indian summer to a heavy snow with next to blizzard winds and cold. The temperature dropped hard and it has been cold since the snow came. Tuesday morning it was 30 below zero and it has been low all week. The main storm did not hit until Saturday when it piled snow on the State Highway so that the buses could not come thru from south and many cars were stalled in drifts. Several accidents have been reported due to the poor visibility on Saturday.

A crew of men hauled away the excess snow from the streets here Monday.

British Coal

England is a coal country; 70% of the island's export tonnage is coal and it goes all over the world. England's 706,000 miners produce 200 million tons of coal a year. These are big figures until you compare England and America. We have only 393,000 miners in the United States but they produce 586 million tons of coal a year; more than five times as much per man as in England.

Coal miners in England draw $25 a week. American coal miners get $52 a week and they earn it. Don't let anybody tell you that American workers are super-men who hit harder and work more hours a day, because it's not true. Don't let anybody tell you that coal veins in the western hemisphere are richer and better and easier to work, because that's not true either.

Modern Machinery

In America miners use power cutters. Automatic loaders put the coal in cars and electric locomotives pull them away. In England men dig coal out with picks and pitch it in cars with shovels. The power that pulls the car to daylight is a scrub mule with a rag over his eyes. That's how they used to mine coal in America when grandpa was a boy.

Getting a ton of English coal to the top of the ground costs $4.20 for labor alone; $1.40 in America. The manpower shortage, incidental to war, ran the price of British coal to $6.50 a ton—twice its pre-war price. American coal advanced only 60c a ton. Hand work is what commands the premium when men are scarce. This economic fact has worked a hardship on the English.

Food and Clothing

England does not raise enough food for her people, nor enough fibre to clothe them. Such necessities are imported by the shipload. In a practical sense, they are bought with coal. Plain to see, with coal costs doubled, things to eat and wear became very dear in England. People blamed the war, of course, but the real trouble was lack of modern coal mining machinery.

With a nation so dependent on coal, why didn't the mine owners equip their properties with modern machinery, get out more coal per man and pay better wages? Answer: Government interference! Tax laws discouraged replacing old machinery. Regulations placed a penalty on efficient methods. The results were three: High prices, low wages, and a ruined export trade.

Might Have Been

Workers in British mines blamed the mine owners. The squeeze that pinched their wages to half the American scale was a political vice. Government regulations and taxes retarded production and choked prosperity. This was so craftily hid from the workers that they shouted loud for nationalization — government ownership. It will come now, with Churchill out and Attlee in.

With most admirable fortitude the English came through fiendish abuse to victory. Peace might have brought England prosperity; ability to pay her 12 billion dollars of war debts. With business men free to compete and produce, earn profits and raise wages, it might have been. But socializing all industry will start a long detour off the road to a better England.

The Dignity Of Man

Human rights have always been sacred. There was a time when life was woefully cheap, when property rights were all that mattered.

In those Dark Ages men lived and died with far less knowledge of what the rest of the world was like than a seven year old child today. Few could read. Bibles were chained to pulpits for exclusive use of the clergy And man was chained too--chained to the twin pillars of poverty and ignorance.

Man has come a long way since then. His children are entitled to a decent education. It is his privilege to share in the responsibilities of government. The Bible is to be found in almost every home.

Yet it is through no accident that man has achieved his present dignity. Man's freedom is closely bound to the greater availability of a common commodity—paper.

With the coming of paper came man's thirst for knowlege. The schools sprang up. The Bible was printed. Newspapers and books followed. Every great invention has its roots in the wisdom preserved on paper. Our people are linked into a single unit in everything from education to commerce by paper, paperboard and other pulpwood products.

Mankind has won the battle against poverty, ignorance and disease is scarcely begun. To win it man must fight with textbooks through the medium of the press, with the filter and blue print papers of the laboratory, with sanitary packaging. In fact, man must fight it with all the millions of uses to which paper has been adapted in its battles for human progress.

Mankind is not licked. Mankind will win this battle too. And that is one reason why it is important that mills get all the spruce and balsam they need now. It is why the joint recruitment campaign for new woods and mill jobs, new being conducted by the pulp and paper industry and the U. S. Employment Service must receive our wholehearted support.

Until the Last Man is Home

Count right now on Great Northern Railway to do its level best—better than that, if possible!—to get Northwest service men home from camps and separation centers for Christmas.

But, please do not count on miracles, for the nation's railways face today the worst passenger travel congestion they've ever had!

You are entitled to know why train travel, particularly on Western lines, now is difficult and will continue to be so for at least 60 days.

The principal reason is the accelerated rate at which service men are being returned to the United States. This month more than 1 million men will be landed at Pacific and Atlantic ports. And, at least 90 per cent of them must and will be moved homeward by railway.

There are two "rubs" in today's train travel picture. One is that railways have been called on to handle a vastly-increased volume of military traffic at a time when thousands of civilians, including students and teachers, plan to go home by train for the year-end holidays.

The other—and most important—is that there just isn't enough railway passenger equipment to meet both military and civilian demands.

The railways tackled their job in World War II with one-third fewer passenger cars than they had in 1918. Construction of new passenger equipment by and for railways was not permitted after 1941. Great Northern has had five streamlined trains on order since 1943, but delivery cannot be made in time to relieve the present congestion.

Nevertheless, demobilization transport must go ahead, and toward getting it done, railways are assigning three-fourths of all sleeping car space to troop movements. In addition, Great Northern and other Western lines have withdrawn hundreds of sleepers, coaches and baggage cars from regular service for special troop train operations. In a single day more than 20 special troop trains are being moved on Great Northern alone. These include trainloads of eastbound service men and unoccupied equipment moving west to pick up troops awaiting transportation.

It's going to be difficult to obtain train accommodations to and from almost anywhere in the next several weeks. Leaving would-be passengers behind makes no one happy, and crowded conditions on trains are not conducive to comfort.

Public transportation is Great Northern's business. During the travel congestion period, which already has begun, the railway will provide civilians the most effective service possible while we finish our war job—the job which won't be finished until the last man is home.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

To Save Money, Mix Your Cough Relief at Home

So Easy! No Cooking. Quick Relief.

Even if you're not interested in saving good money, you surely want a really effective relief for coughs due to colds. So try mixing it yourself, in your kitchen, and be ready for a surprise.

It's so easy to mix, a child could do it. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle. Then fill up with your syrup. This makes a pint—about four times as much for your money. It tastes good—children really like it. It lasts a family a long time, and never spoils.

But what you'll like most is the way it takes right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes irritation, and helps clear the air passages. Eases soreness, and let's you sleep. You'll say you've never seen its superior.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Try it, and if you're not really delighted, your money will be refunded. —Adv.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

A synthetic rubber developed entirely from petroleum gases is now being used in the manufacture of truck-tire inner tubes. Called Butyl, the new synthetic provides an extra margin of safety against puncture, holds air much longer.

Since Pearl Harbor, the United States has produced as much synthetic rubber as the entire world's supply of natural rubber for the 18 years from 1900 through 1918.

The rubber industry's prewar capacity of 65,000,000 tires a year has been increased to more than 110,000,000 civilian tires annually.

White Furs for Day and Evening Are Topflight Style This Season

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT'S topflight fashion to wear white furs this winter. Nor is the flattery of this season's lovely furs to be enjoyed only by the favored few who can afford luxury at any price. No indeed! The good news is that this year the collections include most stunning coats of smart white furs, available within a modest budget. Furthermore, these are styled for practicality and multiple service that tunes them to both day and evening wear.

With the young set it is the moderately priced white fur coat that is stealing the show. The campus crowd and the teen-age group are going all out for the white fur coat as a grandstand fashion. With these they wear simple little hats of matching fur, often carrying an intriguing muff to match—and the result is a "perfect picture."

Instead of being exclusively an evening item, this season's white fur coat is styled also to go places as a daytime wrap with dress-up dresses or to serve as a winter sports fashion. It may also be worn as a southern resort wrap, and for indoor wear with winter slacks the white fur jacket is the last word in chic.

Coats designed for daytime wear include a belted full length model of snow-white nutria that is perfect for grandstand wear. You will also find many belted tunic models of shorter length in the new collections, featuring high collars. The better coats are made up in white broadtail, but the college girl specials are in a variety of lesser priced furs. The little jackets in white lapin come within a modest budget, and they are ever so charming and chic.

Ermine is as much beloved as ever. From the voguish little jacket of white fur with hat and muff to match, to wrap of regal splendor such as you see centered in the illustration, ermine plays an outstanding role. In this long Russian ermine cape the skins are worked in graceful slanting lines. This model interprets fur luxury at its highest peak. Such is the way of smart white furs this winter. They run the gamut from inexpensive practical types to furs of fabulous value.

White Russian broadtail is a close second to ermine in the season's furs. In the picture the tailored model shown to the left tunes to daytime wear. Smart details include an easy gathered blouse effect, raglan sleeves with cuffs, an attached belt that ties at the front together with a shapely and comfortable collar. This lady of high fashion wears a halo of matching fur.

Not all the glamour of white fur is told in daytime coats and evening wraps. The costume highlighted with white fur accents is a favorite theme with fashion. The flattery of white fur is found at its best in the charming hats and neckwear ensembles of white fur women are wearing with their dark coats and dresses. White fur is contributing glamour galore to the winter fashion picture in way of ensembles that include hat and muff or hat and deep detachable cuffs, such as you see pictured.

Your simplest black frock topped with a chic little hat of white fur and complemented with a pert bow of matching fur caught to the shoulder or neckline of your frock, with a white muff for glamour plus, will call forth admiration wherever you go, be it the matinee, the cocktail hour or for smart restaurant wear.

Satin Bolero

This long slim bodied evening gown in black crepe by Jo Copeland has sequined satin straps over the shoulders to match the chartreuse bolero. It is charming with the bolero on and it is charming with it off. With the bolero it is less formal, but when extreme decolletage tunes to greater formality this dress sans bolero is most beguiling.

New Print Dresses Have Wider Skirts

Soon there will be gay prints peeping out from under milady's fur coat. There are surprises ahead in regard to the new print frocks. The news is as much in the way they are styled as it is in the prints themselves. Guess what! New print frocks are arriving that have real sleeves, the full gathered-in-at-the-top kind we used to wear. Skirts are wider too with special attention given to shirred and pleated hip treatments. All of which means that a new silhouette is on the way. It's news also that the two-piece print suit will stage a big come-back. The jackets have peplums accenting trim waistlines. As to the prints themselves, new patternings depict scenic effects, some of Chinese inspiration, others show marine views with picturesque ships. Stunning florals contrast bright color against a black background.

Knit Wear of All Sorts Is Being Bought in Volume

With the "keep warm" idea in mind there is much buying of knitted items. Most wanted items include bed socks, knit slips, pajamas, bed jackets, shawls, shoulderettes, fancy mittens often ensembled with wool knit headwear. As to sweaters, the demand is limitless.

Woolen things are lovelier than ever this year, in many dainty pastel shades. Designs are intriguing.

Velveteen Hats and Bags

Most exciting because of their clever styling and delectable colors are the new hat and bag sets made of handsome velveteen. The hats are of last minute styling that accent the new tall crowns, some shirred, others smooth-covered or draped. The bags take on the "new look" of soft bulk and rounded corners.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Spare that brassiere by washing it after each day or two of wear. 'Twill last longer, fit better.

What do you see in the woods?

Remember the old saying about the man who "couldn't see the forest for the trees"? Lots of people are like that. All they see is trees. Others look at the forest and see it filled with books, magazines, newspapers. They see the raw materials of many great industries which depend on pulpwood, such as rayon and plastics. They see cartons and boxes, and many other products manufactured from pulpwood.

They see jobs and wealth. Security for the workers and prosperity for the entire community. And if this forest wealth is properly harvested, it will increase in value in the years to come.

Let's take another look at our woods. Let's look at the trees and see the opportunities that lie within.

Merry Christmas

THE FINEST GIFT OF ALL

There's joy in Christmas gifts bought with loving care and wrapped in their shining tinsel trappings. But the finest gift, this Christmas, has a price too great to measure and is wrapped in all the glory of the most hopeful Christmas in years. It is peace at last . . . and a Merry Christmas wish from heart to heart across the length and breadth of a happy America. And so we join the chorus with the warm, familiar words . . . old as Christmas and yet always new . . .

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO YOU—AND ALL THE JOYS OF A HAPPY HOLIDAY SEASON.

FITGER Duluth • FLECKENSTEIN Faribault • GLUEK Minneapolis • GRAIN BELT Minneapolis
HAMM St. Paul • HAUENSTEIN New Ulm • JORDAN Jordan • KATO Mankato • KIEWEL Little Falls
ROYAL BOHEMIAN Duluth • SCHELL New Ulm • SCHMIDT St. Paul

MERRY CHRISTMAS

WHAT two words in the human tongue are more heart-warming than those! They not only represent a friendly greeting, but in them are summed up the whole spirit of the Yuletide—brightness and laughter, joy of living and joy of giving, health and happiness, peace on earth and good will to all men.

It is a greeting which we will hear in this community of ours during these happy days of the Christmas season. We will hear it on our streets, in our stores, along our country roads and in our homes. For ours is a friendly community and nowhere is that friendly greeting more sincere. It is not possible, however, for each of us to say "Merry Christmas" to everyone and thus complete the happy circle of Yuletide good cheer.

But there is one who has that rare privilege, one who has been a welcome visitor at the firesides of the homes in this community throughout the year and who now claims the right to be the first to wish you joy at this joyous time. That one is your Home Paper.

So your Home Paper carries from you to all the community and from all the community to you, this friendly greeting:

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

GREETINGS

Get Your Superphosphate

Farmers interested in obtaining government superphosphate for application under the 1946 AAA program should notify the Marshall County ACA committee immediately stated A. E. Strandquist, member, by informing us of the tonnage desired and the place from which they wish to obtain it.

Several carload lots are expected in the very near future with destinations covering almost the entire county with sidings situated on the Great Northern and Soo railways.

The material being shipped is 20 per cent superphosphate and will cost the farmer $29.00 per ton. A deposit of $13 per ton is required upon delivery of the material, with a soil building credit earning of $16.00.

Due to the shortage of storage facilities, it is hoped farmers will be able to accept it direct from the car, stated Mr. Strandquist, rather than have us locate storage space and reallocate it next spring.

Glittering Embroidery on Wool Highlights Winter Fashions

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Striking evidence that fashion is in a mood for elegance is seen in the rich embroidery with glitter accent that is being so lavishly employed by designers this season throughout the mode.

It seems, this year, that everything that goes to make up milady's costume that can be embroidered is being embroidered with emphasis on glitter accent. The glitter embroidery craze is not missing a trick in adding the glamour touch to the current fashion picture. Even the simple daytime felt hat takes on a jeweled or sequin-embroidered wide ribbon band. Gloves, bags, belts, head bands, evening slippers, sweaters, scarves and sash ends all carry the news that a craze for rich embroidery is sweeping throughout all fashionland.

Rich be-jeweled and glitter embroidery done on soft beautiful wool fabric is the super idea with designers this season. Many of the handsomest evening coats brought out this season are of black or colorful wool enriched with exquisite embroidery done in metal thread and multi-color yarns highlighted with glitter accent on sequins, jet beadwork and other sparkle decor. The coats for the most part are fingertip or three-quarter length, in graceful soft lines. Some have yokes of radiant embroidery or sleeves or decorative border treatment. These lovely coats with the "new look" are regarded as topflight fashion this winter.

There's intrigue too in the little wool jackets now so fashionable, that make embroidery their theme. They are as practical as they are attractive for they are designed for many purpose wear. They are charming to wear with "at home" slack suits, adding a dressy note in that they are so designfully worked with sequins and metal thread stitchery. The theme is sometimes elaborated with hand-painted motif and altogether these jackets of wool in delectable colors with their whimsical glitter decor have become a necessary luxury in the well-equipped wardrobe. Slip one of these little jacket charmers over your simple black crepe dress, add a jeweled belt and you will be prettily dressed for theater, for afternoon musicales, the cocktail hour or smart restaurant wear.

The season's trend to elegance is also reflected in stunning dinner and theater gowns styled of exquisite wools such as, for instance, a bare-shouldered gray wool dinner dress elaborated with two huge bow-knot motifs, one at the left shoulder, the other at the right hip, formed of sequin encrusted soutache embroidery.

Sheer wool in a specially dyed soft new bluebird shade is the fabric choice for the very lovely theater frock to the left in the illustration. It is accented with bluebirds of blue sequins and tiny jewels which flash brilliantly across the bodice. This beautiful gown by Kiviette is outstanding in that it demonstrates the fact of a distinctively refined handling of the glitter note. This restrained use of glitter is characteristic of the better fashions all the way through this season.

To the right, note the adorable little cozy wool jacket with its rich decor done in hand-painted design punctuated with gay embroidery that sparkles with sequins. Jeweled buttons add perfect glamour accent. For "comfy" home wear Tina Leser teams this glamour jacket with her noted all-in-one pajama outfit which is made of a suede-processed cloth of rayon. The soft cowl neckline is a perfect setting for jewels. Gold kid straps accent the self-belt. This exotic pajama outfit comes in delectable color combinations such as soft pink jacket with copper color pajamas, mint jacket with mint pajamas or white jacket with shell pink pajamas. The adorable jacket makes a perfect "separate" to wear with various costumes.

Velvet Jumper

Norwegian in motif is this dressy little jumper with perky tiny handmade flowers made of felt in multicolors. The bib and shoulders are piped in gay colored felt, matching the felt string tie which gives the bib a basque effect.

Light Fur Trimming Will Be Spring Vogue

Toppers trimmed with light furs appear in resort fashions. This may be taken as a forerunner of what is to be with the first signs of coming spring. High shade woolens of soft pastels take hemline fur borders. The dainty fur is also used in tuxedo bandings and the wide-cuff fur trim is very smart. The new toppers favor deep armhole cuts. Many of these smartly styled toppers have belts that are detachable so that one can have a close or swinging silhouette. Champagne muskrat is one of the popular light furs used as smart trim for these attractive toppers. A more generous use of fabric is seen in toppers of the future. Many of them will be cut along circular lines that give a dashing cape swing. The wools that are being made up in resort coats and suits are in striking new colors, outstanding among which are the smart taupe browns that are so good-looking. Bright red and electric blue, and a burnt sienna shade called Indian copper, also light beiges and grays are favorites.

Gold Costume Jewelry Is Worn With Black Ensembles

Fashion declares in favor of richly wrought gold bracelets and necklaces to be worn with black costumes. The gold and black vogue is interpreted in versatile ways, one of the most effective being in the use of gold buttons on simple afternoon frocks. A quiet but impressive note of class is achieved.

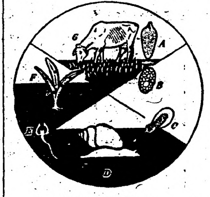
Cattle Liver Fluke Cause of Large Loss

Life Cycle of Public Enemy No. 1 Described

Liver fluke, those small, flat, leaf-like worms, are proving among the most injurious parasites of cattle in the United States.

Flukes produce serious diseases in man and animals in various parts of the world, but fortunately the most harmful species do not occur in this country. In the United States the liver flukes commonly parasitize cattle, sheep and goats and may also occur from time to time in horses, swine and other animals.

The flukes can be destroyed effectively and economically with hexachloroethane, a synthetic drug. The drug should be prepared as an aqueous suspension and administered as a drench.



Fluke Life Cycle

The adult fluke (A) in the liver produces many eggs which are expelled to the outside with the droppings. The egg (B) develops in wet places on the pasture and a free-swimming larva (C) issues from each normally developing egg. The larva is attracted to certain aquatic snails (D) which it penetrates. After development in the snail, a new type of larva with a tail (E) emerges and settles on grass (F) or other objects in water and encysts there. Cattle grazing on contaminated pastures (G) swallow the encysted larvae with forage and water.

Save Tree Leaves for Planned Compost Pile

The experienced and practical farmer and gardener knows that leaves of shade and forest trees are a most abundant source of organic material, which he can use to grow better crops.

As soon as they are gathered they should be placed in piles, then packed down and watered. They are left in the piles to absorb moisture.

In late winter or early spring, the compost heap is built, scattering some lime and some high nitrogen complete fertilizer, such as 5-10-5 or 5-10-10, into the pile as it is built up. By late summer the leaves should be reasonably well rotted. The heap is then opened and the material put to use.

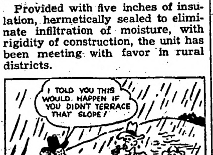
Freeze-Locker

Harderfreeze, a product of the Harder Refrigerator corporation, Cobleskill, N. Y., will provide a home freezing unit and locker plant.

Provided with five inches of insulation, hermetically sealed to eliminate infiltration of moisture, with rigidity of construction, the unit has been meeting with favor in rural districts.



I TOLD YOU THIS WOULD HAPPEN IF YOU DIDN'T TERRACE THAT SLOPE!

Oil Extraction Rapid

The use of the Staley hexane extraction process for soybean oil has improved to such an extent that less than 1 per cent of the oil is left in the soybean meal, as compared with 4 per cent left by the expeller, or pressing method.

The hexane solvent method also results in production of soybean meal with 44 per cent or more protein content, 3 per cent more than when the oil is removed from the beans by the expeller method.

Household Hints

When washing, turn clothes with ties or sashes inside out before putting them into the washing machine.

That discouraged-looking veil can be freshened by pressing it between two pieces of brown paper with a warm iron.

A little kerosene put into the water when wiping up the kitchen linoleum will help loosen the dirt.

Keep spices covered or you'll give their tangy flavor to the cupboard instead of your cookery.

Put a fruit jar rubber under dishes you set directly on ice. The ring will stick to both ice and dish and hold it firmly in place.

Ash trays should be emptied and washed each night. Otherwise the house will have an unpleasant odor in the morning from the soiled trays.

Ever find yourself with one too many pies for the oven? Place a small jar or tin cup in the small space in the center of the oven on which place your extra pie. This raises it above the others, so you may bake all at one time. A good time-and-fuel-saving suggestion.

Credit Should Be Given Where Credit Is Due!

The Chinese tell a little story about a pauper couple that used to sleep under a bridge crossing the Yangtze river. Each night as they would go to sleep they would think over the day's activities.

One day the richest man in the town—the banker—was crossing the bridge, muttering to himself about his losses that day at the marketplace.

The pauper's wife heard the muttering, and said to her husband, "Fortunate indeed are those of us without financial worries."

Her husband felt elated and, throwing out his chest, said: "Yes, and to whom do you owe your fortunate position?"

THERE is no trick in matching up an ill-assorted lot of furniture for the children's room. The set shown here is typical. This, with his Scottie and wooden sword, is one of half a dozen appealing children to be painted on drawer fronts and panels. All you have to do is to trace the figures, flowers and ribbons as indicated on the pattern; then follow the color guide, filling in flat tones without any shading.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

A recent survey reveals that 84.5% of the nation's post-war travelers will prefer to use automobiles as their method of transportation.

It is expected that repair bills on future cars may be reduced by the use of a number of synthetic rubber parts.

Average passenger tire cost per 1000 miles of travel has been reduced from $2.35 to 65c during the last 25 years.

It's the air in a tire that carries the load and not the tire itself. Too little air pressure may result in fabric breaks or uneven tread wear.

In 45 years the American automotive industry has produced 88 million motor vehicles.

"VEST POCKET" POWER

ELECTRONIC experts have lately outdone themselves in giving us "vest pocket" reception. They have made possible hearing aids easily concealed in the palm of the hand. They have designed radios the size of a cigarette case. Now they give us a postwar edition of the amazing Handie-Talkie—famed GI sending and receiving set. A key to these accomplishments is "Eveready" batteries. One of these storerooms of power, the "Mini-Max" battery, weighs only 1½ ounces. TURKEY MARKETING served up Co-op style

● Did you know the same cooperative merchandising operations that have proved to be so successful in the dairy business are also applied to turkeys?

● The Land O'Lakes turkey pool takes farmers' turkeys into the biggest eastern markets, sells them under the established and popular Land O'Lakes trade name, and controls the marketing process all the way to the front steps of the grocer.

● As in dairy products, the potential benefits of such a controlled operation belong to the farmers—and nobody else.

Farmers Have Less to Worry Them This Time

Washington, D. C.—Farm prices stand at 206 per cent of the 1909-1914 average—higher than the prices of 1918—and will drop again but not as sharply as in 1921 because the Government is required by law to maintain support prices of at least 90 per cent of parity for two full calendar years following the year in which the war ends, The Department of Agriculture has announced.

The announcement indicates the farmer will not be a victim of a drop in prices similar to that which followed the last war in 1921 when prices hit the low of 115 per cent of the May, 1920, level which was 235 per cent of the 1909-1914 level. Thus the farmer will have more money than after the last war.

War Finance Committee officials said that in addition to the maintenance of the price level for two years, that non-farm families already have, and are accumulating, weekly savings through the Payroll Savings Plan of the War Finance Division of the Treasury. This, they claim is proof the non-farm front will be much better able to support itself than after the last war during the normal lull of reconversion. Buyers of farm products will have the money to buy, it was said, and farmers should avail themselves of the opportunity to acquire War Bonds during the Victory Loan so as to have the money with which to modernize and handle the non-farm market demands that will be backed with cash to pay sustained prices during the two years after fighting ceases.

The Payroll Saving Plan has sold $18,000,000,000 in War Bonds to wage earners, that great bulk of non-farmers who will, if need be, enjoy the fruits of their savings in the reconversion period and have the cash with which to support themselves.

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson adds that "prosperity of the farm depends primarily on purchasing power in the city."

100,000 Fire at Thief River

The feed and seed plant of the Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., at Thief River Falls was destroyed Saturday night by fire that resulted in damage estimated at $100,000 by Stuart McLeod, general manager of Land O' Lakes there.

The fire department was called about 9 p. m. after smoke and flames were seen in the elevator, but was unable to get at the source of the fire. Water was still being poured in the ruins Monday morning. The blaze could be seen from Holt.

Heaviest loss was the seed cleaning equipment and the large stocks of seed and feed on hand. Warehouses directly south of the main plant, containing considerable stock, were saved but part of the stock was damaged by water.

The elevator, on a Soo Line siding across from the Soo passenger depot, was purchased by the Land O' Lakes from the Peavey Elevator Co. in June, 1943.

The large plant was used for cleaning seed and mixing feed, and housed in the building at the time of the fire was a considerable amount of feed that farmers had not yet called for.

Records and accounts of the company were lost when the safe in the office exploded during the intense heat.

The plant, under the management of Alton Olson in the seed department and Harry Peterson in the feed division, employed 12 men.

Jungle Fever

When a man loses the right use of his mind, his friends put him in a state institution, but when a whole people start turning imbecile they commit themselves to the tender mercies of government. In one sentence, that's what I think about the so-called Full Employment Bill, already passed by the Senate and scheduled for early consideration by the House.

If our congressmen fasten upon the Federal government an obligation to provide jobs for everybody, they will be saying, "We represent a commonwealth of incompetents, unable to take care of themselves." America's vast resources, her enormous productive capacity, trained minds, skilled hands and huge markets will amount to nothing if our people lose their initiative, self-reliance and self-starters.

Men Have Spines

God in His wisdom metes out privileges and duties in proportion. No man and no nation can revel long in liberty and shirk the responsibilities that go with it, for human freedom is a gift from above. Much responsibility for the future of mankind hangs on the American people; we may well be thankful that our liberties are many. This is no time to recline in a political armchair among the old world's decadent tribes.

What supports the idea that government ought to (or even can) guarantee jobs for everybody? Answer: Warped notions brought to America by immigrants from the backward lands of Europe and Asia. Many such "cases" can't quit thinking that citizens must serve the state instead of the state serving the citizens. They actually seem to imagine that rulers think better than other people.

Poisonous Insects

Foreign philosophies, spread quietly through schools, playgrounds and market places, have poisoned the minds of American boys and girls under their parents' very eyes. It is a quiet enemy that long has demanded attention. . . . When our soldiers landed on Guadalcanal they met Japanese attack from land, water and sky, and they overcame it. But the tropical bugs did more damage, quietly.

Insects with bills like hypodermic needles, hardly big enough to see without a glass, seemed like irritants of small consequence. But they turned out to be more dangerous than the man-size enemies. Their noise was small, their wounds were negligible, but they planted a venomous pestilence in the blood stream, extravagant of life and ruinous to the morale of those who survived.

There is a Cure

How parallel to Guadalcanal has been the defense of representative, constitutional government on the home front. Deafening weapons of the Axis powers failed to destroy this republic. American ingenuity, sharpened by hope of achievement; American skill, whetted by ambition to advance; America's power to produce, fused in the furnace of open competition: These won the noisy battles.

But the same things will not cure the plague of poisoned minds. That's another problem. Helplessness, dependence on the state and false philosophies are like tropical fever —in the blood. If it has penetrated all the way to Capitol Hill, if we enact federal law encouraging the malady, then the case is serious indeed. The fate of the Full Employment Bill will determine whether the United States is becoming imbecile.

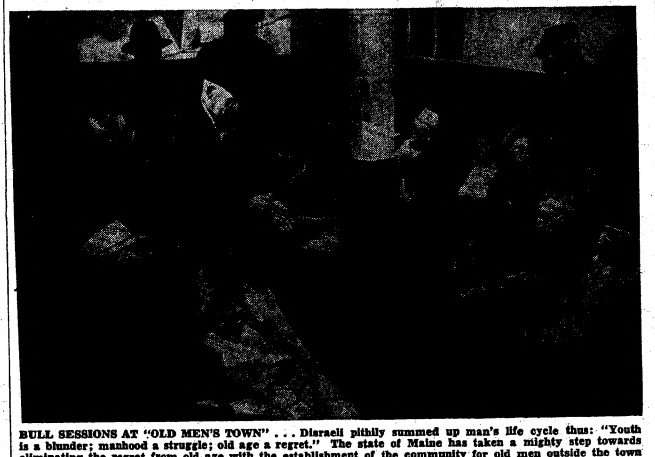
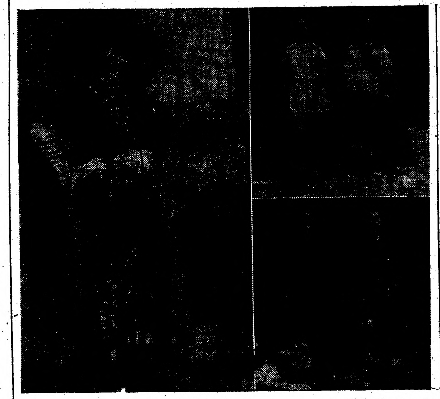
RUBBER G.I. FOOLS ENEMY . . . A "Long Tom," made of rubber, weighing only 250 pounds and registered under the nomenclature of pneumatic gun, 155-mm., M.I., is an example of deception and camouflage used by the U. S. army in World War II. Insert shows a rubber soldier, attired in G.I. clothing, as he stands on guard. The army also used rubber decoy LCT boats, rubber jeeps and tanks to draw enemy fire.



BULL SESSIONS AT "OLD MEN'S TOWN" . . . Disraeli pithily summed up man's life cycle thus: "Youth is a blunder; manhood a struggle; old age a regret." The state of Maine has taken a mighty step towards eliminating the regret from old age with the establishment of the community for old men outside the town of Jefferson, near Augusta. The rocking-chair statesmen are prepared to give opinions on everything from OPA to the atomic bomb and many verbal battles result nightly.



FASHIONS OF BY-GONE DAYS . . . Homecoming at Flora McDonald college, Red Springs, N. C., featured the costumes of other days, as well as the latest in modern styles. A riding skirt, built for side-saddle riding, was among the creations. The tennis scores must have been terrific with the 15-pound skirts.

Lady Aris is so uppity that she actually turns her back on anything as lowly as a mouse. She was entered in the show by Mrs. Sidney F. After mashing potatoes, put them in a double boiler over hot water and set it on back of the stove. They stay hot and fluffy. This saves much time when serving a meal, and is especially helpful where different members of the family eat at different hours.

To save the last bit of shortening that clings to a jar, try this trick. Pour water just ready to boil into the container and melt the shortening. By the time the water has cooled, the shortening will have come to the top, congealed, and be ready to remove with little trouble.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

The majority of Army surplus tires are to be allocated among states, cities, counties and federal agencies, and then to veterans.

The great battery of synthetic rubber plants erected during the war cost approximately $700,000,000.

More than 30,000 synthetic rubber compounds were prepared during the war, about 500 will have peacetime uses.

The heaviest single load ever moved on pneumatic tires was 300 tons and for a secret military project; equipment was carried on a huge trailer having 64 wheels shod with B. F. Goodrich truck tires.

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

A VERY important social season, this. With holiday festivities and other midwinter gala events crowding one after another on the present program, comes the "big moment" for gay and flattering party frocks. In a young girl's wardrobe of pretty-pretty "date" and dance frocks, there is always room for one more. Especially is it true this winter, when the homecoming of men from the services is bringing about an exciting new urge among the fair sex to dress up and look one's most attractive self.

Then too, members of the teenage group who have been spending their holiday vacation at home will be wanting to have at least one knockout new dress to "show off" when they go back to their respective colleges and schools. It's a simple matter to make this dream dress come true just by choosing the season's favorite dress-up fabric, taffeta, and putting the sewing machine to work.

One reason that girls who have learned or are learning to "make their own" at their local sewing center are all-enthusiasm over crisp, rustling taffeta is that they find it so easy to work with they can whip up an elegant little frock in double quick time. Now that the gadgets and attachments on modern sewing machines perform almost miracles in way of shirring, ruffling and tucking, it is becoming a hobby with ambitious girls everywhere to learn to sew. The more they see what charming clothes they can turn out at comparatively low cost, the more intrigued they become with the idea of taking advantage of the endless opportunities offered in local sewing centers and sewing classes held in most of the big stores.

A gay young frock for the slim-waisted is shown to the right in the illustration. It is made of vari-colored striped taffeta combined with stark black crepe. The striped fabric is used for the bodice with its saucy peplum that juts out crisply over the hips. Briefed shoulder sleeves are shirred into staccato fullness. The bodice stripes below the V-neckline accent and dramatize the styling of this most attractive bodice top. The slim straight skirt is made of black crepe. You will find this a most flattering little frock for most any dress-up occasion.

The frock to the left is a youthful model of green taffeta banded with color-matched velvet. It can easily be stitched up by the girl who has learned to sew, or even by the novice that has taken only a few lessons in the art of sewing. The deep round neckline band holds little shirrings in place at the front, while cluster shirrings adorn the skirt front below the snug-fitting bodice. Wide velvet bands form the shoulder cap sleeves for this charming little gown.

Taffeta is indeed a magic fabric in more ways than one as proved by how successfully it is used in every possible mood this season. For instance, designers are turning out most provocative little frocks of black taffeta that are made to look definitely young because of their ingenue styling with myriads of sprightly little ruffles about girlish off-shoulder necklines and abbreviated sleeves, some trimmed with lingerie beading run through with tiny velvet ribbon. The tiny-waist bodice and full floor-length full-skirted evening gown of gay plaid or stripe taffeta makes a perfect formal for the young girl, as does also the long, full taffeta stripe or plaid skirt with a black jersey top and a dramatic belt. And here's the latest—they are making de luxe tea aprons of handpainted taffeta.

Sequined Ascot

The now-so-fashionable sparkling sequin-embroidered ascots that are contributing so much of chic and charm to milady's costume this winter are perfect little wonder workers. With their glitter and their rich coloring they highlight even the simplest costume with indescribable new beauty and glamour. The lovely sequin-embroidered jersey ascot pictured will prove a treasure in any collection of prettifying accessories. This beautiful sparkling and dramatic Echo scarf is available in black, blue or white with multi-color sequins.

Winter Sportswear Made of Mouton Fur

Something new is happening in the sportswear realm this winter. It's the use of the now-so-popular mouton fur for after-skiing and skating costumes. A stunning skating outfit highlights a yellow wool dress with a peplum of mouton fur together with a short cape and hood in picturesque Crusader style. Featured for a skating costume is a mouton short jacket with matching fur beret, worn with a Kelly green swing skirt, bordered with the same fur. A weskit and tailored slacks of fur present a practical and good-looking outfit for "after-ski" relaxation. Other items created of fur include short capes, jackets, boxy coats with matching berets and fur-topped mittens. Bright crochet or knit togs present many new and fascinating ideas. A wide shawl-like scarf is crocheted of white or bright-color angora wool with long fringe across each end. Appliqued above the fringe are crochet flowers done in bright colored yarn. Beret and mittens to match make a charming threesome.

Pajama Suits of Red Rayon 'Comfy' for Sleep, Lounge

Novel, practical, "comfy" are bright red pajama suits for sleep or lounge wear. They are tailored to a nicety with long-sleeved blouse top. Being suitable for sleeping and lounging they have a dual personality which makes them very practical. Bold red rayon sports material makes them unusual and likable. They radiate cheer and warmth and are really very smart looking.

LITTLE Sue Simmons goes into violent action in her very first picture — shoots a rattlesnake in Universal's "Frontier Gal"; when a child actress begins this way there's no telling what she'll do when she's grown up. The picture sort of pokes fun at the usual type of Western. Rod Cameron has three fights, two with men and one with Yvonne de Carlo. Yvonne slapped him 300 times, by actual count, as hard as she could, but you'll see only 30 wallops; they shot the fight 10 times. Cameron lost 10 pounds before the picture was finished, though he's a husky guy; he worked as a sand hog under the Hudson river, as a construction laborer and as an engineer before he went into the movies.

Back in the early days of the movies, Elaine Williams' mother was offered a contract by the Essanay company; had to turn it down because she was only 15. So when Elaine was 15 she stepped out, and won the title of Miss Wisconsin. She sang with bands, got her radio start at WHBY in Appleton, Wis., her home town. Eventually she reached New York where she's been on "Crime Doctor" for a year.

Twentieth Century - Fox wanted Jack Smith, who's heard on CBS Mondays through Friday from coast to coast. Wanted him badly enough to offer him a contract calling for $2,000 a week. Smith turned it down—said he'd rather remain in the East.

It's hard on Loren Tindall; like most navy veterans, he'd like to get out of uniform, but he's been discharged for a year now, and RKO's given him one naval picture after another; three of them altogether. He's playing his third in "Till the End of Time," produced by Dore Schary. In "Over 21," with Irene Dunne, he was a navy lieutenant; he was a submarine crewman in "Out of the Depths."

"The Strange Love of Martha Ivers" stands between the Robert Taylors and the long vacation they'd planned to take as soon as he was discharged. Taylor and the armed forces parted company six months sooner than he'd expected, and Barbara Stanwyck's working in the picture. She says he looks wonderful.

Metro's losing no time on that picture based on the life of Jerome Kern. Judy Garland and Robert Walker will be starred. Van Heflin has the role of Kern's confidant, Angela Lansbury's an English comedy star.

Connie Haines, singer on the Abbott and Costello programs over NBC, recently went out in the harbor to sing for the avengers of Bataan, the famed 30th division. Unlike some singers who've stopped since the war ended, Connie goes right on singing for the servicemen. Once a week she goes to Terminal island, San Pedro, to greet returning troop ships.

Elyse Knox has been set for the feminine lead in Monogram's "Joe Palooka, Champ." This marks her return to the screen after a year's leave of absence during which her daughter, Sharon Kristan Harmon, was born. The baby's father, Capt. Tommy Harmon, famous football player, has returned to Hollywood to continue his radio sports commentaries.

*

Richard Quine, Metro contract player and husband of Susan Peters, has doffed his coast guard uniform and been assigned the romantic lead in the forthcoming "But Not Goodbye."

ODDS AND ENDS

If you ever hear Susan Allen singing "No Can Do" on Sammy Kaye's "Sunday Serenade," you'll find that she's putting her heart into it—her father wrote it. . . . Jackie Cooper's wife June Horne, has been given a role in Warner Bros.' "The Verdict," starring Sydney Greenstreet. . . . Helen Walker, one of the stars of Paramount's "People Are Funny," has almost as many freckles as Katherine Hepburn and Myrna Loy, Hollywood's most be-freckled stars. . . . Ronald Reagen gets the lead in Warner's "Stallion Road."

Ever Try Making Cough Syrup In Your Kitchen?
Quick Relief. No Cooking. Easy!

If you've never tried mixing your own cough medicine, you've missed a lot. It's no trouble—needs no cooking—and gives you about four times as much cough syrup for your money. You'll say it beats anything you ever tried for coughs due to colds. And here's how it's done—

Make a plain syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until it is dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from your druggist. Put this into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a pint—a family supply. Tastes fine and never spoils. Children love it.

And as for results, you've never seen anything better. It goes right to work on the cough, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritation, and helping clear the air passages. You will like it for its results, and not merely for the money it saves.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.—Adv.

Rail Quiz

When was the first Pullman sleeping car built and placed in service?

In 1858-59, George M. Pullman, a young Chicago contractor, converted two passenger coaches of the Chicago & Alton Railroad into sleeping cars at the railway company's shops in Bloomington, Illinois. The first of these cars made its initial trip from Bloomington to Chicago September 1, 1859. Mr. Pullman regarded the converted passenger coaches merely as experiments, and at Chicago in 1864 he began building the first real Pullman sleeping car. Up to that time the largest sum ever spent for a railway passenger coach was $5,000. Fully equipped, Pullman's first sleeper, the "Pioneer," completed and placed in service in 1865, cost $20,178.

Tommy and Sis, They Can't Miss

Through his profits as a junior street salesman of a Kansas newspaper, nine-year-old Tommy Jovalis is the proud possessor of a $100 and a $50 War Bond. But he doesn't own them alone. He asked the man at the post office to make them out in his name with his two-year-old sister, Frances, as co-owner. He presented them to her on their joint birthday last month.

Tommy has been "in business" since last July. Every afternoon after school, he plies his wares—up and down Kansas Avenue in Topeka.

"It was his own idea to save his money," according to his father. "As soon as he started, he began bringing his money home to his mother, and asked her to save it for him. He wanted to put it into War Bonds. He wanted to do something for his America."

Asked what he intended to use the bonds for, Tommy replied, "Some day I want to go to college, and I want Frances to go, too."

VICTORY LOAN

Farmers Have Less to Worry Them This Time

Washington, D. C.—Farm prices stand at 206 per cent of the 1909-1914 average—higher than the prices of 1918—and will drop again but not as sharply as in 1921 because the Government is required by law to maintain support prices of at least 90 per cent of parity for two full calendar years following the year in which the war ends, The Department of Agriculture has announced.

The announcement indicates the farmer will not be a victim of a drop in prices similar to that which followed the last war in 1921 when prices hit the low of 115 per cent of the May, 1920, level which was 235 per cent of the 1909-1914 level. Thus the farmer will have more money than after the last war.

War Finance Committee officials said that in addition to the maintenance of the price level for two years, that non-farm families already have, and are accumulating, weekly savings through the Payroll Savings Plan of the War Finance Division of the Treasury. This, they claim is proof the non-farm front will be much better able to support itself than after the last war during the normal lull of reconversion. Buyers of farm products will have the money to buy, it was said, and farmers should avail themselves of the opportunity to acquire War Bonds during the Victory Loan so as to have the money with which to modernize and handle the non-farm market demands that will be backed with cash to pay sustained prices during the two years after fighting ceases.

The Payroll Saving Plan has sold $18,000,000,000 in War Bonds to wage earners, that great bulk of non-farmers who will, if need be, enjoy the fruits of their savings in the reconversion period and have the cash with which to support themselves.

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson adds that "prosperity of the farm depends primarily on purchasing power in the city."

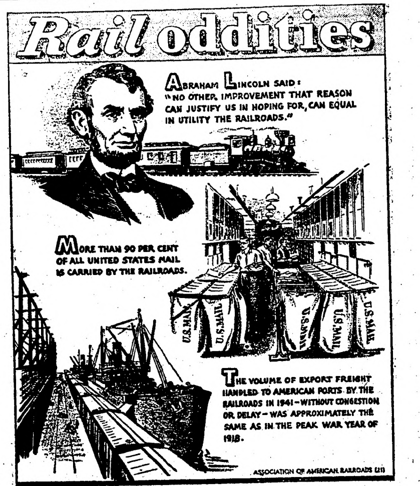
Rail oddities



Abraham Lincoln said: "No other improvement that reason can justify us in hoping for, can equal in utility the railroads."

More than 90 per cent of all United States mail is carried by the railroads.

The volume of export freight handled to American ports by the railroads in 1941—without congestion or delay—was approximately the same as in the peak war year of 1918.
